

THI-SHOW TRANSCRIPT 2020-05-14

Following another week of projections, lies and a plethora of nasty comments and wrong assumptions about me and THI, some more high profile than others, and one does tend to wonder just what we are saving here. People feeling helpless and guilty about their part in the coronavirus, due to having to stay at home and forced to wear the masks, I don't like wearing the masks but will do in it public to save getting nasty looks some people have said, this is going against your own free will, which upsets your own vibration, why allow others to do that to you? If masks work why are people giving the ones who don't nasty looks? Perhaps the mask is not the issue here, and peoples own state of mind is nasty to begin with? with the real masks off we see people for who and what they are, is that not the case. There are many nice people but the majority of people are just not nice as you have all witnessed or heard, this is what has to change for we get the better world we all say we want, yet so many jump at the chance to uphold the old failed system. People under stress all react the same way, they target and attack others and that is why they never progress on a soul level as a person, mired in the low vibrational astral layer. These people all fail to see they are not getting at me, although I can't say I am not bitterly disappointed in the reactions of non cabal and clowns, because it re-affirms the notion of the cabal and certain ET groups of us being a savage and backward race that needs to be kept under control. Cassandra said it herself "even the few out there telling you the truth are attacked by your own people" The saddest aspect of that for me is it is 100% correct, regardless of whether it is me or anyone else under the fire. Take me out of the equation, how many of these people attack any other of the thousands of rogue companies or millions of corporate thieves? and therein lies the very problem of why your country and subsequently the planet is in a mess. These people are why it is that way, these are the same people who target immigrants because "they take all our jobs and benefits" conveniently forgetting to target who made them immigrants to begin with, and who wrote the policy to allow them in? Do they attack the policy maker? no, the poor immigrants and the same applies when they attack me for whatever has triggered them inside their own vessel, whether envy, bitterness or the comparative mindset because none of their allegations stack up, which is why they are reduced to stitch copy and paste. I have to say in reflection it is a good job I have my ego in balance, as I would be the largest big head on the planet now, with an army of trolls, shills, governments, political parties yes you Democrats, Generals, cia, fbi, nsa, go ogle, yt and Facebook all targeting one man and his tiny group as they say, they all came and yet none of them have managed to conquer, only made themselves all look worse, that is empowering to me, and is proof this show is and has had an impact. The latest barb is to label people who defend me or the group as handlers lol, that really makes me belly laugh you have no idea. So the trolls, social distancing mask police, low vibrational energy people, sheep, 6 feet observance people, the quit your jobs people because some jackass who doesn't know what they are doing tells you so, non shadow and inner work people I have a song for you all, please observe my request. DONT STAND TOO CLOSE TO ME

First of all I want to thank Stanislaw and his wife from Poland for allowing me to engage the many people of Polish descent now interested in our group and message. I appeared the Polish TV station called VTV on Tuesday morning and had a wonderful engagement and answered a variety of questions in the 90 minutes i was on there, all translated by Stanislaw's wife and they have asked me to return to their network in June to do another interview. Thank you Stanislaw and the people of Poland.

Some complain we focus too much on trolls but people have to get an understanding of what really goes on behind the scenes, and the levels of game playing, disruption and organized trolling is weighing heavy not so much on me, but moreso on my admins. As they carry the day to day crap of it all, ordinary people who give their free time to help you all, only to receive volumes of distractions and levels of abuse and barbs at them I find particularly distasteful. An admin of this group is way different to any other group, they do so much more and have not deserved the abuse and wasted time of people not following a few basic guidelines, and so following a meeting of admins and other people I call upon, this is the outcome of those meeting. A lot of the angst against our group comes from our connection to Kim and The Trust and our validation of it, even the original Bubba group was against Kim and The Trust rather than myself or THI, in fact Bubba even tried to recruit me and I still have the email. (evidence 1) and evidence 2 We were happy to defend and provide proof wherever necessary as myself and THI essentially became the firewall for Kim and the Trust. But the volume of attacks because of that connection is hampering certain development of the group currently and wasting vast amounts of the admins time, so I have come to two decisions. 1. All questions and concerns of Kim and The Trust will not be answered within this group anymore, I am asking regular members to direct those posts and questions over to Tank. The reason being is it takes up too much of my time and the admins, and I would like to focus more now on the TPC, and I am asking all members to address those questions and concerns to Tank and his group. The reason being is Tank has a nightly show and he can give you all the details, questions and concerns people may have and address it on a daily basis, so send an email to speakproject.net and get all your questions and concerns answered directly on his nightly show and his up and coming news network. Too often recently the mewe chat and FB page have had posts of Tank said this or that in his show and many of those posts and comments have turned nasty or testy at best, what Tank says on his show is his business and none of mine. I put the information I have out on the regular show slot which is mainly Thursday, and it is not fair I have to spend more time adjudicating what Tank or anyone else says in their show. Our shows are once a week and we no longer have the Q & A section of our show, due to the members request and largely due to the issues mentioned earlier, people are not asking questions to learn but to cause a division or drama and that is why our members requested the cancellation of the Q & A section of our show. At least with this way people can get their answers quicker, and will avoid some of the niggling posts on our pages. With that now addressed and those questions answered by Tank, we may open up the Q & A section again.

Part of many of the issues we have had in THI is, it has become the projection screen, for many differing groups that THI has stood up for and yet too few will reciprocate that and leave us to carry the burden and the can, well I and the admins have had enough of that to be honest and none of you realize what we have to put up with. Be it Kim and The Trust, Tank and Dan, Randy Maugans, Shane Bales, OYM/Circle of white light all of which myself and our group have defended heavily and yet it is rarely reciprocated and in some cases turned against you. There are other concerns about Tank and his group I know many of you have relayed to me, and again it is not fair that I have to answer those and myself and the admins have to endure the fall out of it all, if you have issues with Tank, address Tank not me or THI. But before we get into part 2 of our decisions I may remind you all the fall out between THI and the Australian group led by Jesper Ellermann and Kingdom of Manna crew revealed they would attack us and Kim, but not Tank, and some of their people including that what what what woman all left Tank out of the equation, which I thought was odd, so bare that in mind for next passage. Then I received this that has been doing the rounds amongst our members. "You should know that TW has been lying for a whole year about facing Team Bubba on a show." well there is the first lie straight off the bat as all listeners will know. I asked again recently for them to come on along with their real names with Randy Maugans and Shane Bales and got crickets. "in the second link that prove beyond any doubt that The Trust is a scam (to hook people into donating to the people's club while we all wait for the funds to arrive, nearly 4 years and counting, it's another RV)" so The Trust is a scam they say, but then say we are waiting for the funds, do these people think before they speak or write? clearly not, their proof is by stitching, copying and pasting and twisted words and sentences oh dear that is not proof children. Kim is nothing to do with The Peoples Club so there is another lie, Kim has not received any funds from The Peoples club and neither has any Director which includes me at any time as the company records shows, details of which are posted in the files section of FB and Mewe. The question asked back given the volumes of attacks by the paymasters of this particular group, if the TPC was a fraud, do you not think the authorities would have arrested us by now? Remember this group promised to arrest me and Kim for fraud anytime soon since December 2018, 18 months and counting clowns. FBI chasing us down since Feb 2019 allegedly and nothing. evidence 3 "and that Thomas Williams, Kim Goguen and Dan Lutz are liars and professional con artists" interestingly again that Tank is left out of it all again, now why is that? I can't speak for Dan Lutz I dont know the guy well enough to do so, but for Kim and I, I can, and again I have to ask if neither Kim or I are receiving financial compensation from The Peoples club, where is the fraud or scam? "We have been speaking to many admins from the state and country groups. Team Bubba are going to liberate as many groups as possible before the state and country groups get completely drawn into the scam and the inevitable legal action that will be taking place in the near future" haha utter deluded, if we had a non corrupt or Democrat led FBI your group leader would have been arrested for pedophilia, child trafficking and Torture by now and the rest in that group investigated as accomplices.

2. Following now several elements of poor, inappropriate and in some cases criminal behavior within the THI state groups, we are sorry to announce that we came to a group panel decision to cancel all connections to all THI American state groups. This is due to so many indiscretions, basic guidelines not followed, people jumping from state to state, people changing the format of the page and blocking admins, trolls being allowed in almost every state group and disrupting calls, people within the states collecting donations privately when all funds were to go to the TPC, only the countries outside of America were allowed to collect private donations, America has it's own group and fund called the TPC. People setting up private companies in our name when requested not to do so, people arranging funding for the friends companies not related to THI or the principals of the TPC and I could go on, but you get the gist. This has over the past 12 months taken up hours per day to manage those groups, and people cant be civil or in some cases were threatening or abusive to our admins, and following another major revelation about one state this past week, despite me spending time trying to resolve those issues, that was the final straw for the panel assembled to decide which way to go with this. So here are the major points of this 1. this is to do with American state groups only, not the country groups 2. THI will no longer be connected to the states groups from today onwards 3. myself or the admins will not be engaging any group questions, infighting or be attending zoom calls 4. This does NOT mean people who are doing ok and creating projects and ideas should stop, on the contrary, keep on doing what you are doing but just don't involve me or admins anymore to sort out issues, and look after your group and protect it. 5. This will not in anyway shape or form deny or block you from future funding, you put in your applications and they will be agreed upon or not exactly the same, but any indiscretions of people being from another state or not connected to the group will be automatically disqualified from funding, this was done to stop the likes of greed merchants and snake oil people being involved in several funding projects. This has already been found to be the case of being involved in requesting funding from Kre8change group and also requesting funding from the TPC, although we never charged for our funding application like that group. 6. Carry on with your regular zoom calls many of you have made friends and discussed many great ideas and I wish for that to not only continue but expand. 7. This is protecting members for potential legal and financial implications of certain people and groups are setting up companies in your state name, largely unbeknownst to members in the group and that makes you all liable. It was not just one group either. 8. If people wish to create their own companies are I am glad that you wish to do that, go ahead but please do not use THI or TPC as the vehicle to promote your own ventures, unless a request is made to me and is approved by all directors. It is now over 12 months these groups have been going and the lack of following a few basic guidelines concerns me and the admins, how can you be expected to run a TPC company, if you cant run a basic FB or Mewe page with a few guidelines and infighting? Yes we are aware of many of these groups being deliberately disrupted by the trolls, it is what they do, and some people are saying we should just ignore them, and it is a fair point, but largely enough believe it or not we do, but ignoring their input in the state groups has led to the carnage in many of them and our joint decision today. Those groups were your opportunity to chart your own paths, and yet the behaviors out of virtually every single one of them as led to today's decision. If people think this was done out of haste, I was out voted in late summer last year to discontinue those groups it was bad enough then, since then it has only got worse. Those of you who get along do please continue but do not approach me, Holly or Ramona anymore to fix or deal with your gatherings, if you don't like people in your group get rid of them, you no longer have to be in the THI state group, form your own groups for those willing to work together. Is it sad, you bet it is, but people have to understand the time it has taken up for our admins, the abuse they receive, the blocking of them you have no idea the levels of that type of interaction and you only get to hear less than 5% in the shows. I know the genuine people will understand, but after 12 months of wrangling to get people to do a few basic things and practically every state having to be chased down, adding people from other states and several other infractions, enough was enough and I have to give the admins a break, it is affecting their own and home lives and that is just not fair in anyone book. It is not fair the sheer volume of it all, with defending The Trust, Kim, trying to fix or correct State groups and the several leading questions of why Tank says this or that, and so those are the solutions we have taken, albeit reluctantly and we go forward as a group again.

It appears now that the Team Bubba group is staging a new plot of taking money under false pretences done by their members, a total of $1200 was taken from TPC and my patreon by Bridget Davisson whilst working behind the scenes to disrupt our group and acquire funds for their entertainment at Team Bubba. Ms Davisson is not as innocent as she makes out and ran a clown based page called unitedtruthseekers.com replete with donations page and a quick review reveals who she is really connected to, Groundcrew command, Cobra and Marilee Neitain all linked via a network of witchcraft mainly under the banner of the Sisterhood of the Rose, take a bow agent Davisson our day will come, humanity sell out. But I would like to thank Ms. Davisson for confirming me and the TPC do pay out to help people, which goes against your fellow groups notions of nobody gets helped, oops so thanks for the validation

To end this episode on a happier note the generosity of the THI members has allowed one of our members to finally get out of bed and around on his new wheelchair that was ordered by The Peoples Club on his behalf, a fitting appointment for his new chair is for next Tuesday and all being well that person is back on their travels again. This is what we do and no amount of low level envy based and bitter jackasses will stop that.

An even lighter note The corona virus can be spread through money. If you have any money at home, put on some gloves, put all the money in to a plastic bag and put it outside the front door tonight. Rick Burton will come around collecting all the plastic bags tonight for safety. Think of your health. Be careful now Rick people who help others are labeled scammers, frauds and tiny. Tiny is about the only correct or truthful thing that group has ever said.

Around 70% of school children in Mississippi rely upon free or subsidised lunches. With the arrival of the Covid-19 pandemic, one local farm has stepped in to ensure they still get nutritious food in their diet. Foot Print Farms is 68 acres (0.3sq km) of farmland in Jackson city proper, just half a mile (1km) from the street. Although our farm is within Jackson city limits, parts of the city are considered a food desert. That means people struggle to get fresh fruit and vegetables because they live more than one mile from the nearest grocery store. Most of Mississippi is a food desert in this way. So the current situation is particularly worrisome. When you go to the grocery store and you see shelves empty, it is scary. Some people are afraid to go in at all. I see some lines a mile long, with people sitting and waiting to get inside. This is the problem people are facing in Mississippi at the moment. Getting good, fresh, local food is hard. We are considered a small farm, but we are the largest urban farm in Mississippi. It's one thing growing the best fruit and vegetables, but if you can't sell it in one or two days you lose it. Yet, there are people out there who really need it. My first reaction was "Oh my gosh" when I heard all the data from other countries about the virus. But for me, and other people in rural areas like Mississippi, there is always a crisis in terms of access to food. The pandemic is only making it worse. We have been partnering with school districts. As the schools are shut, a lot of children are not getting the meals they would normally get under the national school lunch programme. A lot of families rely on them as a source of good, nutritious food. (Mississippi has the highest proportion of children dependent on free lunches in the US and has the highest food hardship rate in the country.)

The United States faces a major meat shortage due to virus infections at processing plants. It means millions of pigs could be put down without ever making it to table. This is what the predicament looks like on a Minnesota farm. When Mike Boerboom enters the "nursery" - a long, low building lit astonishingly bright - a sea of piglets parts in front of him. The clatter of 5,800 sets of hooves is deafening. But within moments they calm and creep back towards him, their pink snouts in the air, jostling one another for the chance to inspect their visitor. Dressed in khaki coveralls, rubber boots and plastic gloves, Boerboom looks out over the dozens of pens teeming with animals, one of 40 barns in southwest Minnesota that contain Boerboom pigs once destined for slaughter, butchering, and eventually, grocery stores around the country. "It's mind-blowing to look at all the pigs in here," he says with a joyless smile. "With the situation that's going on, there's a chance that none of these may end up in the food chain." Boerboom, a third-generation hog farmer, is just one of the tens of thousands of US pork producers who are facing a stark reality: although demand for their products is high in the nation's grocery stores, they may have to euthanise and dispose of millions of pigs due to a breakdown in the American food supply chain. Although chicken and cattle farmers are facing a similarly paradoxical situation, as are milk and egg producers, because of the tight time frame between when a pig is born to when it is ready for slaughter, some of the most drastic actions are occurring on these farms first.

The US unemployment rate has risen to 14.7%, with 20.5 million jobs lost in April, the real jobless total is 40.3M this week as the coronavirus pandemic devastated the economy. The rise means the jobless rate is now worse than at any time since the Great Depression of the 1930s. Since the pandemic began, the US has suffered its worst growth numbers in a decade and the worst retail sales report on record. Just two months ago, the unemployment rate was at 3.5%, a 50-year low. Leisure and hospitality was hit especially hard, with payrolls falling by 7.7 million or 47%. Employers in education and health services cut 2.5 million positions, while retailers shed 2.1 million. The Labor Department said more than three-quarters of those without jobs described themselves as temporarily laid off, a sign that many of those currently without work are hopeful that the economy will be able to rebound. This was warned in our show as far back as 2017 of them trying to crash and burn America and it's economy, with the likes of Kushner, Fink, Gates, Military Generals (not all) and lead Democrats all playing a huge role in it, as disciples of The Rothschild's and or The Black Sun.

It's one of the cruelest realities of the coronavirus pandemic. America's already-ailing hospitals are being pushed even further into financial ruin, threatening to force a growing number of them to file for bankruptcy or even close. The onslaught could result in some $202.6 billion in losses for hospitals across the country by the end of June, according to the American Hospital Association. While even stronger facilities see revenue evaporate, the demands of the illness may hasten the demise of weak systems, and federal aid likely won't be enough as millions lose the private insurance critical for hospitals to pay their bills. "I just don't know how many places survive this," Rod Hochman, chief executive officer of Providence St. Joseph Health and chair-elect of the AHA, said in an April interview. "It's going to be brutal."

With millions already jobless, California's pandemic-induced recession is on pace to shatter previous downturns and could lead to a record $54 billion budget shortfall, state officials warned Thursday. The California Department of Finance said it expects the state's main revenue sources to decline by more than $41 billion compared to January predictions. The vanishing income, sales and corporate taxes — combined with an estimated 18% unemployment rate — reflect the disastrous economic toll already caused by the novel coronavirus. California's general fund relies largely on three revenue sources — personal income tax, sales and use tax, and corporation tax. Newsom's advisers now predict tax revenues will plunge a combined $41 billion compared to the figure used to craft the January budget, not to mention the $6 billion the state plans to spend this year fighting the pandemic. The report also expects the middle and lower class to be specifically harmed, as many layoffs have occurred in low-wage industries.

The Michigan Militia says the police will not be allowed to arrest 77-year-old Owosso, Mich., barber, Karl Manke, who has defied Governor Whitmer's orders that all non-essential businesses stay closed. Friday night, Michigan State Police delivered a health protection order from Michigan Attorney General Dana Nessel's office ordering that Manke close his doors. A local Fox affiliate spoke to Daniel Brewer, one of the militia members standing up for the barber's right to work. "Yesterday six troopers came in to enforce the governor's order or to issue a cease or desist order so we are here to make sure he doesn't get arrested. We're willing to stand in front of that door and block the entrance so the police will have no entry there today." As relationships heat up between overreaching government agents and protesters who want to open the economy, people like Manke are being completely let down by the system that claims to want to help them, leading to more anger and outrage than government officials are ready to handle. Manke obeyed the original orders and closed his shop, but when he was turned down for unemployment — twice — he said he had no choice but to go back to work to survive. Finally some real Militia men standing up and doing the right thing, thank you, thanks for the cops, doctors, nurses and scientists who many of them now are finally standing up and speaking out.

SUB INTEL Cyber experts slammed Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu for his proposal to "microchip" children who return to schools and kindergartens as the coronavirus lockdown is lifted, Ynet reported on Friday. While speaking at a press conference on Monday, Netanyahu suggested the Health Ministry use new technology to help Israel adjust to its new routine as the state is lifting the coronavirus lockdown. "That is, technology that has not been used before and is allowed under the legislation we shall enact," he clarified. "I spoke with our heads of technology in order to find measures Israel is good at, such as sensors. For instance, every person, every kid - I want it on kids first - would have a sensor that would sound an alarm when you get too close, like the ones on cars," the prime minister said. "It will be hard to do it to more than a million schoolchildren who return to their educational institutions in order to ensure one student sits at the distance of two meters from another. It is fictional and dangerous," cyber resilience expert Einat Meron told Ynet. "Theoretically, I get the idea behind it," she said. "But although such distance-sensitive microchips exist in vehicles, it is different in humans." According to Meron, "a beeping sound telling me I got close to someone is not enough. Who says it will change anything? I would have gotten closer either way."

Google's sister firm Sidewalk Labs has scrapped a plan to build a smart city in Canada, citing complications caused by the Covid-19 pandemic. For several years it had pursued ambitions to build a digital-first city in Toronto "from the internet up". Chief executive Dan Doctoroff blamed "unprecedented economic uncertainty" for abandoning the plan. The project had proved controversial and Sidewalk Labs had already been forced to scale back its ambitions. In a blog post, Mr Doctoroff said: "As unprecedented economic uncertainty has set in around the world, and in the Toronto real estate market, it has become too difficult to make the 12-acre project financially viable without sacrificing core parts of the plan we had developed together with Waterfront Toronto to build a truly inclusive, sustainable community. "I believe the ideas we have developed over the last two-and-a-half years will represent a meaningful contribution to the work of tackling big urban problems, particularly in the areas of affordability and sustainability." The vision was to have a city full of technology, from autonomous cars to innovative ways of collecting rubbish, and hundreds of sensors collecting data on air quality and the movements of people. Buildings would be sustainable and built in radical new ways, and cycle lanes would be heated. But some questioned how Sidewalk Labs had won the contract. When it emerged that it planned to develop a much larger site than originally stated, a lobby group of citizens opposing the plans emerged, asking why they would want to be "lab rats" in a digital experiment. An independent panel was set up to scrutinise its plans and released a report suggesting some of its ideas were "tech for tech's sake", and potentially unnecessary. Sidewalk Labs was eventually given a tentative green light to continue its plan, but it was heavily scaled back from the 190-acre site it wanted to work with to a 12-acre piece of land. It was also told that any data it collected from its sensors would have to become a public asset. Stephen Diamond is chairman of Waterfront Toronto, the body set up to oversee development of the site. Reacting to Sidewalk's announcement, he said: "While this is not the outcome we had hoped for, Waterfront Toronto offers thanks and appreciation to Sidewalk Labs for its vision, effort and the many commitments that both the company and its employees have made to the future of Toronto. "Quayside remains an excellent opportunity to explore innovative solutions to affordable housing, improved mobility, climate change and several other urban challenges that Toronto - and cities around the world - must address in order to continue to grow and succeed." In his blog, Dan Doctoroff said the firm continued to invest in start-ups "working on everything from robotic furniture to digital electricity". "We continue to work internally on factory-made mass timber construction that can improve housing affordability"

Gates and MIT are currently developing the human implantable quantum dot vaccination delivery system, which is described as a tattoo for the hand, which will include our identification mark and vaccine records. It needs an enzyme called luciferase in order to make it work. Neuropeptide Technology Cell Lysis Luciferase, CAT, and alkaline phosphatase reporter activity accumulate primarily in the cytoplasm of transfected cells. Transfected cells are harvested by washing the adherent cells in the plate with phosphate-buffered saline (PBS; see Table I) 3 times. Cells are then lysed in situ by the addition of 1 ml per 100-mm plate of Triton lysis buffer (Table I). Presence of the reducing agent dithiothreitol (DTT) is critical to maintain luciferase enzymatic activity. The lysed cells are scraped with a rubber policeman, transferred to Eppendorf tubes, and vortexed, and the insoluble material is pelleted in a microcentrifuge for 5 min at 4°C. After transfer to new Eppendorf tubes, 100 μ l of each supernatant (the cytoplasmic fraction) is assayed for luciferase reporter activity, and 50 μ l is used for assay of alkaline phosphatase reporter activity. The firefly luciferase reporter assay provides rapid results of cellular transfections (14). Approximately 112–3 hr should be sufficient for the experienced user to produce triplicate results of luciferase and the internal control alkaline phosphatase assays.

Circadian Rhythms Introduction

Luciferases are naturally occurring protein enzymes that catalyze emission of light from a substrate (luminescence). Many structurally heterogeneous forms of luciferase exist, in a wide range of species (Greer and Szalay, 2002). The best known is firefly luciferase, which catalyzes the emission of green (~560 nm) photons from its natural substrate, firefly luciferin, in the presence of oxygen and ATP. Many luciferases have relatively short half-lives of just a few hours, or even ~1 h in some cases (Leclerc et al., 2000; Yamaguchi et al., 2003), making them good reporters of changes in transcriptional rate on a circadian timescale. Genes for firefly luciferase and a few others have been cloned and are available commercially. Luciferase luminescence is extremely dim, often too dim to be seen by the unaided eye in experimental applications. Various much brighter fluorescent reporters are available (Zhang et al., 2002), and two of these have been used successfully to monitor circadian rhythms: green fluorescent protein (GFP) (Kuhlman et al., 2000) and “Cameleon,” a sensor of cytoplasmic $[Ca^{2+}]$ (Ikeda et al., 2003). Luciferase, however, enjoys two principal advantages over the fluorescent reporters. First, luciferase does not require exogenous illumination: the light detected is emitted from the biological sample itself. Fluorescent reporters, on the other hand, require bombardment with toxic, relatively high-energy photons, so that the reporter can be excited and then re-emit lower-energy photons. Over long-term circadian experiments, phototoxicity is a serious concern with fluorescent reporters but a nonissue with luciferase. Second, background emission of light by biological samples (or by luciferase substrate alone) is generally extremely low, whereas autofluorescence background levels can be as high as the fluorescence signal of the reporter itself (Billinton and Knight, 2001). GFP fluorescence, for example, spectrally overlaps that of riboflavin (vitamin B₂), an essential enzyme cofactor found in biological tissues and culture media (Zylka and Schnapp, 1996). Thus, despite its modest photic output, luciferase is well suited as an optical reporter of circadian function. These transgenic organisms exhibit robust (although quite dim) circadian rhythms of bioluminescence, useful for a wide range of genetic and biochemical studies of circadian clock mechanisms. Expression of the luciferase gene fusion product confers on the host the ability to glow in the dark. The reporter visualizes transcriptional and translational expression of the attached foreign gene, and enables one to localize it to particular domains, cells, or organelles of almost any organism. This can be done noninvasively, with inexpensive, nonisotopic, easily available substrates, and at extremely high sensitivity under no significant endogenous background.

Luciferase Assay A luciferase assay is used to determine if a protein can activate or repress the expression of a target gene. Unlike the ChIP or EMSA assays, which only assess the ability of a protein to interact with a region of DNA, a luciferase assay is able to establish a functional connection between the presence of the protein and the amount of gene product that is produced. This assay is unable to determine whether the protein directly interacts with DNA itself; the protein could indirectly affect transcription by activating or repressing a separate protein or protein complex that affects transcription.

Kentucky courts have ordered several coronavirus patients to wear GPS ankle monitors after they refused to stay at home. Judges have ordered people who have tested positive or are suspected of having the virus to self-isolate, and those who ignore the mandate may be placed on house arrest, according to the Louisville Courier-Journal. As of Thursday evening, the fourth and most recent person ordered to wear a GPS monitor is a man who hadn't tested positive for coronavirus, but lives with a confirmed case and refused to sign a quarantine order, according to the Courier-Journal. The man's sister allegedly told health officials he "leaves the home often."

Singapore residents are able to go outside and exercise in their neighborhood parks as a break from the government's stay-at-home recommendations during the coronavirus pandemic. Visitors to the Bishan-Ang Mo Kio Park may encounter the unusual sight of a bright-yellow Boston Dynamics Spot robot dog with an important message. Spot will be strolling the scenic river park during off-peak hours to broadcast a message reminding park-goers to observe proper social distancing. Singapore's National Parks Board (NParks) and the Smart Nation and Digital Government Group are partnering on the trial, which is scheduled to run for two weeks. A remote operator will manage Spot, and the robot sensors will help it avoid people and obstacles in its path as it patrols. It will have an NParks human minder for company during the test period. The Straits Times posted a short video of Spot out for a walk in Bishan-Ang Mo Kio Park. Spot sports cameras that will be used to estimate the number of visitors at the park. "These cameras will not be able to track and/or recognize specific individuals, and no personal data will be collected," Singapore's GovTech agency said in a release on Friday. Singapore was hailed for its effective early COVID-19 response, though it later implemented stricter lockdown measures in April. Singapore is already using a Spot robot to deliver medicine and other needed items to patients at a community isolation facility. Boston Dynamics' robo-dog also went to work in Boston as a telemedicine provider safely linking medical staff with patients in need of health assessments. Spot's efforts show just a few of the creative ways robots are getting put to work to aid in the pandemic response. Robot helpers have enforced lockdown rules in Tunisia, stood in for graduating university students in Japan and staffed a smart hospital in China.

Obama and his Langley 3 Muslim Brotherhood operatives still pushing for draconian control of America. One of his disciples in Mayor Lori Lightfoot of Chicago wants to take policing in line with the New World Order of policing, her words not mine and an example of the factions based people. She is also the woman who blocked ICE officials, denying ICE access to the city's police database in an effort to protect the city's immigrant population from the threat of deportation, some of which are MS 13 gang members.

There is a lot of activity around Australia and New Zealand and I suspect it is another re-jig of an old plan a decade ago, for many of the elites to move to New Zealand in alignment with their SSp protection team, and Commander Barack Obama. This was their plan 10 years ago and due to objections it is understood the Christchurch earthquake too place, because of it.

As for May 17th date being given out and potential or possibilities of things happening, this show does not do dates we have seen too many come and go to raise expectations and it is a case of wait and see from my perspective. If certain things happen then great, if not we edge to closer with renewed hope of seeing people waking up and many now in positions of authority in many countries standing up, be it police, doctors, nurses or scientists all finally speaking out. YT, Twitter, FB and their factcheckers and Go ogle workers all of which are connected to the CIA and NSA, are the busiest on the planet now trying to delete all of the evidence, whilst frustrating that is a positive sign that they are losing control of not only the narrative but the masses.

OP-ED A lot of people are passing around rightwing Zionist Daniel Pipes's op-ed in the New York Times yesterday "strongly" opposing Israel's plans to annex portions of the West Bank. The marvel here is that the paper of record granted prestige newsprint to an explicitly racist argument. Pipes:

[A]nnexation would be likely to make more Palestinians eligible to become citizens of Israel. That would be a profound mistake, since its Arab citizens constitute what I believe is the ultimate enemy of Israel's status as a Jewish state, the one that will still be standing after the threats posed by Iran and Gaza have been dealt with. Citizens of Israel, unlike external enemies, cannot be defeated. Their allegiance must be won over, and the larger their number, the harder that becomes. Yes you read that right: "Arab citizens constitute what I believe is the ultimate enemy of Israel's status as a Jewish state." Can you imagine such an argument being made about Muslims in the U.S., or blacks, or any other minority? Impossible, in the New York Times. Just substitute the idea — Jews are our ultimate enemies because it is hard to win over Jewish allegiance to a Christian state - and you are inside Pipes's mental space. Why are Palestinians hard to win over to the Jewish state? There is not an ounce of concern on the part of this American writer for Palestinians as human beings with human rights in the land they have long lived in. No, they "lost" the conflict, so they must accept that, and having no rights under occupation is no concern to Pipes. "I am not someone who frets over the Israeli 'occupation' of the West Bank." Pipes's six reasons to oppose annexation all revolve around the "Jewish state" maintaining its status in western capitals. His concern is that by taking this step Israel will advance its own delegitimization, in people's minds. To wit,

[A]nnexation would alienate and weaken Israel's diminishing number of friends in the Democratic Party and in Europe... [A]nnexation would most likely lead to Palestinian fury... Residents of the West Bank could start a new intifada — uprising — costing Israeli lives and harming its international standing... [A]nnexation is sure to alienate Israel's Left... [leading] probably to a contingent of Israeli Zionists turning anti-Zionist...

Palestinian officials said Friday that Israelis are forcing banks in the occupied West Bank to close accounts held by the families of prisoners in Israeli jails to prevent the Palestinian Authority from providing stipends to them. Israel has long objected to the Palestinian Authority's payments to the families of prisoners and those killed in the conflict, including militants, saying it rewards terrorism. This goes against the Geneva convention and treatment of alleged prisoners, that are not prisoners just people sick of having their land stolen by these criminal Zionists, and not Jewish people. The Jewish people are used as pawns to fulfil their agenda, which is why so many of them are in poverty. It rewards terrorism they say, what does that mean in light of the US government who are giving this fake country $3-10B a year of American taxpayers money say then? Given that some said country has broken more UN resolutions than all other countries combined. They stole the peoples land, there is zero evidence whatsoever a country called israel has ever existed prior to it's creation by the Rothschild's group in 1948, that has devastated that whole region. The Palestinians view the payments as a social safety net for those living under decades of military occupation. The apparent move to target banks comes as the Palestinians face a potentially severe economic crisis after weeks of lockdown to combat the coronavirus pandemic. It also comes as Israel vows to annex large parts of the West Bank in line with President Donald Trump's Middle East plan, which I disagree with 100% for the record. Protesters shattered the windows of several bank branches and set fires outside some of them late Thursday and early Friday as word of the new regulations spread. Qadora Fares, head of the Palestinian prisoners' association, said relatives of current and former prisoners have told him they were forced to close their accounts because of a new Israeli law penalising banks for facilitating the payments. The father of one prisoner told The Associated Press he tried to use an ATM on Thursday but the request was declined. He says the bank told him to withdraw his funds and close the account because of the new Israeli regulations. He spoke on condition of anonymity out of fear Israel would target his assets. A bank manager said COGAT, the Israeli military body that oversees civilian affairs in the Palestinian territories, warned banks of the move months ago, saying it would go into effect Sunday. He said the banks are complying because they fear legal action or Israeli raids. He spoke on condition of anonymity, fearing retaliation from angry clients. Other bank managers declined to comment, citing similar concerns. These selfish brutal argument reflects the fact that the Times op-ed page belongs to Bari Weiss, a rightwing Zionist, who will try to keep the brand alive among elite influencers by any means necessary. Though this article is an own-goal, for it confirms the longstanding leftwing critique, that Zionism is racist. Leading neo-con Daniel Pipes is a long-time member of the Council on Foreign Relations, which has dominated US policy since WW2.

In light of Elon Musk and the mention of Deus Ex I decided to look into it as a potential clue and I am sure you will all at THI, be familiar with the narrative most of which was warned of in this show. Deus Ex is a series of role-playing video games, the series, set during the 21st century, focuses on the conflict between secretive factions who wish to control the world by proxy, and the effects of transhumanistic attitudes and technologies in a dystopian future setting. (remember recently we discussed of how they always say dystopian to make it out as a future event, when it is the past or now) Deus Ex (2000), Deus Ex: Invisible War (2003), Deus Ex: Human Revolution (2011), Deus Ex: The Fall (2013), Deus Ex Go (2016) and Deus Ex: Mankind Divided (2016). While each game has a distinct story, they are all set within the same world: an Earth of the future which has evolved a dystopian cyberpunk society. In this setting, several organizations compete for overall control of the world, several of the societies mentioned or shown are inspired by real-world and invented secret societies and conspiracy theories. The one constant through the series is the Illuminati, although FEMA, Majestic 12, and the Knights Templar are also featured. The main characters in the series possess artificially acquired superhuman abilities, referred to as "Augmentation". Deus Ex takes place during 2052, while the world is facing a crisis caused by a mysterious nano-virus called the Gray Death. In the midst of the crisis, JC Denton, a nano-augmented rookie agent for the United Nations Anti-Terrorist Coalition (UNATCO), is sent to eliminate terrorist cells, but ends up drawn into the various schemes of rival factions and secret societies, who are responsible for the epidemic. Once he arrives in Area 51, Denton has the choice between neutralizing technology and plunging the world into a second dark age, allying with the Illuminati, or merging with an advanced AI so as to impose a benevolent dictatorship. Invisible War takes place twenty years later, after a massive economic depression and period of war called the Collapse that was indicated by Denton's actions and a combination of possible events from the first game. The game's protagonist, Alex D, a clone of Denton, is drawn into a conflict between two seemingly opposing factions, and learns of conspiratorial factions which seek to drastically change the world, including JC Denton: Alex can perform missions for any of them, and eventually becomes able to choose which organization should rule the world. Human Revolution is set in 2027, twenty-five years before the first title, where corporations have extended their influence past the reach of global governments and the development of bio-mechanical augmentation by a few elite and powerful companies threatens to destabilize society. The game follows Adam Jensen, the security chief for bio-tech company Sarif Industries. After a devastating attack on Sarif's headquarters which leaves him near-death, Adam is forced to undergo radical augmentation surgery, and he becomes embroiled both in the search for the attackers and the political and ethical repercussions of augmentation technology. The Fall is a parallel story, set after the spin-off novel Icarus Effect. (The term refers to the phenomenon of businesses failing abruptly after a period of apparent success, where this failure is brought about by the very elements that led to their initial success. The historical script: Bulls take everything to ever more extremes and keep raising target prices along the way ignoring the technical charts that scream caution as technical disconnects keep stretching to historical extremes. Icarus flying to the sun with no consequences is the pervasive theme during each bubble.) As a side note, did you know over 70% of new manufacturing plants in North America, for example, close within the first decade of operations. Around 75% of mergers and acquisitions do not pay off – the acquiring firm's shareholders lose more than the acquired firm's shareholders gain. The icarus paradox. Augmented means to make bigger, greater or more complete and is indicative of the super soldier and robot program, but lets look at other aspects of it called Augmented reality. Augmented reality (AR) is an interactive experience of a real-world environment where the objects that reside in the real world are enhanced by computer-generated perceptual information, sometimes across multiple sensory modalities, Augmented reality is related to two largely synonymous terms: mixed reality and computer-mediated reality. It follows the story of Ben Saxon, an augmented former British SAS mercenary, who is on the run from his former employers, a group of augmented mercenaries that play a crucial part in the plot of Human Revolution. Mankind Divided is set in 2029, 2 years after the events of Human Revolution in a world dealing with the consequences of the previous game's events, regardless of the choice made by Adam at the end of Human Revolution, the Illuminati have twisted his message and augmented individuals are persecuted and feared. A disillusioned Adam works with an international taskforce (hinted to be a precursor to UNATCO in Deus Ex) designed to stop the rising wave of terrorism, brought on by the disenfranchised and desperate augmented, while working to uncover the perpetrators of the events that led to the current state of the world.

The NSA launched their new software platform on April 4th called ghidra, is it the Masonic G matched with Hydra spelt with a Y not an I? well their logo gives it away with a red dragon snake shaped in a mobius loop, a case of all hail Hydra for those familiar with Agents of Shield, which is a glorified version of the Rothschild's and Black Sun fighting. Then I saw this line We look forward to more collaboration with the open source community in 2020, open source is the NATO handbook developed by the CIA agent Robert David Steele, and our Clowns in Panic show proven again. This confirms the links between the CIA and the British subsidiary company of GCHQ, now as the NSA. All going on your phones, which they call cells, cells are for jailed people are they not? like social distancing is mirroring solitary confinement where your jail cell is your own homes, people who think their phones are smart, nope dumb, even worse is Alexa type machine, smart fridges and smart home and security devices, all part of the spying and jailing of the people. Still want that AT&T home security system, next time you stand next to the box say hi to Langley, Virginia and the NSA, they will be viewing you and listening in.

The benefits of shadow and inner work has come more sharply into view, none moreso in the past week or so for myself personally. These are often harsh and brutal lessons to learn and quite painful in so many ways, that many people choose to neglect it. We have all done that throughout our lives and some people come into your life for that very reason, to trigger your emotional responses, that can have varying emotions and reactions in return. For many it is to project at the messenger, and we have all witnessed that to degree and quite often I as the show host of a show that contains all of the topics that could potentially trigger us, often leaves this host resembling being the target end of a shooting gallery, with shots coming at me from all angles. But these are all lessons for us all to learn, myself included, and it is how you react to these situations determines how far the lesson is learned. Angry projection is a denial of the circumstances, denial of the latent issues and denial of your own responsibility of what made you react that way, well people can mask it all they like in projections at others, but those issues will never go away with that method, no matter how hard you project or deny the causal issue. Often in these cases the original trigger or action is overlooked in a plethora of words and distractions, diversions from the facts and selective memory syndrome is the most common aspect, and is all a ploy and defensive mechanism, because the person or persons have not addressed their own inner core issues. Ending that relationship, as a member of a group, love, work or friend partnership or family based relationships due to those triggers, will never make the problem go away, I know from my own experience of that with my former partner. It only festers and someone else will come along and trigger the same pattern or happenstance in your life, history always repeats until you address the problem. Like I mentioned the last show of how females go from one abusive relationship into another, it is not just bad luck it is an issue not addressed from the previous lesson, it keeps repeating because the victim, although in some cases it is not as all one sided as it seems, there are always two sides to a story, it keeps repeating as the wounds of the past have not been addressed. I mentioned in a show a few years back I have struggled to understand the lesson of why the many people I have helped, supported or cared for, all turn on you in a blink of an eye and you are the world's worst person or some other nasty labels. Then one member said to me "Thomas that is not your lesson to learn, it is theirs" and that made so much sense. The younger me would have blamed myself, maybe I didn't care or support enough? and all the other self doubts we all have would have surfaced, but now I see it for what it is, their failure and their lack of respect, and their failure to see or recognize the few who do actually help people, against the mass volumes who won't. Ms. Davisson, Shane Bales, Chloe and others are prime examples of that. I have had more than a few kicks in the teeth in the past few months, of betrayals and attacks, and the tendency is for one to be nasty back and or cynical of the nature and behavior of humanity, a broad swiping of the brush so to speak, but that would not go along with the message, principals and vibes that our show has laid out 4 years ago this month. Our message has been consistent, our development of the group in terms of understanding the bigger picture, the way you all embraced the painful unlearning process and jumped forward with the new learning has been a source of pride to me. Many have embraced the warnings of the inner and shadow work, the two worlds theory, a grasp of the 85/15 principal, the 2020 vision and all will start to see, how it was too late for the masses to wake up, how the information would become overloaded, and where the factions fit into the world stage and the alt media, and the all so encompassing dropping of the masks I first warned about 4/5 years ago, all unimaginable a few years ago and yet all came to pass. Many of you embraced it all and gained a better, and more of your own understanding, by doing the research this show host requested of you many times, I am not here to be followed, a guru, a savior or any of those things, just someone who got you to think and act for yourselves, and take your own responsibility in life. Many may feel this group is defined by The Trust, it's not and Kim will agree, I was never about the money, which is why I don't advertise, why I never monetized my YT or Spreaker channels or created my own Patreon either, although that Patreon has gone on way longer than I personally would have liked, but that is due to the Trust funds continuing to be blocked, and outside of my control. I came up with a simple plan of all Americans putting in $1 a week or more so we can then solve our own problems, and not wait for anybody's help, because waiting for anyone has never come to fruition or been in our best interest. A week last Monday there was an incident that leaves a very nasty taste in the mouth, oh the irony it was the exact same date 4 years ago, like a loop program, that Neil Keenan read out an Asian Black Dragon cabal script and I gave my reaction to that treachery, which 3 days later got me shunted out of Cosmic Voice, despite all the help and efforts of not only me, but my team of admins had done. It was unpleasant on both dates but out of the ashes of the previous transgressions led to a new path that launched THI. I called it that name as a message and something for us all to aspire to, a planet in Truth, in Honor and more importantly Integrity which way too few exhibit, is something all must work for and toward, including me. The message on our 4 year anniversary is what it has always been from day one, I will tell you what you need to hear, not what you want to hear and to think and act different, they are the embodiment of our show and what THI stands for, the show is not here to be positive or negative, it is here to provide you as near as the truth as possible and to encourage us all to develop. People ask me many times why I do this, and events recently made me question as to why also, with so many acting in poor behaviors and actions, I do what I have done since I was a child, protect those who are injusticed. Our system of life is broken, I could see that as a small child, riddled with lies and liars, a planet ran by thieves and psychopaths, vast volumes of people riddled with violence, greed, poverty, disease and a totally dysfunctional planet. I saw it all at a young age and gained knowledge from many many different and differing sources, through vast amounts of time of researching as I got older, and then ended up playing a semi lead role in exposing it all. How great a role will be decided by others over time, and not for me to say. But the greatest role of THI is we helped people overcome so many things that had plagued them, from the healings to the entity removals, to the shielding, we have had people walking away from the religious construct, people quitting social drugs, people quitting long and short term pharmaceutical drugs, people quitting alcohol, people quitting cults and witchcraft, people changing their habits and lifestyles, people learning again to care for each other, people meeting each other from all over the world and putting aside the cultural based prejudices and becoming friends, it has helped people gain a sense of pride, purpose and role in life, it has opened some of your throat chakras, taken many out of the astral harvesting system, enlightened many and got many of you to take personal responsibility again and that will always fill me with great joy, and nobody can or will take that away from me. I have had the critics, doubters and miscreants as well, and some accuse me of this, that and the other which overtime bears no relevance to the reality of who and what I stand for. I have carried on to the best of my abilities to do what is right for you all and if that is not good enough for some, then I can say at least I tried, and again if that is not good enough for some either, then I offer you a mirror for your own reflection and a question are you a descendant of tin man from the Wizard of Oz?
