Donations into the TPC broke the previous months record for the 6th consecutive month, I want to thank you all for doing that, it gives us all hope for the future. Part 2 of the TPC video is now posted on our website thepeoplesclub.org for viewing, there was a slight interference with graphics and an updated version complete with missing graphics will be up shortly. I have spent this week preparing for a two part series which will go into the must listen to section, this will be explosive in scope and detail, with wide range implications due to the content contained within them, disclosure on a deeper level. Part 1 will be this Saturday at 3pm EST, don't miss it.

Predicted distractions to the virus now underway it seems, A gunman disguised as a policeman killed at least 18 people, including a female Royal Canadian Mounted Police (RCMP) officer, in the worst mass shooting in Canada's modern history. The 12-hour rampage started late on Saturday and ended with a car chase. Police said the suspect shot people at different locations in Nova Scotia, many of them randomly. He was killed in a confrontation with police. He was reported to have been driving what looked like a police car. At 11:40, the RCMP said that Mr Wortman had been taken into custody. It later emerged that he was killed after being intercepted by officers at a petrol station in Enfield, about 92km south of Portapique. Witnesses reported seeing a body lying on the ground. the fact they listed a cop, a teacher and a nurse as amongst the dead raises more suspicions

About half of Scotland's privately-run care homes have suspected coronavirus cases, according to industry leaders. Trade body Scottish Care said the impact of the virus on residents alongside staff absence levels of up to 30% had put homes under huge strain. There have been concerns over the number of deaths and adequate protective equipment at care homes. Fears have also been raised over a "postcode lottery" when it comes to testing care workers and residents. Scottish Care's members provide the vast majority of Scotland's 36,000 care home beds, with chief executive Dr Donald Macaskill saying the virus had left the sector facing an "unprecedented challenge on every front". The outbreak has killed several residents at care homes in Dumbarton, North Lanarkshire and Tranent in recent weeks.

President Donald Trump on Saturday defended his decision to fire the top watchdog of the U.S. Intelligence Community, saying Michael Atkinson did "a terrible job" in handling the whistleblower complaint that triggered an impeachment probe of Trump last year. "He took a fake report, and he brought it to Congress," Trump said during a briefing on the novel coronavirus pandemic. Late on Friday, the White House told Atkinson, the Intelligence Community's inspector general, that he would be terminated from his position in 30 days. He was a key figure in the run-up to impeachment, having found credible a complaint from a still-unnamed whistleblower within the administration that Trump abused his office in attempting to solicit Ukraine's interference in the 2020 U.S. election for his political benefit.

Some 900,000 female community health workers are on the frontline as part of India's battle against Covid-19. But they are poorly paid, ill-prepared and vulnerable to attacks and social stigma, reports BBC Marathi's Shrikant Bangale. "The value of our life is just 30 rupees [less than $1], according to the government," says Alka Nalawade, a community health worker in the western state of Maharashtra. "The government is paying us 1,000 rupees ($13; £10) a month for corona-related work," she adds. "That is 30 rupees daily for putting our life in danger." Ms Nalawade is among the state's 70,000 Ashas, short for Accredited Social Health Activists. She is a single mother, and has been doing this job for 10 years now in Pawarwadi village, where she lives. For one, they don't have the right gear, including masks or sanitiser. India is facing a severe shortage of personal protective equipment (PPE), and even doctors and nurses are unprotected.

Thyrocare, a private diagnostic laboratory in India, had just started testing for Covid-19, when the Supreme Court ordered all tests to be carried out free. "We thought the order would say the rich would pay, and the government would pay for the poor," says Arokiaswamy Velumani, Thyrocare's founder. At 4,500 rupees ($59; £47), it's not a cheap test. But the court did not clarify if and how private labs would be reimbursed. Panic stricken, some, including Thyrocare, put testing on hold. An anxious federal government petitioned the court to reconsider - which it did. According to the new order, issued on 13 April, the government will reimburse private labs for testing the 500 million people covered by a flagship public health insurance scheme. The rest would have to pay. But the volte-face sparked a bigger question: can India scale up testing for Covid-19 if it's not free?

US state department cables show that embassy officials were worried about biosecurity at a virus lab in Wuhan, China. The lab is in the same city where the coronavirus outbreak first came to the world's attention. And President Donald Trump has said the US government is looking into unverified reports that the virus escaped from a laboratory. So what, if anything, does this add to our understanding of the current pandemic? The Washington Post newspaper has reported information obtained from diplomatic cables. They show that, in 2018, US science diplomats were sent on repeated visits to a Chinese research facility. Officials sent two warnings to Washington about inadequate safety at the lab. The column says the officials were worried about safety and management weaknesses at the Wuhan Institute of Virology (WIV) and called for more help. It also claims diplomats were concerned the lab's research on bat coronaviruses could risk a new Sars-like pandemic. The newspaper says the cables fuelled more recent discussions in the US government about whether the WIV or another lab in Wuhan could have been the source of the virus behind the current pandemic. In addition, Fox News has also issued a report promoting the lab origin theory. The outbreak came to light late last year when early cases were linked to a food market in Wuhan. But despite rampant online speculation, there is no evidence of any kind that the Sars-CoV-2 virus (which causes Covid-19) was released accidentally from a lab.

China's economy shrank for the first time in decades in the first quarter of the year, as the virus forced factories and businesses to close. The world's second biggest economy contracted 6.8% according to official data released on Friday. The financial toll the coronavirus is having on the Chinese economy will be a huge concern to other countries. China is an economic powerhouse as a major consumer and producer of goods and services. This is the first time China has seen its economy shrink in the first three months of the year since it started recording quarterly figures in 1992.

President Trump on Friday announced a $19 billion program to help the struggling agriculture sector and distribute food to families in need amid the economic toll of the coronavirus pandemic. The U.S. Department of Agriculture (USDA) will purchase crops and livestock from farmers and ranchers facing a steep decline in orders and massive supply chain disruption. Funding will come from the $2.2 trillion coronavirus economic relief bill and separate USDA funds to support commodity prices. USDA will offer $16 billion in direct grants to farmers and ranchers to compensate for short-term drops in demand and oversupply driven by the coronavirus pandemic. The department will also purchase $3 billion in fresh produce, dairy, and meat to distribute to food banks, community organizations and charities.

That rise could be because Johns Hopkins University, which records the data, began to include deaths with a Covid-19 probable cause. Bristol-Myers Squibb, Johns Hopkins University and the Rockefeller Foundation are currently the subject of a $1 billion lawsuit from Guatemala for "roles in a 1940s U.S. government experiment that infected hundreds of Guatemalans with syphilis. A previous suit against the United States government was dismissed in 2011 for the Guatemala syphilis experiments when a judge determined that the U.S. government could not be held liable for actions committed outside of the U.S.

SUB INTEL Demonstrations calling on authorities to end the shutdown have occurred in Michigan, Ohio, North Carolina, Minnesota, Utah, Virginia and Kentucky. More demonstrations against the lockdown measures are planned, including in Wisconsin, Oregon, Maryland, Idaho and Texas.

Sir Richard Branson has pledged his luxury island resort as collateral to help get a UK government bailout of his stricken airline Virgin Atlantic. The billionaire Virgin Group boss said in an open letter to staff he was not asking for a handout, but a commercial loan, believed to be £500m. The airline's survival was in doubt, and his Necker Island home in the Caribbean could be mortgaged, he said. It comes as Virgin Group's airline in Australia faces administration. Both airlines have been hit hard by the global coronavirus lockdown, and Sir Richard has appealed to governments in both countries for help. However, he has been criticised for appealing for taxpayer aid rather than drawing on his huge wealth. Sir Richard's fortune is thought to be well over £4bn. The large US airline Delta owns 49% of Virgin Atlantic.

The first department store casualty of the coronavirus pandemic is here: Dallas-based luxury chain Neiman Marcus is expected to file for bankruptcy as soon as this week, according to a Reuters report. Sources familiar with the matter said the decision was due to the economic crisis caused by Covid-19. This isn't unexpected. After all 43 Neiman Marcus locations were temporarily closed on March 17, Bloomberg reported on March 23 that the company was in talks with lenders about filing for bankruptcy to ease its $4.3 billion in debt. It is also reportedly in the process of securing a loan from creditors for hundreds of millions of dollars to sustain operations throughout the bankruptcy proceedings. Meanwhile, a majority of its 14,000 employees are currently furloughed. Clothing-focused stores are under serious financial strain. Retail sales fell 8.7 percent in March, the largest drop ever on record, and clothing and accessory sales dropped most of all, by 50.5 percent. So far, Gap has canceled its orders for the fall season. JC Penney and Nordstrom are rumored to be filing for Chapter 11 if store closures extend into summer. Macy's has furloughed the majority of its nearly 130,000 employees. Rent the Runway laid off its entire in-store staff over Zoom. Almost overnight, the retail economy shifted from being about things people want to things that they need."

In light of what was said on this show and lack of funds for the plethora of govt funding programs being promised to the American people currently, and how quickly the small business loan fund ran out, quite why Mr. Trump is proposing more at this point I find both strange and alarming, particularly when ignoring the only solution to funding on the table. Waiting for Rothschild's and Black Sun to fund anything as akin to following the RV program, 13 years of stupidity waiting for that non-existent program to pay out, and the US Govt is appearing to do the same. The White House and Congress have reached a deal on a new funding package that will replenish a lending program meant to aid small businesses impacted by the novel coronavirus outbreak, two administration sources confirmed on Tuesday. The details of the package are forthcoming but the deal is expected to include $310 billion for the paycheck protection program, including setting tens of billions aside for smaller lenders, $25 billion for testing and $75 billion for hospitals, according to lawmakers. President Trump urged the House and Senate to pass the legislation in a pair of tweets Tuesday afternoon, can pass them all day, delivering them is a whole new matter and smacks of walking into a trap to me at this point in time.

The maze only has one escape exit I would suggest you head for there quickly before it is too late.

The 2020 Social Security and Medicare trustees reports released on Wednesday did not reflect projections from the coronavirus pandemic but showed continued long-term funding shortfalls for retirement, disability and seniors' healthcare benefits. Social Security, which pays retirement, survivor and disability benefits, can pay full scheduled benefits until 2035, the same year as projected in last year's report. Medicare's Hospital Insurance Trust Fund can pay scheduled in-patient hospital expenses until 2026, also the same as in last year's report.

President Trump to suspend all immigration into the U.S. temporarily to curb further spread of the coronavirus won't affect foreign employees working on farms, three industry sources familiar with the proposed measures told Politico. The Department of Homeland Security is reportedly still formulating the planned executive order, which Trump announced late Monday evening, while the Agriculture Department is working alongside the White House to clarify that farm workers could be exempt, a lobbyist said. This policy makes no sense whatsoever, most of the farmer workers come from poor financial and healthcare backgrounds, and have even less health care than the average American, which makes them more vulnerable to viruses and disease, does it not.

More jackass common core accounting it seems. Those funds should have gone largely to the public, it is in case people have forgotten the publics money they spend. Unless this government sorts itself out and quickly, my endorsement for the next election is vote for no one, none have currently been found as fit for the purpose.

The recent name change of the virus, which is now the second rename after it changed to Sars2 - covid 19, and now called novel coronavirus, so lets look at the word novel for some pointers shall we: novel, Intellectual property adjective Referring to that which is new and/or original—i.e., the invention must never have been made in public in any way, anywhere, before the date on which the application for a patent is filed.

The distance from Wuhan to Beijing is 655 miles, and to Shanghai 537 miles and yet neither are or were particularly affected by the virus, only Western countries mainly. Wuhan to California is 6800 miles and 7493 miles to New York, are they actually telling is this virus can travel over water for 7.5K miles and yet cant spread over land around 650 miles, is that what they are telling us? Lets put another thing into perspective shall we, even allowing for faking vast numbers of deaths and blaming it all on coronavirus, the portal people death toll with no proof I might add is 184k in the past 22 weeks and that is a pandemic. Yet during the same time period based on 3k African's dying each day from malaria related disease, their figure on just one continent, not globally is 462K, a total of 278K more, but theirs is not deemed a pandemic? Wake up people, 184K divided by 209 countries is 880 persons dying country on an average of 40 per week, not the 21K per week in Africa. #perspective.

The whole gist of the virus to me now is a desperate last act to stay in control of the planet by psychopaths, everything is and will collapse, and they are posturing to come him and save the day as our saviors, whilst rolling out the public one world government.

Final piece before we go into the intel is future thinking of what happens after the lockdown? More than 26 million Americans have filed for unemployment in the past five weeks - over 15% of the US workforce, and small businesses have been hit hard too - a $349bn loan programme for them ran out of money within two weeks. Has anybody thought of the prospects of what will unfold when the lockdown ends? will your jobs and companies still be there? why was and now is, so many retail shops going to the wall? will certain industries still exist? will people ever be the same? will things get a whole heap worse or better? Was this virus a cover story and delaying the inevitable as things were going to collapse with or without the virus? with the back drop of clowns having no apparent solutions to fix it? What it has shown is how incompetent all govts are, too busy appeasing lobbyists and the high end finance based groups and then you have Pelosi making twitter videos begging for $10 off of everyone because of nasty Republicans, and the question is, has Pelosi ever provided a single solution to fix this countries plethora of issues since being in office? A few made veiled comments last week about me being wrong about stimulus checks as a few people dotted around the country received theirs, one week later and we are still asking, where is the rest of the payments? has many received their unemployment checks either? where is that coming from? These are concerning times in the now, but I suspect too few have pondered on the lasting implications beyond the end of the lockdown, you all have a chance to ponder on it, and take measures to prepare yourselves accordingly.

INTEL There are mixed messages coming out of clowns now, of one group saying a pull back and other group looking to extend lockdown. its the ouroborus programs they are running on all levels now, and jackasses cant work out why nothing is working. They are losing it on all fronts now and becoming desperate, even to the point of some elements of Rothschild's and Black Sun groups working together to counteract the 3rd players in the game, oops.

One day this month there was suppose to be a ceremony based in Russia with Trump, Putin and other leaders where Trump was to be crowned to lead the New World Order, a week or so ago, we were notified of the changes and that Macron of France was now installed in lead role, which was confirmed in meeting with the Pope this week. Their plan in case people are not aware is one world government publically, they have already done it in private decades ago. One world currency which will be crypto, ran without banks only computers, phones and later microchips. The world of religion will be revamped, out will go Christians, Muslims, Buddhism and all religions will be wrapped into one world religion, the key to it all is the one main missing religion, Hebrew or better known as the Jewish religion, except it is not their religion either, but off world programs ran on humans.

The new narrative on the street is no longer Chinese heritage funds, They are creating royal lines of this and that and "castle funds, capsule funds, etc to generate income, that will fail also.

The Universal Council we have had confirms actually landed on Earth this past weekend, and went into discussions with the former controllers for the past 5 days. One of the proposals put forward was for them all to return to Source for healing, as their dark imbalance has gone too far to redeem. A renewed desire to push forward with the Earth Restoration plan put forward by our team is highly prevalent now within the discussions, and these relatively few M followers are holding everything and everyone up. It seems patience is running out with them and our message from last week was heard. The M followers now believe he is not even dead, and will not listen to The Council, The Draco Queen or anyone else, I request their removal of this planet once and for all, due to the scope of control here over all enforcement types required to deal with these psychopaths, the only choice is the Council has to remove them. This is in essence a hostile planetary takeover, done by the human breakaway groups in league with off world entities, and they are enhanced only by them selling out humanity for off world technology. Given it is a hostile takeover of over 99% of the people, the majority of which are bereft of any semblance of truth or knowledge, we are requesting access to a force group to deal with these psychopaths, given our militaries are all ran by jackasses who like children blindly follow orders and programs, that A: no longer exist and B. were designed to fail by the very dead guy they still like to follow. Fact.

OP-ED Now almost forgotten, the decade of the "Seventies" was a time of immense political upheaval, dirty tricks and incessant rumours of right-wing military Coup d'etats in leading western democracies. Amongst the long list of resulting casualties of this "decade of tension" were Britain's Prime Ministers: Harold Wilson and Ted Heath, Australia's Gough Whitlam, Sweden's Olof Palme, America's Jimmy Carter and France's Francois Mitterand. The more southern flanks of NATO's European axis: Portugal, Spain, Turkey and Greece converted rumour into chilling fact via the steel-blue glaze of gun-barrels. Italy, home of Pizza, the Pope, and Propaganda Due (P2) came in for its own brand of political fixit, courtesy of Uncle Sam's very own CIA. As the decade of the "eighties" slowly slipped above the now less than pink eastern horizon, right-wing beneficiaries of a co-ordinated international destabilisation programme gave their heartfelt thanks. Among them were Britain's Iron Lady, Margaret Thatcher - Madonna of the Armaments industry - and America's less brittle, and considerably less acute, Ronald Reagan - humble originator of the mega-tax-buck-swallowing SDI "Star Wars" programme and also, thus, a valued friend of the boys at Guns R Us International. These two decades saw a proliferation of right-wing, quasi official and secretive groups that coordinated intelligence, propaganda and undertook covert black-operations around the globe. One of the most shadowy of all is the “Pinay Cercle”, named after its founder Antoine Pinay, Premier of France in 1951. Known more simply as "Le Cercle" it is recognised as a more clandestine sister organisation to the already very secretive Bilderberg Group - a “behind-the-scenes ‘invisible’ influence” network. Both groups share a familiar membership which includes Henry Kissinger, Zbigniew Brzezinski and David Rockefeller. Each of these three luminaries of the international power network are, in addition to the foregoing, influential members of The Trilateral Commission and the Council for Foreign Relations as well as being regular attendees at Britain’s “Chatham House” - The Royal Institute of International Affairs - shadowy twin to America’s CFR. Antoine Pinay was extremely influential in Europe and the United States, where he had forged links with President Nixon. Pinay attended the Bilderberg inaugural meeting in Oosterbeek, Holland during May 1954. By 1969, Pinay together with Jean Violet, a Lawyer working for the French Intelligence Service SDECE, and Archduke Otto von Habsburg, heir to the Austrian throne, formed Le Cercle, and secretly began recruiting men of influence as members. The intention was to shift the political climate of Europe to the far right via a secretly financed campaign of propaganda, and to establish a private intelligence service that would work, unofficially, with the existing security apparatus of the west. Author Stephen Dorril also believes there are serpentine inter-connections between Le Cercle and the Gladio network, a “stay-behind anti communist” military guerrilla force set up by NATO’s Supreme Headquarters Allied Powers Europe (SHAPE) during the “fifties”, that was largely composed of ex Nazi’s. Le Cercle has a different flavour to Bilderberg, however, the latter is an important link to the overt “influence” organisations cited above and almost certainly focuses its efforts on the broader political issues, being careful to keep well-away from “direct actions”, Le Cercle has a much more “hands on” role. Interestingly, its membership is more heavily composed of serving or former members of various Intelligence Services, senior military officers as well as politicians, bankers and VIP’s with right wing connections. The “Cercle” was unknown until 1500 internal documents of the rightist (and Le Cercle funded) Institute for the Study of Conflict, were leaked to Time Out Magazine in 1975, subsequently the documents have gone missing. At the time ISC was headed by CIA agent and “Cercle” Chairman, Brian Crozier who was heavily involved in another covert action group known simply as “The 61.” Unknown to Crozier, Hans von Machtenburg (a pseudonym) a senior intelligence official of Germany’s Intelligence service, BND, (and a member of Crozier’s “61”) had been exchanging full reports on Crozier’s secret get-together’s with Hans Langemann, formerly a senior ranking officer of Germany’s Intelligence Service, the BND and latterly Head of Bavarian State Security. In a fit of depression, Langemann blew the whistle on a number of alarming and sinister conspiracies to the left wing German glossy magazine Kronket. Soon the story was picked up by Der Spiegel who featured it, one of Langemann’s more sensational reports, dated 1979, stated: Specific aims within this framework are to affect a change of government in the United Kingdom - accomplished, in West Germany - to defend freedom of trade and of movement and to oppose all forms of subversion including terrorism. In another secret memorandum dated 8th November 1979 and addressed "Personal for the state minister only", Langemann notes that "Crozier worked with the CIA for years." He concludes, therefore "that they are fully aware of his activities" and goes on to observe that Crozier "has extensive connections with members, or more accurately, with former members, of the most important western security and intelligence services." Further on he advises that Crozier, together with "Dickie Franks, Director of Britain's SIS, and Nicholas Elliot, a senior department head in MI6 "were recently invited to Chequers (the country home of the incumbent Prime Minister, in this case Margaret Thatcher) for a working meeting." Langemann continues: "It must therefore be concluded that MI6 is fully aware of, if not indeed one of the main sponsors of" Crozier's "diverse circle of friends in international politics..." Additional subjects covered in the Langemann papers include the "involvement of the main intelligence and security agencies both as information sources and as recipients for information in these institutions" as well as "undercover financial transactions for political aims" that would be utilised by conducting "international campaigns aiming to discredit hostile personalities or events," the "creation of a (private) intelligence service specialising according to a selective point of view" and the "establishment of offices under suitable cover each run by a coordinator from the central office. Current plans cover London, Washington, Paris, Munich and Madrid." The plans also called for "provision of contributions by certain well-known journalists in Britain, the US and other countries" and the organisation of "public demonstrations in particular areas on themes to be decided and selected." The Cercle and their Chairman, Crozier, clearly had lined-up a whole strategy of political "actions" that were not only known about, but approved by the western intelligence community, in addition to leading political figures including Prime Minister Thatcher and Presidential candidate Reagan. In his autobiography Crozier regales us with his repeat visits to the White House to meet senior administration figures, in 1980 he flew to California to meet Reagan and "brief him" on his network and to offer his services when he became President. Crozier stayed in close touch during the election with William Casey, Reagan's campaign chief, later appointed DCI of the Central Intelligence Agency. After Reagan's election victory he appointed Californian friend, William A. Wilson, to act as a his liaison with the Cercle and the related 61 group. The Cercle has intimate connections with a host of inter-locking right wing outfits including WACL, Heritage Foundation, Western Goals, ISC, Freedom Association, Interdoc, Bilderbergers, Propaganda Due (P2), Opus Dei, the Moonies and the Jonathan Institute. Many of these are funded fully or in part by the American Central Intelligence Agency. Members have included Nicholas Elliott (British SIS/MI6 Dept. Head), the CIA's Director of Central Intelligence William Colby, Colonel Botta, (Swiss Military Intelligence), Franz Josef Strauss (German Defence Minister, Head of CSU party and Bavarian Premier), Alfredo Sanchez Bella (head of European operations for Spain's Secret Service and closely connected to Opus Dei), Giulio Andreotti (former Italian Prime Minister, P2 member and Mafia confidant), General Antonio de Spínola (head of the Portuguese putschists), Silva Munoz (former Franco minister and senior Opus Dei member), Monsignore Brunello (Vatican prelate and BNG agent) and Stefano della Chiaie, leading member of P2 and Italy's Secret Service, SID. This list is by no means complete. Another major aim of Le Cercle was to influence West German elections to ensure that Franz Joseph Strauss, the ultra right wing leader of the Christian Social Union Party, became Chancellor of Germany. In the event Strauss was defeated, due, it is believed to effective counter-measures taken by Germany's security and intelligence apparatus, the BND and BfV, who's "operational chiefs do not follow his political lines." However, despite this set-back, other projects were more successful. During the "Cercle's" meeting held on 28-29th June 1980 in Zurich, Switzerland, discussions were focused around "a series of appropriate measures to promote the electoral campaign of presidential candidate Reagan against Carter." Elliott reported that in this context positive contact had been made with George Bush as well. Journalist, David Teacher, a keen investigator of Cercle activities observes: "It is becoming more and more apparent that the treatment reserved for Harold Wilson at the hands of the intelligence services was only the U.K end of an international phenomenon. Around 1975 a surprising number of government were targeted by their own (or others') intelligence agencies because of their radical policies." He goes on to list a number of known "destabilisation" programmes that the Cercle are known, or believed, to have been involved: the UK: the concerted efforts by elements in the British intelligence and security services, with CIA and BOSS, to bring down Wilson, Thorpe and Heath. the USA: the CIA's Operation Chaos, the FBI's Cointelpro programme and, of course, Watergate. Australia: the loans scandal and other destabilisation of Gough Whitlam by the CIA and SIS. Additional Cercle targets may have been Olof Palme, Sweden's Prime Minister. In 1987 the leading Swedish newspaper Dagens Nyheter carried a sensational story that the 03 section of the Swedish intelligence service, SAPO, were heavily involved in Palme's assassination, following their fury at his policy of détente towards the Soviet Union, and possibly fearful that he may discover the extent of their implication in arms sales to Iran. Other "direct actions" possibly include a Coup d'état in Belgium during 1973. "planned by gendarmerie officers and extreme right-wing groups." By no means least were the allegations by France's leading daily, Le Monde, which in 1978 revealed the activities of Cercle member and head of the intelligence service SDECE, Alexandre de Marenches. Le Monde claimed that de Marenches led a domestic campaign of terrorism and disinformation, it is fairly apparent that these activities were, "designedly", to keep Francois Mitterand from office during the 1974 elections. However, with the exception of the Langemann papers, and an ISC memo published in Lobster 17, there are no other Cercle documents available to confirm these allegations. Despite a strong focus on European issues, the Cercle were not unaware of the significance of establishing psyops "action centres" in North America. In 1975 the Washington Institute for the Study of Conflict (WISC) was launched under the chairmanship of George Ball. Characteristically, Ball, one time Senior Managing Director of the enormous Wall Street international investment bank, Lehman Brothers, and Under Secretary of State (1961-66) was a member of the Trilateral Commission; on the steering committee of the Bilderberg Group and a member of the Council for Foreign Relations (CFR). His association with the WISC mark him as a close friend of the Cercle. Others members of the WISC committee were Zbigniew Brzezinski and Kermit (not the frog) Roosevelt of the CIA. Four years later, in 1979, Maurice Tugwell, former head of Information Policy, a black propaganda unit set-up by British military intelligence in Northern Ireland, formed the Canadian Centre for Conflict Studies. CCS largely operates on contract work for the Royal Canadian Mounted Police (RCMP), the Canadian Dept. of National Defence plus others. We have seen that one aim of the Cercle was to aid in the election of President Reagan. Presumably they can also cite this aim as being “accomplished”? Their close connection to George Bush may have extended to helping in his drive to election victory also. Canada also veered sharply to the right during the eighties. We may never know the true extent to which the Cercle, and its black psyops “fronts” the ISC, WISC, CCS and others had in “affecting” a wholesale change in government in Europe, North America and elsewhere. Clearly the decade of the eighties witnessed a marked shift to the political right in the western democratic arena, it would be stretching credulity to suggest that this rapid swing in political ideology took place accidentally. It is also abundantly obvious that the Cercle’s primary influence resided in its top level connections to the shadowy intelligence apparatus of the west. At the same time it possessed serious clout inside the sinews of transatlantic power that repose in the Council for Foreign Relations, the Royal Institute of International Affairs, the Trilateral Commission and the Bilderberg Group. The foregoing outline - slim as it is - serves not only to underscore the inherent and potential weaknesses that reside in the institution of representative democracy, but also demonstrates the “will o’ the wisp” nature of covert activities that hide comfortably behind the public face of government. That a small handful of influential men across the planet may be able to manipulate “free” elections to suit their personal and ideological advantage, is not a new concept. Generally, utterances of this sort are met by the blanket rejection: “conspiracist theory” and discarded out of hand. Such rebuffs rarely take into account the underlying evidence, fragmentary as it is. Perhaps they are not meant to? Despite the wholesale collapse of the Soviet bloc, the Cercle has not packed up its victorious bags nor have its members disbanded. Attendees at the 1990 Cercle meeting at the sumptuous Al Bustan hotel, Muscat, in Oman, included Jonathan Aitken, (Minister of Defence procurement) Alan Clarke (Minister of State for Defence), Lord Julian Amery (joint Chairman), Sheikh Qaboos (Ruler of Oman), General Norman Schwarzkopf (the bear-like Commander of the Allied forces in the Gulf), Paul Channon (former secretary of State at the Dept. of Trade & Industry), the Head of the Dutch Secret Service, an unnamed French Naval Admiral plus other serving or former intelligence operatives and VIP’s.. Aitken, Clarke and Channon have all been heavily implicated in the arms to Iraq affair examined by Lord Justice Richard Scott.

Significantly, Alan Clarke revealed in his hugely successful “Diaries” that the Cercle was funded by the Central Intelligence Agency. With its apparent “raison d’être” (anti communist psyops) clearly in tatters, one can only suppose that there is, or, perhaps, always was an additional hidden agenda lurking behind Cercle activities. To understand what this may be one must look further ahead, an increasing international focus are the calls for “minimalist” government, this has always been a central plank of laissez faire economics. Deregulation and the freeing of government imposed constraints on international business to engage in activities as it sees fit, is a long-term and obvious objective. If history is any judge, the attainment of this singular goal may usher in a new dark age of unrestrained capitalism, co-ordinated by the gargantuan trans national corporations - all of whom are heavily represented on the membership rolls of the CRF, the Trilats, RIIA, Bilderbergers etc. And this is why we have to build our network The Peoples Club, by sheer numbers alone it can and will carry the power, back to the people, and also take back our planet from these pre selected psychopaths.

Adolf Hitler’s Address to the Reichstag (19 July 1940) Once again the conspiracy of pitiful, corrupt political creatures and greedy financial magnates made its appearance, for whom war is a welcome means to bolster business. The international Jewish poison of the peoples began to agitate against and to corrode healthy minds. Men of letters set out to portray decent men who desired peace, calling them weaklings and traitors, to denounce opposition parties as a “Fifth Column”, in order to eliminate internal resistance to their criminal policy of war. Jews and Freemasons, armament industrialists and war profiteers, international traders and stock jobbers found political blackguards, desperados and glory seekers, who represent war as something to be yearned for, and hence wished for. Believe me my deputies, I feel an inner disgust at this type of unscrupulous parliamentary annihilators of peoples and states. It is almost painful to me to have been chosen by Providence to give a shove to what these men have brought to its knees. It is not my ambition to wage wars, but to build up a new social state of the highest culture and every year of war takes me away from my work and the cause of this robbery is those ludicrous zeros whom one could, at best, call natures political run of the mill, insofar as their corrupted vileness, does not brand them as something out of the ordinary. Mr. Churchill has repeated the declaration that he wants war. About six weeks ago now, he launched this war in an arena, in which he apparently believes he is quite strong, namely in air war against the civilian population, beneath the deceptive slogan of a “War Against Military Objectives”. Ever since Freiburg, these objectives have turned out to be open cities, markets, villages, residential housing, hospitals, schools, kindergartens and whatever else they decide to hit. Up to now, I have given little response to these attacks. This in not intended to signal, however, that this is the only response possible, or that it shall remain this way. I am fully aware that with our response, which will come, will also bring the nameless suffering and misfortune of many men. Obviously this does not apply to Mr. Churchill himself, since by then he will surely be secure in Canada, where the money and the children of the most-distinguished of war profiteers have already been brought. But there will be a great tragedy for millions of other men and Mr. Churchill should make an exception and place trust in me, when as a prophet I now proclaim. A great world empire will be destroyed, a world empire which I never had the ambition to destroy or as much as harm. I am fully aware that the continuation of this war will end only in the complete shattering of one of the two warring parties. Mr. Churchill may believe this to be Germany. I know it to be England. In this hour, I feel compelled, standing before my conscience, to direct yet another appeal to reason in England. I believe I can do this, as I am not asking as the vanquished, but as the victor. I am speaking in the name of reason. I see no reason, which could force the continuation of this war. I regret the sacrifices it will demand. I would like to spare my people. I know the hearts of millions of men and boys glow at the thought of finally being allowed to wage war against an enemy, who has, without a reasonable cause, declared war on us a second time. I also know of the women and mothers at home, whose hearts, despite their willingness to sacrifice to the last, hang onto the last with all their might. Mr. Churchill may well belittle my declaration again, crying that it was nothing other than a symptom of my fear, or my doubts of the final victory. Still I will have an easy conscience of things to come. Deputies, men of the German Reichstag! In reflecting on the ten months lying behind us, all of us will surely feel overcome by the grace of Providence, which will allow us to accomplish such a great a task. It has blessed our resolves and stood by us on many difficult paths. I myself am touched in recognition of the calling it imparted to me, to restore freedom and honor to my people. The disgrace we suffered for twenty-two years, and which had its beginnings in the Forest Of Compiegne, was erased forever at the very same site. Today, I have named the men, who before history enabled me to accomplish this great task. They have done their best, dedicating their talents and their industry to the German people. I now wish to conclude in mentioning all those nameless men, who have no less done their duty. Millions of them have risked life and liberty and, as brave German officers and soldiers, have been ready at every hour to make the last sacrifice a man can make. Today many of them rest in the same graves in which their fathers have rested since the Great War. They bear evidence to silent heroism. They stand as a symbol for all those hundreds of thousands of musketeers, anti-tank gunners and tank gunners, pioneers and artillery men, soldiers of the Navy and the Luffwaffe, men of the Waffen SS, and all those other fighters who stood for the German war machine, in the struggle for freedom and future of our people, and for the eternal greatness of the National Socialist Greater German Reich. This is clearly not in line what is reported in our history books and there are several other examples of this, like the invasion of Poland was being done not by Nazis but the British and French Rothschild's based armies, there is actual footage of the Polish people celebrating the Germans, not the SS arriving in Poland as liberators. This is further proof or evidence of the question posed in FRWL 3 & 4 of were the Germans duped, and possibly Hitler also. I am not here to exonerate or say Hitler was a good man in any way shape or form, I wasn't around him to know the real truth, but there is serious gaps and different aspects of knowledge that do not conform to the official narrative historians, literature and MSM have put out about WW2. SS was Black Eagle, Hitler was Brown Eagle and not a part of the main SS, there was two SS groups. The real SS was German, Russian and Polish Jews this has been confirmed by the series FRWL.

Many pondering over the Hebrew biblical based 3 days of darkness that was actually done according to the scriptures by Moses (which is a title not a name) question is why would someone who is revered do that act? Then we have the alt media 3 or 10 days of darkness to throw into the mix. Wilcock stated there would be 3 days starting on Good Friday and mass arrests, Cobra predicted some sort of ascension process via meditation and supported by several in the alt media, Drake predicted martial law, mass arrest, new gold standard and some other things and all of them as predicted failed, yet where is the outrage of repeated failed predictions? and why is it only one show and host is held accountable for anything?

We often hear the term now of white privilege, yet rarely hear the term Zionist privilege, and reverse the racism based political correctness, why is it political and not social? I'm going to apply social correctness and people can label it all they like, I don't give a shit when calling out the truth. I don't care how many labels people will throw at me after this piece, because it needs to be said, as the world is being held hostage by it, people in fear to speak, people in fear to touch each other, people in fear to go out, people in fear to shop, work or play and all orchestrated by fear by one group of people. The Jewish faith based Zionists, there I said it, why because it is a fact. In a world of flip flopping, back stabbing, fear based people, there needs to be some who will have the courage of their convictions and speak the damn truth. The world is pussy footing around the real issue, pointing fingers everywhere bar where the real issues reside, why, because the same people created the fear based narrative of you can't criticize or speak about one particular group of people, and this planet and it's people has gone retrograde in terms of development since that program has been running since late 1880's, well I for one have had enough. I have shown the drip fed narrative version throughout From Russia with Love, shown all the evidence the majority of the listeners have gained an understanding of and come to accept some very difficult and personal truths netanyahu 9/11, media, social media, military, congress, presidents, prime ministers, agencies, finances, porn industry, UN, WHO, nuclear scientist, medical experimentation, camps, camp refusal, google, twitter, microsoft, patents, whole of the middle east, oil, coal, rail, who destroyed Russia, The Rus, The Aryans, Egypt, Palestine, Syria, Lebanon, parts of Turkey, Iran in past and now, Germany, UK, all the Houses of Europe, bombed two cities into oblivion in Japan, USS Liberty, AIPAC controlling our whole political process, Kushner, settlements does not mean housing for the Jewish people, it means global expansion and control, the recent exposure in the documentary Out of the Shadows mentioned several companies and issues out of New York, yet conveniently left out the born in and born to elements who run those same shady companies, in fact virtually who were covered have Zionist based overtone contained within that documentary and no one dares to say anything? That has to stop for the benefit of all people, least of all the ordinary Jewish person.

TW: "How all can have a positive influence on themselves and those around them. We have all been in a situation where one person drags the whole room down with negativity or just generally complaining, how you all feel flat, uncomfortable and wanting to avoid, or in some cases slap that person. So, if that one person or group can have that effect to create low vibration, why can't people do the opposite and create the opposite effect? Is it not the case we tolerate and absorb too easily these low vibrational frequencies? No one goes into deliberately lower someone else's vibration in most cases, but why does it become so addictive and so easy a suit to wear? It only takes one person to mention they are sick, their life is not much fun, and in chimes others saying the same things, it is almost addictive behaviors, life can be shit, the world is messed up, but the world is messed up in portion, because we are. Too often we all jump into victimhood mode, and I was no different until around early thirties, the world and life is against me, nobody likes me etc, until one day I decided, maybe I am playing a role in this and it is not all external, things changed drastically for me thereonin, low confidence, self worth and insecurities started to melt away and a new lease of life was born, suddenly the guy who didn't want to go on vacations, not only wanted to go on them, but emigrate to vacation place!! That took another 8 years, but by that time I was a completely different person. I no longer allowed personal drama and bad incidents around effect me too much, 45-55 balance achieves that, I still get a load of shit, attacks, interference and fun and games as this telling the truth game has many pitfalls, as we all know. Who would have thought trying to teach people the truth, would have lead to people who have never met or spoken to you, attack you for the sake of it, it is a sad state of affairs, but it is also reflective of society today, those who won't face reality, are ego or money driven, or just riddled with layers and layers of personal insecurity, they see anyone who vibrates higher as a threat. But, he doesn't have to be that way, it never did, and we don't need executive orders, govt bills, rules or legislation to change how we are, it just takes you to sit down and life review where you are at, where you can improve and where you would like yourselves to be in terms of life now and how you can create your future in your image, not societies generalized low vibration image. Life is all about swings, high and low, ups and downs, like the metronome is just doesn't stop, unless you interact, don't get too down if things are not going your way, and don't get to up if things are, just take it all in your stride, 45-55, a 5% correction is manageable, 20, 30 or 40% are not. There is no way I can do or be involved with what I do, with my pendulum swinging from side to side, I would literally spiral out of control or sync, life would be reactive which is regressive, and not proactive which is progressive. It is all about the balance, how can you achieve balance with anger, mood swings, reactionary behaviors, negativity, complaining, the answer is you can't, you can't properly meditate with those emotions swirling inside of you either, meditation is about attaining an inner peace, being with yourself, not the world, but how can you do that, with chaos and lower vibrational thinking patterns pervading most of your cells? Some people often wonder why am I always sick? in many cases it is because of stress, because you haven't been able to attain balance or inner peace in your life, this puts undue strain on your immune system and lowers it's abilities, viruses love that and they will attack you with glee, a lower immune system then interacts with lower vibrational frequencies and a bond is made, but someone who masters their own being, will deflect all of that as a natural course, it won't interact as the body alerts you and instinct moves you away. So, you have to alter your path, and the first thing you have to look at and do is, be honest with yourself, a lot harder than many think, we lie to ourselves constantly and then recreate an image of us to present to others, but that is a mask and subsequently an illusion, like being in the hall of mirrors, you become distorted, how can a distorted image be the best version of you? no matter how many times you lie to yourself and circle, it is not you. This is why the shadow and inner work is so important, but it only reaps benefits by being honest with yourself, it will be painful doing that work, as the onion layers you have created of not addressing the issues mounted up and became much larger than it ever needed to be. Traumas, pain, anxieties, shame, guilt and anger all bubble to the surface, but they all have to be transmuted into something more positive, that can take time depending on the individual, it is a process, it won't take one session or two weeks, it can take years depending on how many layers or how condensed the low vibrational frequencies are. But as each layer is processed, released or at peace with, those gaps have to be replaced with something more positive and a higher vibrational frequency, and preferably source based energies. First thing to fix that after releasing it, is praise yourself for the accomplishment of overcoming that hurdle, a hurdle you have held onto because you couldn't face it, well now you have, and praise away, self praise when in truth can lift you far higher than external praise can ever do, it will also perhaps make you realize how many of you knock yourself lower by your own comments. Suddenly you will feel lighter, why? because your lower frequency has been reduced, these low frequencies weigh heavy on our body's immune system, mind and heart, denser is 3D lighter is heading towards 4D in 4D you are 10% of the denseness you are in 3D. Most heart conditions are not because the person smokes or eats fatty food, it is because the heart has been put under too much stress and the person has not adequately dealt with it, it applies with other conditions also. Operating in love, caring for others, helping others, non judgmental balanced state, positive outlook all raise your frequency, and creates and enhances your own psi field, you will then attract like minded psi fields and your circle of influence increases, the lower frequency people will suddenly fade from your life. This whilst is not the external change many seek, but if all change internally, most of the external desires will cease to be as important. "

The key to all of that is contained in many of our shows throughout the past near 4 years of THI, all the tools for your development is in there, all the understandings and erasure of his story, to then develop and build ours. We have done much and yet have so much more to achieve. The astral level maybe level 3 on our soul development level, but it's actually ground zero for many people on this planet, riddled with death, destruction, violence and a feeding energy based frenzy. Look around you, social media a microcosm and macro in many ways, people feeding off each other, like a giant buffet and too few stop to think, is this beneficial to me or anybody else? Why is critique the overarching theme on so many pages, opinions largely based on insecurity or ego, like the saying goes opinions are like assholes we all have one, but why is the first stop and thinking on social media to be critical, when those opinions can be easily transferred with a change of mindset to solutions to our problems? Imagine what we all could possibly achieve with some diligence and inner work? that is what I want more than most, us all to rise, all be our best version and all teach and care for each other, because no one else will do it, The Savior program runs deep it will take awhile to get people over that... particularly if you are stuck at astral, as no real connection to source as there are blocking mechanisms as I understand it. Removing yourself from the astral planes makes you achieve so much more on so many levels, and despite alt media clowns with their fake new age style titles, only you can do that process, anybody telling you that you have to pay to gain akashic records, soul development, spirituality and enlightenment are all fake, it is a process that is only done by you doing the work. With just you changed, so has the planet as well, remember that.
