

THI-SHOW TRANSCRIPT 2020-07-02

The outcome of this fake lockdown has determined the paths of many, altered the thinking of many and altered the focus of many. Some used it for positive purposes and many used it to re-enforce their desire for the old slavery system, mired in a nanny state mindset and for it to continue. As we go into a new phase it is important we re-assess where we stand in the process. What could I do better, what do I need to work on? and what is my focus? In a world of turmoil the key is how you focus and what you focus on. Is the focus other people? is it politics? is it drama? those in most cases are distractions and avoidance of the real focus. This whole charade was designed to throw people off track, and some in our own group have fallen for their game, and not played our or their own. Nothing has changed in the bigger scheme of things, things are still playing out and the clowns still try. Our role is to focus on preventing them spinning things out and delaying the real change, which they wish to avoid. The key now is for all to regroup, recharge and double efforts to shorten the time of the old system. Light up your beacons and give the dark forces and old system clowns a strong message.

imagine if there was a lockdown for stupidity? imagine if there was a vaccine against stupidity? imagine if there was an app for stupidity? would there be or would we notice many changes than currently? But imagine if there was an app for karma? how suddenly things would change then, but then the question would be, why can't you self regulate your own behavior? imagine if there was an app for service to others? How different things would be.

Nice to see many activists stationed outside of clown and authority figures homes and shaming them, please don't react violently, your presence is enough to make them uncomfortable, for the first time in their lives they are being made accountable for their actions. News readers homes are the key to that.

I had a great time with another Polish TV recording, I did last Saturday with some of the Polish group members. Special thanks to Stanislaw and Jolante for arranging it all. They asked a variety of questions and was a more flowing conversation as there was no translations from my replies, that is being done separately, and prepared with subtitles for the up and coming video, expected to be out this week. Another show is being arranged with them this month, and I am also being requested to do a show for THI Germany as well.

I will be doing another THI expose show this weekend likely Saturday or Sunday evening at normal time, and will be added to the must listen to show section, three and possibly 4 more must listen to shows are in the pipeline currently, but this one was date sensitive and so will go out first.

THI Texas having done a brilliant presentation and chartered their path on their projects, are now ready for launch and as of Wednesday have now launched TPC Texas as an official business, they in part have some of their own funding and the TPC will be available for small donations to help them and we wish them all well.

The new chief of the US federal media agency, a Trump-appointee, has sacked three senior officials, raising fears that networks will be politicised. Michael Pack, a conservative filmmaker and former associate of ex-White House adviser Steve Bannon, has also begun to install Trump loyalists at the agency. The firings have been criticised by liberals and some conservatives. Mr Pack has defended his actions as transitional steps that any new leader of an organisation would take. The US Agency for Global Media (USAGM) is a taxpayer funded body that oversees global broadcasters including Voice of America, Radio Free Europe/Radio Liberty, Radio Free Asia and Middle East Broadcasting. The USAGM is tasked with broadcasting independent news to a global audience of more than 280 million people. It was created in 1942 to combat Nazi propaganda. The director of Voice of America, Amanda Bennett, and her deputy Sandy Sugawara resigned on Monday after Mr Pack was confirmed by the Senate. The heads of Radio Free Europe, Asia, Middle East Broadcasting as well as the Open Technology Fund were ousted on Wednesday. Mr Pack has not offered public details on why these individuals were fired. President Donald Trump has recently criticised Voice of America, calling its reporting "disgusting" and accusing it of spreading "propaganda" in favour of China. The leaders of the Radio Free Europe/Radio Liberty and Middle East Broadcasting networks - Jamie Fly and Alberto Fernandez - were both appointed during Mr Trump's presidency. Mr Fly was a former adviser to Republican Senator Marco Rubio while Mr Fernandez was a former ambassador. A number of long-time advisory board members have also been removed, and Mr Pack is now the chairman of these outlets' boards of directors. Mr Pack has also appointed a number of former Trump administration officials - including from the Departments of Justice, Homeland Security and Office of Management and Budget - to high level positions in the agency, CNBC reported. Is this finally a sign of fighting back against media, or will big guys be left to spew their pro pagan da?

The UK government is planning to relax its travel quarantine rules in early July for some countries. UK officials are talking to their counterparts in Portugal, France, Italy, Greece and Spain. However, the UK hopes to make an announcement on 29 June that it has secured a number of "travel corridors". The government had previously said that the quarantine would be reviewed every three weeks and 29 June marks the end of the first three-week period. A travel corridor would mean that two people travelling in both directions between two countries would not have to self-isolate after they travel. The first travel corridors could come into force on 4 July, although that date is by no means confirmed. Even if certain routes are exempt, the travel quarantine for people arriving from other destinations will remain in place. A senior aviation source has told the BBC that the quarantine could remain throughout the summer for anyone arriving from countries which do not have a travel corridor with the UK. What utter drivel this is faction fighting games imo.

Swiss pharmaceutical giant Novartis has agreed to pay more than $642 million to settle a lawsuit which accused it of paying kickbacks to doctors, among other allegations, the US Department of Justice said Wednesday. Part of the settlement pertained to the company's use of three foundations to funnel payments to cover costs for patients taking its multiple sclerosis drug Gilenya and kidney cancer drug Afinitor. Another part centered on alleged bribing of doctors to prescribe the company's medication. "Through this settlement and others, the government has demonstrated its commitment to ensuring that drug companies do not use kickbacks to influence the drugs prescribed by doctors or purchased by patients," Assistant Attorney General Jody Hunt said. Novartis is accused of having hosted tens of thousands of speaker programs and events which the Department of Justice said were used to bribe physicians.

According to newly released data from Princeton University's Eviction Lab, one of the first places in the country to post worrisome eviction numbers is Milwaukee, Wisconsin - up 37% on last year. In Columbus, Ohio, eviction hearings are taking place in a convention centre in order to accommodate the number of cases and adhere to social distancing guidelines. In North Carolina, a 9,000-case backlog is set to resume on 21 June. Michigan's State Court Administrative Office estimated when its moratorium comes to an end this month, 75,000 evictions will be filed. In New York City alone, a coalition of advocates estimated that 50,000 evictions will be filed once Governor Andrew Cuomo's statewide moratorium ends. "Eviction was always too high in this country, but these are extreme numbers," said Emily Benfer, a visiting professor of law at Columbia University and a former housing lawyer. "The United States can expect an avalanche of evictions and it will negatively impact entire communities... We will be recovering from that for generations to come without federal intervention." A week after Kansas City officially opened up its courts, Tamika Cole was due to appear at 10:30am to make the case to a judge that she be allowed to stay. She had no lawyer, and only her own documentation, her own version of events and some advice she got from a tenants' rights non-profit. Cole said she suffers respiratory issues. The eviction courtrooms are on the seventh floor of a building that has only one consistently functioning elevator, and can hear hundreds of cases a day, making it unclear how effectively social distancing would be maintained. But in order to keep a roof over her head, Cole didn't have a choice - she had to go. And once she did, she was almost certainly going to lose. A study of eviction court outcomes in Kansas City from 2006-2016 showed that over 99% eviction cases went against the tenant.

A US soldier has been charged with terrorism offences for planning a deadly ambush on his unit by sending information to a neo-Nazi group. Ethan Melzer, 22, stands accused of sending sensitive details about his unit to the Order of the Nine Angles. The US Department of Justice calls it an "occult-based neo-Nazi and racially motivated violent extremist group". He was allegedly planning for information to be passed to jihadists, who would then carry out an attack. His plan was thwarted late last month by the FBI and the US army. He was arrested on 10 June. Private Melzer has been charged with conspiring and attempting to murder US nationals, conspiring and attempting to murder military service members, providing and attempting to provide material support to terrorists, and conspiring to murder and maim in a foreign country. Private Melzer enlisted in the US Army in December 2018 and began his active service in June 2019. "Melzer allegedly attempted to orchestrate a murderous ambush on his own unit by unlawfully revealing its location, strength, and armaments to a neo-Nazi, anarchist, white supremacist group." He is accused of planning to provide information intended to be conveyed to jihadist terrorists, she added. He allegedly exchanged communications regarding passing information about an anticipated deployment of his unit to a purported member of al-Qaeda. Members of the Order of Nine Angles, also known as O9A, have expressed admiration for both Nazis, such as Adolf Hitler, and Islamic jihadists, such as Osama Bin Laden, the statement said. Due to profiling this is not a one off event, they have many more of these types of mind controlled candidates.

Shootings in New York City increased by a massive 358 percent over the last seven days, compared with the same time last year. The skyrocketing numbers have prompted the police commissioner to warn the worst is yet to come. There were 12 shootings during the seven-day period in question last year, while 2020 has seen 55. More than 70 people were wounded in the 55 shootings, with at least 19 injured on Saturday when the city saw over a dozen incidents, most of which occurred in the Bronx. In one of these incidents, a man died after being shot in the neck while washing his car. "It takes a long time to turn a ship that sees an iceberg directly in front of us," said New York City Police Commissioner Dermot Shea, adding that the numbers had been trending upward "for a while" and that he had warned of a "storm on the horizon" in December. Shea also said NYC had seen 100 shootings in May, the first time the city had hit that number in around five years. The latest figures come only a week after Shea ordered the disbanding of an anti-crime unit which saw plainclothes police officers stopping individuals and searching for weapons. The effort at reform was sparked by nationwide protests following the killing of George Floyd by a Minneapolis police officer last month. Shea said that the tactic of "stop, question and frisk" deployed by the unit was too dated and was harmful to communities of color in that it eroded trust between police and the citizens. "I am proud of what they did, but we made mistakes," he concluded. NYC Mayor Bill de Blasio has also addressed the uptick in violence and the controversy of disbanding the anti-crime unit, saying the city was "not going back to the bad old days where there was too much gun violence," nor was it going back to the bad old days of worsening the situation with bad police tactics to deal with it. I would like to say it is just a coincidence, but it is not, and this is how the clowns running that state reacted to it.

Facing pressure from thousands of constituents calling to defund the police, New York City slashed $1 billion from the police budget. But some city lawmakers -- and the protesters calling for change -- think the cuts weren't sweeping enough. The City Council approved the $88.9 billion 2021 budget late Tuesday night while hundreds of protesters, many of whom have camped outside City Hall for a week, waited to hear the results. The New York Police Department is the largest force in the US and employs over 55,000. The department budget was almost $6 billion for the 2020 fiscal year. The approved budget includes nearly $484 million in cuts and will reallocate $354 million to other agencies "best positioned to carry out the duties that have been previously assigned to the New York Police Department, like the Department of Education, the Department of Health & Mental Hygiene and the Department of Homeless Services. Another $162 million was slashed through "associated costs," the council said in a statement.

The two-metre rule has no basis in science, leading scientists have said as the Government comes under increasing pressure to drop the measure. Writing for The Telegraph, Professors Carl Heneghan and Tom Jefferson, from the University of Oxford, said there is little evidence to support the restriction and called for an end to the "formalised rules". The University of Dundee also said there was no indication that distancing at two metres is safer than one metre. The intervention comes as two Government ministers suggested on Monday that the rule is likely to be relaxed following a review commissioned by Boris Johnson, the Prime Minister. On Tuesday, shops experienced daily footfall drops of 41 percent compared to the same day last year, while enormous queues built up outside because of social distancing requirements. Examining the current evidence for the two-metre rule, Prof Heneghan and Prof Jefferson looked at 172 studies cited in a recent review in The Lancet and found just five had dealt explicitly with coronavirus infection in relation to distance. Only one mentioned coming within six feet of a patient, and that paper showed proximity had no impact. "Queueing outside shops, dodging each other once inside, and not getting too close to other people anywhere: social-distancing has become the norm," they wrote. "The two-metre rule, however, is also seriously impacting schools, pubs, restaurants and our ability to go about our daily lives. "Much of the evidence in this current outbreak informing policy is poor quality. Encouragement and hand-washing are what we need, not formalised rules." A University of Dundee study suggested that 78 per cent of the risk of infection happens below one metre and there is just an 11 per cent chance of any increased distance making a difference. Dr Mike Lonergan, a senior statistician and epidemiologist who reviewed 25 papers compiled for the World Health Organisation (WHO) said: "Our conclusion is that avoiding contact is very important and that a one-metre distance might be slightly better than just avoiding contact, but the difference is unlikely to be much. These data give no indication that two metres is better than one metre." On Monday, the Isle of Man became the first area of Britain to relax the two-metre rule, saying businesses will no longer be required to implement social distancing and employees can return to work as usual. Howard Quayle, the island's Chief Minister, said: "I'm sorry that we had to come between you and a hug, and I am glad that today we can give people their hugs back." The Government has promised to review social distancing before pubs and restaurants reopen in July amid concerns that many businesses will not be profitable if it remains in place. Andrew Goodacre, the chief executive of the British Independent Retailers Association, said onlookers should not be fooled by the long queues and warned that one in 10 independent businesses may not ever reopen. "Despite what you will see this week, which will be buoyant, the tough times are still coming," he added.

Despite that report the corrupt 3 states launched this new directive. New York, New Jersey and Connecticut have asked people travelling from states where virus cases are rising to go into self-isolation for 14 days. New Jersey's Phil Murphy said people in the three states had been "through hell and back" and did not want "another round" of virus infections. Some southern and western states have been reporting record numbers of cases. The University of Washington predicts 180,000 US deaths by October - or 146,000 if 95% of Americans wear masks. So far, the US has recorded more than 2.3m cases of the virus and more than 121,000 deaths. Currently, those states are Alabama, Arkansas, Arizona, Florida, North Carolina, South Carolina, Texas, Washington and Utah, the governor of New York state Andrew Cuomo told reporters. People coming from those states - including returning New York, New Jersey and Connecticut residents - will be asked to quarantine upon arrival for 14 days. Anyone found breaking the quarantine could face fines of $1,000 (£800) rising to $5,000 for repeated violations, Mr Cuomo said. He added that US states would be added or taken off the quarantine list depending on the number of new cases per 100,00 people or the rate of positive tests.

Money shortage news: There has been two reports in the UK of the police calling out and arresting criminals this past month. One is a 700 plus arrest of top figures in organized crime involving drugs and the second the police calling out banks for systematic crime against customers. A police commissioner has accused the UK's major high street banks of perpetrating "serious organised crime" against their customers, potentially causing billions of pounds of losses over at least a decade by forging signatures to win court cases and repossess homes. People will say now that is great news, but I am asking people to exercise caution because drugs is big money and clowns near the top of the money tree need money more than we do. Like what happened with drug runners in South and Central America, the trade was moved into America and the CIA continued to run it, without the extra cost of middle men, gangsters and other overheads. As for the banks issue, remember in Clowns in Panic we told you they were wanting to get rid of banks, Central banks in particular plus other high street banks in favor of "decentralizing" and their desire for you to become the bank via phones and then microchips, and so like the drug issue it is a reduction of costs and overheads.

Wirecard collapsed on Thursday owing creditors almost $4 billion after disclosing a gaping hole in its books that its auditor EY said was the result of a sophisticated global fraud. The payments company filed for insolvency at a Munich court saying that, with 1.3 billion euros ($1.5 billion) of loans due within a week its survival as a going concern was "not assured". Wirecard's implosion came just seven days after EY, its auditor for more than a decade, refused to sign off on the 2019 accounts, forcing out Chief Executive Markus Braun and leading it to admit that $2.1 billion of its cash probably didn't exist. "There are clear indications that this was an elaborate and sophisticated fraud involving multiple parties around the world," EY said in a statement. Creditors have scant hope of getting back the 3.5 billion euros they are owed, sources familiar with the matter said. Of that total, Wirecard has borrowed 1.75 billion from 15 banks and issued 500 million in bonds. "The money's gone," said one banker. "We may recoup a few euros in a couple of years but will write off the loan now." Coatue Management and nine other hedge funds likely earned more than 1.5 billion euros ($1.7 billion) this week on bets against Wirecard after the German payments firm collapsed on Thursday. Wirecard shares crashed to 2.5 euros on Thursday from 104.5 euros a week ago, before the company revealed a $2.1 billion hole in its accounts. That has landed Coatue Management, the hedge fund with the largest short position, a 271 million euro profit on paper, according to Reuters calculations. Shorting a stock involves borrowing it from an institutional investor, such as a pension fund, selling it, and then buying it back to return to the investor when the shares have fallen, pocketing the profit. Together, the 10 hedge funds have made hundreds of millions between the company announcing its mammoth accounting hole on June 18 and Thursday, when it applied for insolvency. The shares have crashed 97% in the last week. London-based TCI has made a profit of 173.6 million euros, while Marshall Wace and Greenvale have made 146.5 million and 110.1 million, respectively, according to Reuters calculations. This like other alleged hackings is out and out money stealing and laundering by the clowns.

Here is another example of that statement and this is about the 6th stolen or hacked report we have had in the show since April, proving yet again their lack of funds. A leading medical-research institution working on a cure for Covid-19 has admitted it paid hackers a $1.14m (£910,000) ransom after a covert negotiation witnessed by BBC News. The Netwalker criminal gang attacked University of California San Francisco (UCSF) on 1 June. IT staff unplugged computers in a race to stop the malware spreading. And an anonymous tip-off enabled BBC News to follow the ransom negotiations in a live chat on the dark web. Cyber-security experts say these sorts of negotiations are now happening all over the world - sometimes for even larger sums - against the advice of law-enforcement agencies, including the FBI, Europol and the UK's National Cyber Security Centre. Netwalker alone has been linked to at least two other ransomware attacks on universities in the past two months. At first glance, its dark-web homepage looks like a standard customer-service website, with a frequently asked questions (FAQ) tab, an offer of a "free" sample of its software and a live-chat option. But there is also a countdown timer ticking down to a time when the hackers either double the price of their ransom, or delete the data they have scrambled with malware. Instructed to log in - either by email or a ransom note left on hacked computer screens - UCSF was met with the following message, posted on 5 June. Six hours later, the university asked for more time and for details of the hack to be removed from Netwalker's public blog. Noting UCSF made billions a year, the hackers then demanded $3m. But the UCSF representative, who may be an external specialist negotiator, explained the coronavirus pandemic had been "financially devastating" for the university and begged them to accept $780,000. After a day of back-and-forth negotiations, UCSF said it had pulled together all available money and could pay $1.02m - but the criminals refused to go below $1.5m. Hours later, the university came back with details of how it had procured more money and a final offer of $1,140,895. And the next day, 116.4 bitcoins were transferred to Netwalker's electronic wallets and the decryption software sent to UCSF. UCSF is now assisting the FBI with its investigations, while working to restore all affected systems. It told BBC News: "The data that was encrypted is important to some of the academic work we pursue as a university serving the public good. "We therefore made the difficult decision to pay some portion of the ransom, approximately $1.14 million, to the individuals behind the malware attack in exchange for a tool to unlock the encrypted data and the return of the data they obtained.

The federal government sent $1.4 billion in coronavirus stimulus money to nearly 1.1 million dead people, Congress' independent watchdog agency said Thursday. The finding was part of a report from the Government Accountability Office examining the federal government's coronavirus relief spending in March and April. It comes as lawmakers weigh another round of stimulus funding while the economy struggles to recover from the coronavirus-induced recession. The watchdog agency said that the payments to dead people came during the first three rounds of stimulus checks that were rushed out in April. The CARES Act directed stimulus checks of up to $1,200 to be sent to individuals who filed taxes in the last two years and made less than $99,000 a year. Families were eligible for more money. GAO found that the Treasury Department and the Internal Revenue Service did not use government death records to exclude deceased individuals from receiving a stimulus check in part because of a legal interpretation the agencies were operating under. While the IRS has access to death records kept by the Social Security Administration, the Treasury and the Bureau of the Fiscal Service - which actually sent out the checks - does not. The IRS in May said on its website that payments to dead people must be returned to the government, but it does not have a plan recoup the funds, the GAO said.

Al Gore, UN Secretary-General, others now demanding 'Great Reset' of Global Capitalism June 25, 2020 These are truly dangerous times for those who support individual liberty and free markets At a meeting hosted by the highly influential World Economic Forum earlier in June, powerful officials from nonprofits, government, business, academia, labor unions and activist groups announced their plan for a "Great Reset" of global capitalism. It's a proposal they acknowledged has only been made possible because of the "opportunity" provided by the economic destruction caused by the novel coronavirus. Supporters and attendees of the meeting included Prince Charles; António Guterres, the secretary-general of the United Nations; Ajay Banga, CEO of MasterCard; Bernard Looney, CEO of BP; and Gina Gopinath, the chief economist at the International Monetary Fund, among many others. The purpose of the Great Reset isn't merely to enact policies that would lead to additional wealth redistribution, but rather to completely overhaul the world's existing structures and institutions. In an article published on the World Economic Forum's website, Klaus Schwab, the founder and executive chairman of WEF, wrote of the Great Reset, "Every country, from the United States to China, must participate, and every industry, from oil and gas to tech, must be transformed. In short, we need a 'Great Reset' of capitalism." "to enact policies that would lead to wealth redistribution" oh dear Mr. Gore suddenly it is called wealth redistribution as you are at the lower end of the financial scale and are being harvested. Funny you were not complaining of that whilst looting the world with your fake climate change, which only benefit vampires like you and the UN. This is evidence of split in the faction wars, we warned many of the lower (who thought they were the upper) elites would get pushed out in this next phase of the struggle for control, we the people have to build an alternative and the TPC is the vehicle to do so. We all don't like this world the way it is being run, but we can't sit back waiting for Q or Trump to do something, that is our responsibility, not theirs.

There is a new launch by clowns trying to circumvent the new system and their desperate lack of funds, and so they launched their latest money scam called the Q Initiative. I found no evidence linking it to Q and Trump, but would certainly confuse many to parting with their funds, thinking it was related. Another crypto based scam that followed the RV, Dinar, Zims and Dongs currencies being traded in for stable currencies, on the promise those devalued currencies would rise exponentially. This is the promise of this latest scam, just collecting your dollars, pounds and euros for fresh air tokens to keep them running a bit longer. But their manifesto confirmed what our show has been saying a while that the money pot is dwindling. They stated the world's total economic activity is around 100 trillion US dollars, it used to be $123T perhaps the DOD misplaced another $23T lol, and here is the key line, the total amount of money in the world is between 40 and 90 trillion dollars (depending on the definition of money). So, there is not enough to go round, and this is why they were forced into drastic measures of halting the economy and closing 100k's of businesses down. Black Lives Matter and now Q Initiative, which will be followed by another inevitable false flag or donation type event, is all about harvesting everything what is left from the people.

So why are these new hacking and money savings events like police defunding etc, it proves what we have said all along the money pot is dwindling, and their means of cheating, stealing and laundering has been stifled so much now, they have no other options except the Trust. They don't want the Trust and it appears that will not be released anytime soon, given the Trustee was asking for t-shirt and hat donations in a recent broadcast, although my personal opinion is it has been set back due to the ongoing split and will not be fruitful until corrected, time will tell. But they don't want the Trust out because their power and control game will be ended. So they fight on with a smaller pool of money hoping for a divine intervention, their gods to come back and save them or the Trustee to quit, of which they have made several attempts against her to do that, all to date have failed. So, they are left with a massive problem, because the old system cost 10's of billions per day to run, and so now they are in cost cutting mode as we had warned. Banks, police, government, agencies and military are all under threat of severe cuts, because if money supply is anywhere near $40T, that means there is only a 1/3 of the money and so only a 1/3 of the programs and jobs can be funded. All of which this show has repeatedly warned of, and the Trustee told all the higher echelons would unfold since 2016 onwards, including Trump. The old system was too costly and now they have to clear up their own mess and reduce costs, all to keep themselves in a game they have already lost. Some people like to focus on the negative and some accuse our show of being negative, but that is a massive victory largely achieved by the work of this show and also the Trustee. In the past fortnight there was another issue detected with the moon, of off world entities in alignment with on world clowns firing frequencies again at the planet. Their equipment was destroyed and the planet has extra shielding now to counter any further attempts. It was suspected they were trying to re-install a new version of Saturn - Moon matrix aligned with rogue AI, well that failed.

Operation Blackout was a 2019 exercise simulating sabotage of civilian infrastructure, "terrorism" and psychological operations against American citizens on the day of the US 2020 Election. The private U.S.-based, Israeli-founded company Cybereason organized it with members of the DHS, FBI and the U.S. Secret Service, and also the law firm Venable. Cybereason is led by ex-members of Israel's military intelligence 8200 Unit, best known for its cyber offensives against other governments, and is advised by former top and current officials in both Israeli military intelligence and the CIA. In addition, it is funded by and partnered with top U.S. weapons manufacturer and government contractor Lockheed Martin and financial institutions with clear and direct ties to Saudi Crown Prince Mohammed bin Salman and White House adviser and the president's son-in-law Jared Kushner. Cybereason's CEO, Lior Div, has openly admitted that he views his work at Cybereason as a "continuation" of his service to Israel's intelligence apparatus. The Israeli Cybereason has discreetly become a major software provider to the U.S. government and military through its direct partnership with Lockheed Martin, which followed the defense company's decision to open an office at the Israeli military's new cyber operations hub in the Negev desert. The simulation, titled "Operation Blackout," was set in a fictional U.S. swing state called "Adversaria". It pitted: a Red Team, of "ethical hackers", ethical hackers from Cybereason, academics and security professionals from the private sector. They were simulating an anarchic group's attempts to undermine democratic institutions and systems of governance, especially by creating havoc during the election, but apparently not wanting to cancel the election. The team was led by Cybereason co-founder Yonathan Striem-Amit, a former contractor for Israeli government agencies and a former operative for the elite Israeli military intelligence Unit 8200, against a Blue Team of veteran law enforcement officers from the US Secret Service, Department of Homeland Security, the FBI, and the Arlington, VA police. The opposing teams were supervised by a "white team" composed of members of Cybereason's staff and Ari Schwartz — a former member of the White House's National Security Council and the National Institute of Standards and Technology (NIST) — who set the rules of the simulation and would ultimately decide its outcome. Schwartz also used to work for the Center for Democracy and Technology (CDT), a major backer of Microsoft's ElectionGuard software. The Red Team implemented "a fantastic set of moves that demonstrated daring and creativity", including "Autonomous vehicles were leveraged...to wreak havoc at polling stations and cause many deaths and injuries" (how this is in any way "ethical hacking" is left unexplained). The Red Team also used false flag operations and psychological warfare. When the Red Team "crash autonomous buses and cars into the polling lines and polling locations", the team makes ISIS (a group not without ties to Israeli intelligence) claim responsibility. In addition "Deep fakes were used by the Red Team to impersonate the superiors of pollsters and law enforcement officers, and direct them to execute actions that benefited the Red Team. Deep fakes were used to create fake videos and spread misinformation about the candidates in the race. Accounts of media "influencers" were hacked. Telecom networks and news outlets within the fictitious states were also hacked and flooded with deepfakes, aimed at spreading disinformation and panic among U.S. citizens. However, in a somewhat curious conclusion (undermine, but not cancel), "the primary mission of the Red Team failed due to overkill. Instead of undermining the election, they forced the Blue Team to cancel the election and they caused a terrorist attack". The exercise concluded that "having clear channels of information or disinformation was very important for affecting public sentiment for both sides, including "Control of social media networks for journalists, influencers, and political figures that allowed the Red Team to easily spread misinformation through supposedly "legitimate" channels. The exercise explicitly excluded hacking election equipment from consideration to focus instead on everything else in the electoral system. Cybereason and unnamed former members of the British Government and the Metropolitan Police repeated this on December 11 2019, in Operation Blackout London. This time it was a fictitious UK city, Adversaria. "Both teams performed well, and they deployed a number of tactics and techniques throughout Operation Blackout London. However, in the end, the Red Team wasn't able to achieve its goals, and the Blue Team scored a clear victory because they were able to maintain its goals of limiting disruptions. and maintaining normalcy and open and free elections. With many excellent former government and law enforcement experts on my team, we were able to counter Red's moves and maintain public trust," said Alessandro Telami, senior director at Cybereason and Operation Blackout London Blue Team Leader. The participants were Ari Schwartz, Cybereason, Israel Barak, Sam Curry, Sanat Clugh, Yonathan Striem-Amit. For those who have followed our FRWL series this type of report will come as no surprise, in fact we could have forecasted it. This is exactly how the clowns operate, spending vast fortunes on running sinister plots via computer simulation games that always involves terror, what is wrong with these people? Why is that country and it's agency and rich connections to it, always running war and money games, designed to kill or harvest the people? Why is there $3.8B a year plus given to erroneously by the American people funding this type of skullduggery? Why can't they run scenarios for peace? why can't they take the many of the Jewish people numbering 14-15M globally out of poverty? Why are the non compete companies like Lockheed Martin operating on their behalf, for those new Lockheed Martin and several other so called government contractors get their materials at 50% of cost under a 1976 non compete agreement signed off by the American government. The light will continue to be shone on these people who are essentially running an old off world program which failed in 2012, and over time our show and narrative will be vindicated in this stance. These psychopaths have to be stopped, they may go by the name of Jewish, but these psychopaths care not for the people, whether Jewish or not, they are harvesters and not interested in humanity one iota.

RACE ISSUE It began with Confederate generals and quickly escalated to Columbus and former US presidents; now the monument-removal crusade has come for Jesus, with racial activist Shaun King insisting his depictions are 'racist propaganda.' "Yes, I think the statues of the white European they claim is Jesus should also come down," King tweeted on Monday. "They are a form of white supremacy. Always have been." He also argued that all "murals and stained glass windows of white Jesus, and his European mother, and their white friends should also come down," calling them "a gross form white supremacy... tools of oppression [and] Racist propaganda." The FBI is investigating several recent incidents of racist emails being sent to thousands of affiliates of major institutions including Harvard University, Stanford University, and Iowa State University, according to multiple reports. According to The Ames Tribune, around 4,900 individuals with Iowa State University email accounts were sent messages supposedly from Equity Prime Mortgage offering loans to “whites only” and making racist threats against Black individuals. The Harvard Crimson reported Monday that “thousands” of Harvard-affiliated individuals received the same email, and The Stanford Daily reported that the emails were sent to 3,600 Standard University-affiliates. Affiliates of the University of Michigan were also targeted. Harold Reid, a media strategist representing Equity Prime Mortgage, told The Harvard Crimson that the company was working with the FBI to investigate the emails, which were sent following a compromise of Equity Prime Mortgage systems. I am suggesting these emails were sent to those organizations and they were involved in the sending of them.

Lincoln County, Oregon, has exempted non-white people from a new order requiring that face coverings be worn in public — to prevent racial profiling. Health officials announced last week residents must wear face coverings in public settings where they may come within six feet of another individual who is not from the same household. But people of color do not have to follow the new rule if they have “heightened concerns about racial profiling and harassment” over wearing the masks, officials said. “No person shall intimidate or harass people who do not comply,” health officials said. With mask requirements becoming more common, activists have raised concerns that the directives could put non-white people in danger. “For many black people, deciding whether or not to wear a bandanna in public to protect themselves and others from contracting coronavirus is a lose-lose situation that can result in life-threatening consequences either way,” ReNika Moore, director of the ACLU’s Racial Justice Program, told CNN. Trevon Logan, who is black, said orders to wear face coverings are “basically telling people to look dangerous given racial stereotypes that are out there.”

A white Macy's employee was brutally assaulted by a black man in the middle of the store a few days ago. Video shows the assailant, Damire Palmer, punching the man in the head as he crawls on the ground begging Palmer to stop. The assailant's brother, who filmed the crime and posted it proudly to social media, claims that the victim used the N-word. Even if true, that wouldn't remotely justify felony assault. But it isn't true. Macy's investigated and confirmed that the attack was "unprovoked." Also, the N-word claim is absurd on its face. A Macy's employee is not going to casually refer to his black customers as racial slurs. If he had that habit, he would have been fired a long time ago. What actually happened, from the looks of it, is that the Palmer brothers selected a victim based on his race, beat him mercilessly, and then slandered him. They damaged him physically and then tried to ruin his life. If the "hate crime" designation has any meaning, this should fit the bill. Yet, to this point, no hate crime charges have been filed, nor has there been any public discussion about filing them. It should be noted that a man who assaulted a Macy's employee last year was charged with a hate crime because he used anti-gay slurs during the attack. The prosecutor in that case said that the attacker

"subjected [the victim] to offensive physical contact" and that this was done "because of his perception of the victim's sexual orientation." Well, was this latest Macy's assault not "offensive physical contact" due to the attacker's perception of the victim's race?

Numerous groups are hunting down, humiliating and ruining the lives of pupils who say a 'wrong' thing, express support for the police, or simply stay silent. And morally illiterate teachers and schools are encouraging it. I don't like vigilantes at the best of times. But when a 16-year-old organiser of @Smithtown_Racist_Callouts brags about outing peers for making racist comments online, in order to prevent them from going to college, you know that something really scary is going on. There are now numerous groups of teenagers in the United States who are devoted to the project of exposing and humiliating other children whose remarks they perceive as racist or problematic. Anonymous Instagram accounts devoted to calling out racist comments made by fellow students have appeared in the United States. Within a few hours, one such account launched at San Marcos High School in San Marcos, California, attracted around 900 new followers. The aim of these student groups is not only to punish and humiliate, but also to ruin the future prospects of someone who made a racist comment. They hope that one outcome of their exposure will be to prevent their target from gaining acceptance into university. Individual would-be vigilantes have also joined in the game of outing racist teenagers. One Instagram account run by a "white British Male who supports BLM" states: "We don't condone racism - DM us any information on these racist thugs!". Youthful vigilantes policing social media are often far too ready to interpret people's remarks as evidence of their racism. All it takes is for a post to be deemed "insensitive" before they are condemned as racist. Invariably, calling someone out serves as an invitation to mob them, like a playground 'pile-on'. Children facing the wrath of their sanctimonious vigilante peers can easily feel intimidated and socially isolated. Brynna Barry, 16, a student at a Catholic day school in Jacksonville, Florida, was called out for advocating for the Blue Lives Movement on Instagram and TikTok. This teenager, whose dad is a police officer, swiftly became the target of a hate campaign. She noted that her "own friends were commenting that I was a racist" and that, therefore, they could not support her. "Things travel fast. I'm nervous about my address getting leaked," she noted.

A banner was flown over an English soccer stadium last week stating White Lives Matter, and it was condemned by the media, the coaches, the players and the government as racist and inappropriate. The bot elements of the public jumped on the bandwagon as it is safety in numbers with them, all condemning it. And there you have it with the news, 3 main stories, virus, race and someone stole our money, oh my Langley script writers must have been furloughed as well, unless they were redeployed to the various factcheckers groups. In an up and coming show we will reveal how this mind controlling events unfold and who does it. But this is what we warned of in several shows over the past 2 years, they would roll out the racial division card, and the moronic elements of our society have bought into it. But the very fact that the media is backing it, tells you there and then it is a program the media are running for the clowns, and not the people. The non thinking people have bought into the most idiotic repeat after me script ever, apparently white lives don't matter, apparently yellow lives don't matter, apparently native lives don't matter and apparently Hispanic lives don't matter either, only Jews and Black lives matter is essentially what the increasing idiotic and desperate media and authorities are telling us, and some chip on their shoulder jackasses are going along with it. The Black Lives Matter is another distraction and has all the hallmarks of the Jewish persecution and holocaust programming. The term Black Lives Matter is an out and out racist statement. You were the only ones persecuted check, we need reparation money check, said reparation money or donations does not go to either peoples, check, see the pattern now? Over $100M collected for black lives matter, and the bulk of it went to the DNC party, oh the irony of that, and a giant piss take on the black people falling for this rubbish. Remember the militia arm of the Democrat party was called the KKK, another organization said to be against black people, but where used in a reverse psychology plan to get blacks to hate on whites. That was the program of the KKK, not saying by any means all in that group were following that program, because the treatment of blacks in this country up to 1970's was beyond shocking as an observer from the UK. Anti black marches largely made up of women and children spewing their hatred, white only faucets, toilets, shops, bars and restaurants, was a shame and blight on this country that has taken a few generations to correct. If you think my reference between blacks and jews is racist or unfair here is a remind of why it is not, judge for yourselves if these words said over a 100 years ago has and is playing out now. This was said by a lead Jewish think tank based person in 1912 called Israel Cohen. "We must realize that our party's most powerful weapon is racial tensions. By propounding into the consciousness of the dark races, that for centuries they have been oppressed by whites, we can mold them into the program of The Communist party. (communist and communism was created by the Zionist sub gray group, known today as Jews but I must stress not all Jews, Communism is not Russia, not China, not Cuba or Vietnam) We will invest to instill in the whites, a guilt complex over their exploitation of the negroes. We will aid the negroes to rise in prominence in every walk of life, in the professions, and in the world of sports and entertainment. With this prestige, the negro will be able to intermarry with the whites, and begin a process which will deliver America to our cause." Hating on people because they are a different color? and yet this is the same country who shouts the loudest for ET meet and greets, but if you can't get on with your own species because they are different, why on Earth would you wish to meet something from another world? more is the point, why would they want to bother to come here? Perhaps the best description for harmony is based on the humble piano instrument, are you only going to play white keys? or our the blacks only going to play the softer flat tone of the black keys? Well your are not going to play many songs doing that are you? The only way you get a beautiful tune out of a piano is to use both sets of keys and create harmony, something we the people need to grasp and follow, and tell the racist script writers to go and F themselves.

As many of you can now see our shows now are largely a confirmation of the information, we put out in our shows ahead of time. There is no news anymore only a repeat of 3 subjects, 1. the virus and the fake reaction to it 2, is about organized racial division and 3. various stories proving they have no funds. There is no other or new news, I guess with the cuts in funding the Langley based script writers are no longer employed or have run out of narrative. THI has long been the news now, and why we are so much attacked, not only current news, but news ahead of it's time, this is been proven time and time again. We have forced them along with other alt media into a desperate situation of trying to control the narrative, but despite adding new jobs to their armory like fact checkers, it is just not working and they are losing control of the narrative. A review of any of our past shows will reveal what I have just stated to be correct, in fact we review lots of information within this show, and perhaps another look at the alt media entity known as Q should be looked at and them held as accountable as our show? We are all told to trust the plan, but without knowing the plan what are we trusting? Trust Trump, fine, but you are asking us to trust a politician and since when have they been proven to be trustworthy? You are asking for people to be patient and trust you and all will be revealed, most of what is revealed was revealed years ago, what about now? The danger is Q is turning into a Drake style wait club on steroids, as we wait for documents, indictments and the repeat narrative of mass arrests. The same mass arrests narrative that first reared it's head by coven and agency operative David Wilcock back in 2002, under the pseudonym of Art Aqua. Eighteen years and a mass of different alt media characters all saying the same thing, mass arrests, but I will ask about why one person of the many who need to be arrested and hasn't, despite Q and Q Anons presenting the evidence of such against this person, and yet he still roams large and amongst us, John Podesta or correct name Pedo-sta. Why hasn't the recently defunded NYPD, many of whom have seen the videos along with Hillary and Huma Abedin not arrested those evil excuses for human beings? I am not here to denigrate Q, but at some point the plan has to unfold into actions to be valid. Something to ponder on. I remember back a few years ago members complaining nothing is going on, and I warned in first week of 2018 the information in the next phase will be volumous, and we need to get ready for it, it has and it did and we don't hear those statements anymore. But lets look back on our shows and the various themes we have brought forth and see how many of you now recognize them in your day to day lives. The Ouroborus program, where the clowns implement one program that swallows a previous one. The two worlds narrative can anyone listening to this not see it now? the statement made a few years back makes far more sense now to many than then. Immigration of the future will not be country to country, but from their world into ours. We warned of the masks falling and the old system panicked that much they introduced new masks for people to wear, all designed to put you in fear and dull the throat chakra.

We also highlighted and brought forth the shadow and inner work that all of us would be required to do. It was not exactly a new concept but the drive behind it was, the show pushed you into looking at it and also implementing it, and we then went onto the deeper aspects of that personal work. Which has since prevented a number of suicides within our group and some at Cosmic Voice. Seen dozens drop long term pharma drugs, dozens dropped recreational drugs, dozens dropped excess alcohol consumption and an increasing number of people walking away from organized religion. That is the gist of our show, and all of the above has not cost a single dime, just time and effort. The payback I receive is not measured in donations, but me seeing you all improve yourselves, your understanding and thinking is now on a much higher level than when you first joined. It is that program that has to be rolled out on a wider scale across countries and the world, as it is that program aligned with cooperation and togetherness that will change the world, once and for all.
