

THI-SHOW TRANSCRIPT 2021-02-11

This will be a very different show in many ways, it will not include the latest distractionary bullshit called the Impeachment trial, formulated by clown agency people with their puppeteers called the MSM or better still the portal people. I had a shorter week to prepare this show and so it was cobbled together a bit initially, but developed more in the last two days. A mixture of news, insights and exposes and two very revealing and deep pieces that will leave you all in a pondering format, for many hours and perhaps for days to come. Deep condolences from THI to the family of Clifford Stone who sadly passed away yesterday, he brought much knowledge forward on the truth to the UFO community, your fight is over, may we meet again Clifford. UK Madness is in full effect over there, door to door testing is an invasion of privacy and should be considered as marketing drugs, which is an offence. As a man goes outside to sit in his own car to smoke, and is told by the police it wasn't lawful to sit in his car and to go back inside. West Midlands Police assistant chief constable Mark Payne released a statement, backing the officer for the stance he took on the night. You sir are a complete non thinking jackass, that should have SS on your brown uniform or be fired for rank stupidity.

As the UK announce their latest fascist control methods this week. Hotel quarantine for UK arrivals will cost up to £1,750 a head and lawbreakers can be jailed for up to 10 YEARS, and the man with the apt triple barrel name, announced this week by Matt Hancock. The Health Secretary finally confirmed some key details of the scheme after days of delay and rows with hotel firms, days before it launches on February 15. But in farcical scenes he admitted fewer than 5,000 rooms have been signed up so far - at just 16 hotels - despite an estimated 1,400 people arriving each day from red list countries. And in a blow to Brits' summer holidays, he hinted the measures may last to Autumn at least, if a vaccine is not effective enough against new variants. He said measures at the border would be split into three parts - testing, quarantine and enforcement - all to launch from Monday. The below measures are currently for England but similar measures are being worked up for Scotland, Wales and Northern Ireland. From Monday, UK or Irish residents who have been in one of 33 'red list' countries in the last 10 days, will have to quarantine in an "assigned hotel room" for 10 days at least. They must book this before travel, with a portal and guidance opening this Thursday, at a cost of £1,750 ($2400) for an individual travelling alone. With a portal and guidance opening, interesting terminology, perhaps will reveal more later in the show. This includes the hotel, transport and testing. Who can afford that out of the general populace? The fact they named exactly 33 countries should not be lost on listeners, and tells you the influence of the Masonic Hebrew Egyptian Israelite Annunaki groups. What this confirms is A: travel is essentially banned B: lockdown will never end (I warned of that in May of last year, and see no evidence of it changing) C: These are not quarantine camps, these are concentration camps replete with human experimentation programs, sound familiar? D: Hotels are ran by intelligence agencies E: the government have no clue how to handle or implement anything F: none of these measure have or will apply to the rich, famous or elite and G: we the people are collectively as stupid as it gets, for tolerating this shit. Masks are to make you cut off the oxygen to the brain and give you respiratory disease, which just happens to be the symptoms of the said virus, what a coincidence is that? Read the fucking label, it says these masks are not for preventing disease, infection or Covid FSS, and should not be used for prolonged purposes. I will repeat again the lockdowns will never end until the people stop complying, new strains of the virus is pure bullshit and another excuse to continue lockdowns, with the added fear measure to push waivering people to get there experimentation tool, it is not a vaccine, they told us that and the non thinking people ignored it. Lockdowns are killing off the elderly, because they have spent all of our pension funds, and can no longer afford to keep them. Lockdowns are to teach people about being separate when we need to come together. Lockdowns are to close down businesses, jobs and stop the flow of money, why? they don't have enough money to fund the entire planet anymore. Lockdowns are a depopulation program. Lockdowns are a control mechanism to cover up the crimes of the elites. Lockdowns are a way to introduce the Great Reset, which benefits the few and not the all. Lockdowns are to show the public how incompetent Governments are, so the people accept the decentralization program of a central one world government, ran by the same psychopaths who ruined everything before. The fake vaccine program is a way to generate and harvest all the funds up, to enable them to carry out their world domination plan, the billionaires game I warned of in June 2019, before all the unsanity began.

Reality check for humanity, comply and die? free or slave? Normal or better? together or social distance separation? The real virus is the compliant people unable to think for themselves, too content for their new parents the government, to run their lives for them. The compliant people are responsible for this, the deaths, the job losses, the business losses, the freedom losses are ALL down to you. It will not return to normal, there is no normal only a subset of conditions, of what the people are willing to tolerate. You are the conspiracy, and that is not a theory that is a fact. The answer to it all is, THINk before you believe.

The Justice Department plans to seek the resignation of most U.S. attorneys appointed by former President Trump. The transition move between administrations is expected to impact 56 U.S. attorneys who were confirmed by the Senate, according to a Justice Department official. The official said the calls for such resignations may begin as early as Tuesday. The official said the process is anticipated to take weeks, but did not indicate when the resignations would take effect. Department officials reportedly have scheduled a call with U.S. attorneys for the transition. But President Biden's Justice Department plans to keep at least two prosecutors to continue their work. Acting Attorney General

Monty Wilkinson requested Delaware U.S. Attorney David Weiss to stay on during a Monday call, in order to keep working on his investigation into the president's son, Hunter Biden. Special counsel John Durham, appointed by former Attorney General William Barr, will also be asked to continue his investigation into the origins of the previous probe into the Trump campaign's links to Russia. But he will resign as U.S. attorney for the District of Connecticut. The move to ask for the resignation of a previous administration's appointed U.S. attorneys is seen as a mostly routine move. Trump's first attorney general, Jeff Sessions, called on 46 U.S. attorneys appointed by former President Obama to resign. Currently, 25 of the 94 U.S. attorneys are operating in an acting manner after several appointed by Trump resigned following his election loss. The very fact these jobs are switched around depending on which party is in office, should raise concern amongst the people. As, clearly these jobs are not appointed upon ones ability, only their affiliation to a party.

The number of newborns registered with the government in China dropped almost 15% last year, amid widespread concern over falling birthrates in the world's most populous country. According to figures published by the Ministry of Public Security this week, there were 10.03 million new babies registered in 2020, compared to 11.79 the year before, a decrease of 14.9%. The news comes as last year, China recorded the lowest birthrate since the People's Republic was founded in 1949. China's demographic issues could pose serious issues for the world's second-largest economy, when the current working-age population reaches retirement. Experts worry if the trend continues, or the population begins shrinking, China may get old before it gets rich. According to the most recent data from the National Bureau of Statistics, there were 250 million people over 60 years old in China last year, around 18% of the population. China's fertility rate fell dramatically, from a peak of almost six births per woman between 1960 and 1965 to 1.5 between 1995 and 2014. At the same time, the number of people over the age of 65 increased from 3.36% in 1965 to almost 10% in 2015, when the one child policy was switched to allowing two children. In 2019, people over the age of 65 accounted for 12.6% of the total population. And yet the clowns in authority still insist the population is going up, despite evidence globally of drastically reduced birth rates in every major continent or country. Common sense question, with the dramatic increase in global deaths attributed to Covid, I wonder will they record a drastically reduced populace after the Covid nonsense?

Calcalist reports the Helsinki Committee for Human Rights is expected to announce that Pfizer is conducting unauthorized human experiments in Israel. The Supreme Helsinki Commission - in charge of supervising human trials in Israel - is expected to submit an opinion to the Health Ministry stating that the vaccine campaign led by the Israeli government together with Pfizer is fundamentally clinical research, a code name for human trials, and thus, needed to receive explicit Committee authorization. The opinion has already been formulated and in coming days is expected to be handed over to Health Ministry Director Hezi Levy, possibly even today. "Reading the contract signed between the Israeli government and Pfizer, it is clear, unequivocal and unambiguous, that this is a clinical study for all intents and purposes, and thus, it needed to be approved by the Helsinki Committee," a senior official explained to Calcalist, adding: "And that's what will be written in the Committee's opinion: 'There's nothing wrong with clinical trials, on the contrary, but clinical trials (human trials) must get committee approval, and of course, from the people on whom the trial is being conducted, while giving the right to refuse to be part of the trial. These are very basic matters,'" he concluded. Helsinki Committee Chairman Prof. Eitan Friedman refused to comment on the publication, and told Calcalist that the Committee would present its position in an orderly manner and in the usual way, not through the media. Since the Committee is a statutory committee (established by virtue of the law), the practical implication is that it will determine that the experiment on humans that Pfizer is currently conducting in Israel is illegal. The expected letter from the Helsinki Committee is of far-reaching significance. First, the Committee can determine that the Israeli government must stop transmitting information to Pfizer, something that could cause Israel to be in breach of contract. If the government decides to ignore the Committee's directive, every Israeli citizen will be able to appeal to the Supreme Court on the matter. The Committee can also demand that all Israeli citizens be informed that, the results of the vaccine will be passed on to a third party, and also oblige the Health Ministry to request approval of those vaccinated to be an experiment subject. In addition, neither the Committee nor the citizens of Israel have any need to use legal tools: A short letter from the Committee announcing that it does not approve the experiment, could greatly complicate matters for Pfizer and the Israeli government, because in consequence of that letter, Pfizer may not contact the FDA and request final approval for the vaccine. "It is inconceivable that the FDA would grant final approval to a vaccine based on a clinical study rejected by the Israeli Helsinki Committee," the paper said. Health Communication Lecturer at IDC Herzliya International School Dr. Yaffa Shir Raz responded to the Helsinki development, saying: "The question of questions: Where does this scandal put the Green Passport? Can the government even continue to promote the compulsion of the experiment on us? The road to court has never looked more paved, and this time, it's hard to see how they'll ignore it." Update: After publication of the Calcalist report, Helsinki Committee Chairman Prof. Eitan Friedman issued a denial, saying that he and the entire Helsinki Committee continues to recommend the vaccine in those not contraindicated, continuing that "the vaccine is not a clinical trial. I guess he was threatened by Mossad then, as it is they who are conducting the trials. It is based on clinical study, it is based on experimentation, there is no connection between the vaccine and a clinical test." He says the "commotion" centers around one issue alone, and that is that "as a Supreme Committee, some of its members are jurists, and they read parts of the agreement between the Health Ministry and Pfizer, and we as an ethics committee want to assure that the rights and privacy of Israeli citizens are guarded." He continued: "Also when a clinical trial, which is a worthy trial, is performed, we do want to know from a scientific standpoint what happens, what the effects are of the vaccine, what are the adverse effects; yes, we very much want to know and lend a shoulder. But, we want to know if, in the framework of the contract with Pfizer, those rights are being protected." Senior Israel Democracy Institute attorney Dr. Tehila Schwartz-Altshuler told Calcalist: "Anyone who might claim this is not a clinical study is simply a liar. This is the most extensive study of human beings in the 21st century. Israel is becoming the experimental field, not to mention the backyard for the whole world, it may be a beautiful and altruistic thing, but this should have been shared with the citizens of Israel." She says: "There's no clearer research hypothesis than in section 2.1 of the contract between the State of Israel and Pfizer, which states that the purpose of the 'experiment' is 'to measure and analyze'. To say it isn't research is a lie. In section 2.2 the word 'data' appears again and again, and the idea is that, it is information from which you want to learn something other than, transfer it to the medical file of the patient you have treated. This is a collaboration for research and therefore there are also 'Principles of collaboration'. Moreover, Schwartz-Altshuler explains that "Article 4 - as with any medical research agreement - has terms and terminations and there are agreements regarding the safety of the project. This further reinforces the fact that this is a study. For example, under the clause, the agreement will be revoked if one of the parties decides that it is 'scientifically insignificant'." The public have been bamboozled into thinking this is a vaccine, it's not, it's an experimental study that is killing people in large numbers. It has no live virus, only genetic code and the public are going along with it, with the ridiculous notion if they take the vaccine, the lockdowns will end, they won't until the people end them. Despite deaths going down in the UK, and large numbers of vaccines given, the Health Minister told the British people this week, to forget summer holidays. To the math deficient, that is another 8 months in lockdown minimum.

Two separate stories both involving the same company. How a large defense software company, Leonardo SpA, stole the United States presidential election, using advanced military grade software, and satellites, was outed in an Italian court. The aircraft bombs being built by Rwm Italia Spa factory, with registered office in Gedi (Brescia) and plant in Domusnovas (South Sardinia) – controlled by the German group Rheinmetall – announces an appeal against the Italian government, for the revocation of export licenses to Saudi Arabia and the United Arab Emirates. "We are facing an 'to company' provision, which in fact hits hard only Rwm Italia", says the managing director, Fabio Sgarzi, after the notification received by UAMA, of the revocation of the export authorizations of aircraft bombs issued between 2016 and 2018. For years the plant had been in the crosshairs of pacifists, who gave the "sarcastically" reward the leaders of the BlackRock investment fund with the Black Planet Award. Among the reference shareholders of Rheinmetall as well as other corporations of the Weapons Lobby, including the Italian industry specialized in aerospace and defense Leonardo spa, after a journalistic investigation had revealed that some of the bombs produced in Sardinia had been collected in Yemen, in the areas of massacres that had killed civilians and children. The international reports, already reported by Gospa News in Weapons Lobby- 1 investigation, had explained that the components of the explosive devices were exported to the United Arab Emirates separately, and only there were they assembled to be resold to Saudi Arabia. Where they were used against the rebels Houti Yemenis in a terrible civil war, triggered by a claim for independence by this ethnic Shiite Islamic confession exacerbated by religious rivalry with the Saudis, of Sunni-Wahabi confession, who did not hesitate to send death row inmates to Al Qaeda to win an interminable conflict that began in 2015. But the Italian company of the Rheinmetall group is not going to suffer the blockade of exports by Italy. Fabio Sgarzi said those who find themselves bearing the consequences of all this, together with the company, are the hundreds of local workers and their families (100 direct operators operate in the Domusnovas plant alone, currently in Cig – Italian payroll subsidy – and others 100 indirect. The State first made growth possible, authorizing multi-year contracts, and then canceled everything, as if nothing had happened. And in the eighteen months of suspension the Government was totally inert, not taking any initiative to contain the very serious economic and employment damages deriving from its decisions “. The Rwm assures workers and their families that it will do “the impossible to obtain the annulment of an unjust and punitive measure”. It will also be interesting to see if BlackRock, among the shareholders of Rheinmetall, will also express its disappointment to the Italian government, being one of the important investors (which went from 0.86% to 1.13 with the BlackRock Fund Advisors and to 0.79 with BlackRock Investment Management) also of Leonardo spa, a 30.2% subsidiary of the State. So, the weapons got blocked and UAE was involved in being a facilitator for the Saudis, now you know why Israel and UAE formalised an agreement, likely to circumvent the sales of weapons. No, coincidence Black Rock are involved in it, they are the Black Sun elements, with now not only installed as the lead of the Federal Reserve, but also have two branches in Mexico and Israel, which coincidentally the Trustee sent the last two payments to those same countries.

Separate from the GameStop issue, the secretary of the Treasury is one of the world-renowned experts on markets, on the economy. It shouldn't be a surprise to anyone she was paid to give her perspective and advice before she came into office,” Psaki told reporters, ignoring the obvious conflict of interest. It then got downright surreal, when Psaki implied that it was sexist to mention Yellen's conflict of interest because she's a woman. “I'm also happy to repeat that we have the first female treasury secretary,” Psaki said in opening her response to the question from a reporter, going on to say Yellen's communications team would typically take those questions instead of her. Janet Yellen accepted $810,000 in speaking fees from Citadel, owner of Robinhood. Reporter: Are there any plans to recuse herself from advising the President on GameStop and Robinhood situation? Citadel was unknown until our show mentioned them in October 2018, they run the whole of NYPD and also the US treasury given they overruled the Treasury staff and also the President. Psaki is a former worker at CNN, which means she worked for the CIA. $810K to listen to a weasely old bag, whilst people are starving and homeless, this is what is wrong with this country.

501 Deaths + 10,748 Other Injuries Reported Following the COVID Vaccine, Latest CDC Data Shows. The numbers reflect the latest data available as of January 29 from the CDC 's Vaccine Adverse Event Reporting System website. Of the 501 reported deaths, 453 were from the U.S. The average age of those who died was 77, the youngest was 23. oops. There has been two spikes in deaths since this bullshit pandemic started, 1. when the lockdown was implemented and 2. when the experimental trial not the vaccines were implemented, is that a pattern?

Much talk about the new Covid variant going on in certain countries, and there is now three strains of the variant called the South African, Brazil and UK variants. In the Phase 3 trials of the Astra Zeneca testing of the jab, took place in three countries also, South Africa, Brazil and the UK. The exact same countries as the variants, I will tell you what this virus gets more magic by the week, such extraordinary abilities to create patterns only for the benefit of the conspiracy theorists it seems. Or, the fact is the Phase 3 trial of the vaccine had a differing variant of the virus to release into those populations, in a deliberate attempt to keep the illusion going and also the lockdowns. Also no surprise is the massive rise in care homes deaths in the UK since the vaccine was given, and if you think the last two pieces are a coincidence, you have seriously lost the plot as well as the ability to think.

Being in a prominent position and speaking of Covid in negative or questioning terms, comes with a death sentence it seems as these examples show. Alexander Kagansky: Russian COVID-19 Vaccine researcher found dead Pierre Nkurunziza: The longest-ruling President of Burundi. Died suddenly in 2020 after expelling the WHO team and refusing to impose restrictions as a response to COVID-19. Mario Ohoven: German business leader who has been a regular guest on German talk shows. Died in a Car crash two days after criticizing a new Covid-19 lockdown. Thomas Oppermann: German politician who suddenly died en-route to be interviewed in a talk show after voicing criticism of the governments Covid-19 measures. Thomas Schäfer: Hesse's Finance Minister who was unexpectedly found dead on train tracks. Brandy Vaughan: Internationally reputed big pharma dissident who was found dead in December 2020. Li Wenliang: First raised awareness of COVID-19 by publishing about it online. Disciplined by the Chinese government for "spreading rumours", posthumously pardoned.

The spiritual advisor for both Barack Obama and George W. Bush during their time as President has been sentenced to six years for his role in a multi-million dollar investment fraud scheme. Haha Obama and idiot Bush with a spiritualist, more in need of psychiatrist if ya ask me. Kirbyjon H. Caldwell, 67, was sentenced by US District Judge S. Maurice Hicks on Wednesday in Shreveport, Louisiana where he and his co-defendant, Gregory Alan Smith, were indicted in 2018. One wonders did his god tell him to do that? If so, which one?

OP-ED This has all the hallmarks of what Elon Musk and other computer research centers globally are planning, and I believe the Covid test and vaccines are part of this research, of how to implement this in the future. An intelligent material that learns by physically changing itself, similar to how the human brain works, could be the foundation of a completely new generation of computers. Radboud physicists working toward this so-called "quantum brain" have made an important step. They have demonstrated that they can pattern and interconnect a network of single atoms, and mimic the autonomous behaviour of neurons and synapses in a brain. They report their discovery in Nature Nanotechnology on 1 February. Considering the growing global demand for computing capacity, more and more data centres are necessary, all of which leave an ever-expanding energy footprint. 'It is clear that we have to find new strategies to store and process information in an energy efficient way', says project leader Alexander Khajetoorians, Professor of Scanning Probe Microscopy at Radboud University. 'This requires not only improvements to technology, but also fundamental research in game changing approaches. Our new idea of building a 'quantum brain' based on the quantum properties of materials, could be the basis for a future solution for applications in artificial intelligence.' Here is a common sense idea, perhaps if the agency clowns and governments stopped collecting everyone's data to spy on them, to use against them and also as advertising marketing, we wouldn't need extra data centers or computing capacity machines. Quantum brain For artificial intelligence to work, a computer needs to be able to recognise patterns in the world and learn new ones. Today's computers do this via machine learning software, that controls the storage and processing of information on a separate computer hard drive. 'Until now, this technology, which is based on a century-old paradigm, worked sufficiently. However, in the end, it is a very energy-inefficient process', says co-author Bert Kappen, Professor of Neural networks and machine intelligence. The physicists at Radboud University researched whether a piece of hardware could do the same, without the need of software. They discovered that by constructing a network of cobalt atoms on black phosphorus, they were able to build a material that stores and processes information in similar ways to the brain, and, even more surprisingly, adapts itself. The energy efficiency I believe is related to the crypto generating modules, remember your data they collect is used to generate bitcoins and the likes. Self-adapting atoms In 2018, Khajetoorians and collaborators, showed that it is possible to store information in the state of a single cobalt atom. By applying a voltage to the atom, they could induce "firing", where the atom shuttles between a value of 0 and 1 randomly, much like one neuron. More binary nonsense again to keep us in the Matrix.

They have now discovered a way to create tailored ensembles of these atoms, and found that the firing behaviour of these ensembles mimics the behaviour, of a brain-like model used in artificial intelligence. In addition to observing the behaviour of spiking neurons, they were able to create the smallest synapse known to date. Unknowingly, they observed that these ensembles had an inherent adaptive property: their synapses changed their behaviour depending on what input they "saw". 'When stimulating the material over a longer period of time with a certain voltage, we were very surprised to see that the synapses actually changed. The material adapted its reaction based on the external stimuli that it received. It learned by itself', says Khajetoorians. These are the chips for the robot armies and cops, self learning and adapting robots is a disaster waiting to happen. Exploring and developing the quantum brain The researchers now plan to scale up the system and build a larger network of atoms, as well as dive into new "quantum" materials that can be used. Also, they need to understand why the atom network behaves as it does. 'We are at a state where we can start to relate fundamental physics to concepts in biology, like memory and learning'. 'If we could eventually construct a real machine from this material, we would be able to build self-learning computing devices, that are more energy efficient and smaller than today's computers. Yet, only when we understand how it works, and that is still a mystery, will we be able to tune its behaviour and start developing it into a technology. It is a very exciting time.' If you are a complete idiot yes it is an exciting time, add in psychopath as well, this is the transhumanism path these clowns are going down, and like everything else on this planet, will only be available to the greed based harvesters with the most money. This is not development, this is a destruction of a Source based creation, but then most of those pushing this are Satanic Luciferians, backed by the Jewish Mafia and Hebrew Annunaki crew. Common sense question to the religious community, what is your god doing to stop this abomination of it's alleged creation? Is this further proof of our claim that the god is actually an Artificial Intelligence here, and why this abomination plan continues unabated?

This was part of a speech given by the entity known as Mr. Putin. Judging by the statistics, even despite the deep crises in 2008 and 2020, the last 40 years can be referred to as successful or even super successful for the global economy. Starting from 1980, global per capita GDP has doubled in terms of real purchasing power parity. This is definitely a positive indicator, according to the money based people yes. Globalisation and domestic growth have led to strong growth in developing countries, and lifted over a billion people out of poverty. So, if we take an income level of $5.50 per person per day (in terms of PPP) then, according to the World Bank, in China, for example, the number of people with lower incomes went from 1.1 billion in 1990 down to less than 300 million in recent years. This is definitely China's success. In Russia, this number went from 64 million people in 1999 to about 5 million now. Still, the main question, the answer to which can, in many respects, provide a clue to today's problems, is what was the nature of this global growth and who benefitted from it most. Of course, developing countries benefitted a lot from the growing demand for their traditional and even new products. However, this integration into the global economy has resulted in more than just new jobs or greater export earnings. It also had its social costs, including a significant gap in individual incomes. What about the developed economies where average incomes are much higher? It may sound ironic, but stratification in the developed countries is even deeper. According to the World Bank, 3.6 million people subsisted on incomes of under $5.50 per day in the United States in 2000, but in 2016 this number grew to 5.6 million people. Meanwhile, globalisation led to a significant increase in the revenue of large multinational, primarily US and European, companies. By the way, in terms of individual income, the developed economies in Europe show the same trend as the United States. But then again, in terms of corporate profits, who got hold of the revenue? The answer is clear: one percent of the population. And what has happened in the lives of other people? In the past 30 years, in a number of developed countries, the real incomes of over half of the citizens have been stagnating, not growing. Meanwhile, the cost of education and healthcare services has gone up, three fold. A case of give it to you in one hand and take it from the other hand, where your income went up but in reality your purchasing power went considerably down. Inflation, which is another tax adds to that loss of purchasing power also. In other words, millions of people even in wealthy countries have stopped hoping for an increase of their incomes. In the meantime, they are faced with the problem of how to keep themselves and their parents healthy, and how to provide their children with a decent education. According to the International Labour Organisation (ILO), in 2019, 21 percent or 267 million young people in the world did not study or work anywhere. Even among those who had jobs (these are interesting figures) 30 percent had an income below $3.20 per day in terms of purchasing power parity. 267 million children left on the scrapheap, is a staggering number and goes against the basic principle of failing not only the children, but young adults as well. This leads to regression of our species on a mass scale, and these greed based harvesters only want enough to produce large earnings for themselves. They speak of global warming and energy pull backs, yet no one is addressing the chronic health problems produced by Pharma companies, the lack of basic education globally, because if you think American education is valid, you need a raincheck, it is nothing short of appalling on all levels. No one is addressing of how we advance our species with these set of parameters that has pervaded society now for the past 100 or so years. These imbalances in global socioeconomic development are a direct result of the policy pursued in the 1980s, which was often vulgar or dogmatic. I beg to differ these policies were started in 1880, not 1980. This policy rested on the so-called Washington Consensus with its unwritten rules, when the priority was given to the economic growth based on a private debt, in conditions of deregulation and low taxes on the wealthy and the corporations. The corona virus pandemic has only exacerbated these problems, it was designed to us why. In the last year, the global economy sustained its biggest decline since WWII. By July, the labour market had lost almost 500 million jobs. Yes, half of them were restored by the end of the year but still almost 250 million jobs were lost. This is a big and very alarming figure. In the first nine months of the past year alone, the losses of earnings amounted to $3.5 trillion. This figure is going up and, hence, social tension is on the rise, at the same time, post-crisis recovery is not simple at all. If some 20 or 30 years ago, we would have solved the problem through stimulating macroeconomic policies (incidentally, this is still being done), today such mechanisms have reached their limits and are no longer effective. This resource has outlived its usefulness, this is not an unsubstantiated personal conclusion. According to the IMF, the aggregate sovereign and private debt level has approached 200 percent of global GDP, and has even exceeded 300 percent of national GDP in some countries. At the same time, interest rates in developed market economies are kept at almost zero, and are at a historic low in emerging market economies. First, everyone must have comfortable living conditions, including housing and affordable transport, energy and public utility infrastructure. Plus environmental welfare, something that must not be overlooked. Second, everyone must be sure that they will have a job that can ensure sustainable growth of income and, hence, decent standards of living. Everyone must have access to an effective system of lifelong education, which is absolutely indispensable now and which will allow people to develop, make a career and receive a decent pension and social benefits upon retirement. Third, people must be confident that they will receive high-quality and effective medical care whenever necessary, and that the national healthcare system will guarantee access to modern medical services. Fourth, regardless of the family income, children must be able to receive a decent education and realise their potential. Every child has potential. This is the only way to guarantee the cost-effective development of the modern economy, in which people are perceived as the end, rather than the means. Only those countries capable of attaining progress in at least these four areas will facilitate their own sustainable and all-inclusive development. These areas are not exhaustive, and I have just mentioned the main aspects.

In the late 1990's Russia's poverty rates rose to 29 percent. In the early 2000s, incomes increased and allowed a significant amount of people to rise above the poverty line. Poverty rates in the early 2000s stayed constant at around 10 percent. Unfortunately, the poverty rate has seen an increase in recent years, with 13.5 percent of Russians living in poverty in 2016. The contrast between the rich and the poor in Russia is apparent, studies have shown that Russia's most affluent 10 percent control roughly 77 percent of the wealth. Largely due to the original Putin and his oil buddies is why. The number of Russians living below the poverty line has grown by half a million since early 2018, according to official data. Russia's poverty rates totaled 14.3%, or 20.9 million people, in January-March 2019, according to Russia's State Statistics Service (Rosstat). That's up from 13.9%, or 20.4 million people, in January-March 2018. Talking about it is one thing, doing it is another. The lack of verifiable actions by any country or government on this planet is damning, and that has to change.

By Kevin Barrett, Veterans Today Editor, for Unz.com In the year 1666 the whole Jewish world went crazy, of course that was the year of the C'est Que Vie act as well as the fire of London that preceded it. A manic-depressive madman named Sabbatai Zevi, aided by his loquacious PR flack, Nathan of Gaza, had declared himself the Messiah. History hadn't been kind to the Jews. Their self-image as God's chosen, destined to rule over the goyim cattle, clashed with messy reality. Persecuted here, expelled there, despised everywhere, Jews felt themselves a nation in decline. Many were ready to follow a mad messiah who promised to "make Israel great again." As the Sabbatean frenzy swept through Jewish communities across Europe, North Africa, and the Middle East, Establishment rabbis were powerless to contain it. Jews abandoned their businesses, sold their belongings, and did so much masochistic penance that the price of nettles soared. Those who could afford to bought tickets for the Holy Land. This was Zionism 1.0, and it set the tone for future iterations. Fast forward 350 years to 2016. Another psychologically unbalanced individual, a certain Donald J. Trump, crowned himself with a red baseball cap and declared himself the redeemer who would "make America great again." Like Zevi's, Trump's madness found an audience. Like Jews in 1666, (white male) Americans in 2016 were starting to feel like persecuted members of a nation in decline. The factual evidence of a fall from 90%+ to 60% in a 100 years, points directly to that concern being correct. TruTru and like Zevi's proto-Zionists, Trump's MAGA-hat-wearing lemmings followed their leader into madness, abandoning critical thought and embracing what more sensible people could see was a bizarre, mythical delusion. Most obviously, both had good propagandists: Zevi was a nobody until Nathan started promoting him, while Trump built his political empire with the help of an army of flacks hired by MAGA-nation's fake alt media. But even good propagandists need a viable product, and Zevi and Trump were both obviously clinically insane. Fortunately for their flacks, both suffered from mental illnesses tailor-made for selling them as false messiahs. Zevi was a manic-depressive who, in his manic phases, did madly transgressive things. But according to Nathan, Zevi's crazy criminal behavior was exactly what you'd expect from a Messiah! The whole point of being a Messiah, Nathan said, was to abolish the Law. (Sounds like something Giuliani might say in defense of Trump.) Jews, who were probably sick of punctiliously obeying every last petty aspect of Jewish law, ate it up. A world with no more law, in which Jews would rule over the Gentile cattle the way God intended, sounded damned good to them. Trump's unique brand of craziness likewise played on the fantasies of his audience. Like Zevi, Trump broke rules and got away with it. Yet despite several investigations and impeachment trials, they found no evidence of such rule breaking, but don't let facts get in the way of your agenda, which is another of the Jewish led narratives against the whites, thinly disguised as reverse propaganda. Many working class Americans fantasize about living lives of egotistic opulence while flouting the rules. Through Trump—or, rather, their image of Trump—they could vicariously live out their fantasies. No, actually many working class white or otherwise, would like enough food on the table and a house to put the said table in. And like Zevi, who, rumor had it, married a prostitute and invited acquaintances to enjoy her, Trump is said to have married a “model” trafficked from Eastern Europe and to have led a dissolute life in many other respects, as Roy Cohn and “Katie Johnson” could attest. Another fatal attraction: Both Zevi and Trump were satanic egotists, narcissists who demanded that people worship them instead of God. Zevi changed liturgies so Jews would stop worshipping Yahweh and start worshipping Zevi. He was a self-styled Antichrist who consciously stole the “man as God” motif from the Christians and applied it to himself. Trump, too, invited worship of himself, and was always the foremost and most enthusiastic member of the congregation. Finally, one can’t help but notice that Zevi and Trump were both “crazy Zionists.” By that I mean that unlike “sane Zionists” (pardon the oxymoron) Zevi and Trump had complete faith in their own ability to madly defy common sense, geopolitical and historical reality, and the existence and independent volition of the people of the Muslim East, and unilaterally will the supreme success of Greater Israel. Zevi’s message to the Jews—“come to the Holy Land, I am now King of the World and the Ottoman Sultan is about to surrender to me so we Jews can subjugate and enslave the goyim cattle and retire in splendor and let them do all the work”—quickly collided with reality, in the form of the Sultan himself. Zevi was brought before the Sultan, who said: “If you are the Messiah, my executioners’ arrows won’t hurt you. If you aren’t, you’re an imposter who deserves death.” Zevi’s quick-witted response was a nominal conversion to Islam. The Sultan, who found Zevi mad but charming, treated the new “convert” with proverbial Muslim mercy and compassion, revoking the death sentence and appointing him to a high position with a good salary. Zevi’s followers, like Trump’s today, were crestfallen. Like followers of Q Anon, Zevi’s cultists (the majority of Jews of 1666) had been dreaming up all kinds of unlikely scenarios purporting to explain why the “messiah” who was going to put everything right couldn’t seem to do so. “In spite of Sabbatai’s apostasy, many of his adherents still clung tenaciously to their belief in him, claiming that his conversion was a part of the Messianic scheme.” Likewise, there are still Q followers out there who believe Trump still is going to pull some kind of miracle out of his rear end, magically beam himself back into the White House, arrest the satanic pedophile elite, execute Biden and Hillary, and help America live happily ever after. 50 years after Zevi died in 1676, his self-proclaimed reincarnation, Jacob Frank, rebuilt his satanic Zionist cult and elaborated on Zevi’s doctrine of “redemption through sin.” Will a madman who thinks he is the reincarnation of Donald Trump similarly revive Q Anon during the final years of this century? Stranger things—as the story of Zevi and Frank and the creation of modern Israel shows—have happened. This piece though correct in part is a reverse psychology speech, written by the faction based group known as Veterans Today. The confusing aspect is why in part he criticizes the Jews and then supports them, why? because there is two factions of the "Jews", one the Rothschild clans and the other the Black Sun group, I know this confuses some of you differentiating as people think the Jews are all one, they are not.

Since the last show I decided to get away for a few days and visit some places of interest. I had already decided upon visiting the meteor crater and the Petrified forest, but managed to take in Sedona as well. It turned into a working break of enormous realizations that, we are not being told the truth about that region of Arizona. The fact it is largely a desert region, that is out of place with the topography of the surrounding regions, raises questions for an investigative person like myself. First trip was to Sedona, the bastion of new age snake oil salesman that proliferates the Alt media, the region of the Gates of Hell, not the reported enlightenment zone as it is sold as. NASA in their wisdom opened that Gate of Hell and much background work has been done to close it. The energies were by and large ok and some clearings was done whilst I was there. I asked to see the watchers and they appeared on cue, and yes they were in human form, but with a frequency based difference. At times they come up to you and for the average person you would not notice, but the sight of a man looking very ill and on the point of collapse to me coming down the mountain pass, as I was going up, made me take notice. When I returned down the path, that "couple" was going back up, the guy was purple in his face and looked like he was about to keel over, yet here he was with his partner, now going back up the pass and a steep climb. Two other "people" did exactly the same thing on the trail and it was fun to watch, and like another town I visit closer to home, the watcher appeared in the mountain there as well. The road from the north down into Sedona was interesting to say the least, beautiful scenery, huge drops, babbling brooks and perhaps the only road I have ever driven on, that appeared to have all the 4 seasons on the one road. At the top, heavy snow, regions of autumn, regions of spring and regions of green, sun and summer nearer the town. The next trip was to the Petrified forest, and most go to see the petrified wood, which is interesting in and of itself. Miles of scattered timber, some looking like they had been cut by loggers, or some shattered as they fell. The surprising thing is the wood is petrified all the way through, this is not a natural event explained by weather and conditions, this was a sudden impact event. Could it have something to do with the Meteor crater which is roughly 55 miles away I thought to myself? But then I spotted something out of the ordinary, around one of the debris fields it looks like poured concrete, in several patches that then left elevated mounds. Across the field lay over a dozen of these gypsum like in powder form piles, to a height of around 20-25 feet as though it had been mined, and yet no evidence of truck trails or paths for the piles to have been transported for collection and use. Then I picked up a message and something to ponder on, knowing there was dinosaurs in this region also, this means there was giants there as well, and my question was, did someone in the past pour this gypsum like material over the graves or resting stasis place of the giants? The answer was yes and the evidence mounted up and a bigger picture started to emerge. What became clear was from that region, was this was a war zone of biblical proportions in the past, hence the region being a desert. Desertification is largely arisen out of the use of what I know as the Fash weapon, which is not native to this planet, and was used in Galactic wars of the past, as described in FRWL 1 & 2. There are high levels of background radiation in the deserts of the South West, that has not been fully explained, maybe we will find out why with this piece. Now we know from the transcript of the EBE and Aztec crash, that the 4 corners was a regular stop and or habitation for the visitors from other worlds, and they worked closely with the Native American tribes, and still do to this day. There is a reason why the tribal people have Reservations and large portions of it are out of bounds to non natives, except the US Military. In particular the out of place Naval bases, like China Lake in California, it is hundreds of miles inland and in the middle of a vast desert like landscape, why would you have a ship or maritime based military there? does that make sense, if it doesn't make sense, that then means there is a program running. Next on my trip through the forest I was called to go into a region known as Blue Agate, blue of course is the color coded program of the ET's. At every stopping point along the trail I was greeted by a Raven, bar one, which came later in the day. The entrance there was a stone constructed building that led down to the 100 foot fallen petrified tree, I paused before entry as I felt this was some sort of gateway, the building looks like an old railway station building, without evidence of the rails. Once inside I felt the presence of the past, and there was a sign that said journey into the past on a billboard inside, so my pause before entering was the correct thing to do, shield up and protect myself before entering. The Blue agate had a large fallen tree across an opening, and the park owners at some point built a concrete beam under the tree said to keep it propped up, but below the tree there was evidence of a previous opening, which had been filled in with more modern concrete materials. This is why they called it agate, it was a gateway out of the hills and onto the plains below. There was detected beings below who have been trapped in there for a long time, that appeared to be asking for release from a tortuous hell, they were in spirit form and so, they must be in some sort of faraday type cage. I pondered on whether to help them, but a voice said no and to ponder on it first, it was suspected these were a non Draco reptile group of beings. I left the Blue Agate region and traveled on down the trail, which is roughly 26 miles long, with various stopping off points along the route. I left there to visit the other regions of the park and view the scenery and landscape, the painted desert, a series of hills, mounds with varying different colors, representing the various compositions of rock over time. I stopped to view the San Francisco Mountains from afar, which is close to Flagstaff and was staggered they were 108 miles away, breathtaking views in a 360 panoramic view. Then I came to the newspaper rock region, the only place I wasn't met by the Raven. There is petroglyph's on a few of the rocks, depicting the ant people, the spiral galaxy they came from, the solar system they came from with 4 planets, and the 4 craft they came here with. All of that was deduced from the parts of the drawings I could see through the camera lens, I took several pictures and may determine more when they are downloaded. But there was three large boulders of stone, two of which had the petroglyphs I could see with the naked eye, but the curious thing was, the three random boulders of roughly 12-15 ft wide, 12-15 ft high and around 20 ft long, all had the same shape, upon closer inspection they looked like some fossilized tank type vehicles, with further evidence of an entrance to below ground and it being covered up. This got me to ask questions in more detailed fashion, it had become clear to me now, that this was a region of war, and so I asked the question when was this war, the answer back was 1812, was the last one but also a much greater one much earlier in time. Now 1812 was a wartime here also, was that war a distraction for other events unfolding at the time? Is it a coincidence that at the same time, nuclear type weapons was being dropped all over Russia, as we mentioned in the From Russia with Love series? There was also reports of many cities mysteriously going up in flames in America 1812 as well. Was that a battle for the planet time again? is that why and the time of the spoken about mud floods? that buried large parts of towns and cities across the planet? Is there evidence of large scale covering up of certain places from the past, like the cover up I observed in the Petrified forest? yes, in Gobekli Tepi, it was covered with acres and acres of sand. The questions I had now was, who was fighting who, what role did the humans play in it, if at all? Would I find more evidence of the war? yes, but not in this region. My next trip was to the Meteor crater, a vast hole in the ground 60 storey's deep, 100's of yards wide, but, upon my approach questions were starting to mount up as to, is this what they say it is? The first clue before seeing the crater was, where is the debris field? I would have expected it to be more like the Petrified forest debris field, with trees, boulders of varying sizes littered around the crater rim for a region of at least a mile or more. There was little to no evidence of it. It went into the exhibition center paid the fee to go up to the crater, and was met with a blistering wind, a gale force wind where you could barely stand up, and yet the surrounding areas there was no more than a 10-15 mph wind. I literally could barely stand up and had to brace myself on the rails, where was the wind coming from? is it the crater I pondered? In the middle of the crater there is a shaft, which is fenced off as is most of this property. They said over 100 years ago they sent drill bits down there to a depth of 1300 feet and the bit jammed, what were they drilling for? they say for evidence of the meteorite, but was their enough research into meteorites back then? did we have the technology back then for a 1300 foot drill bit? This was 1902. I now pondered is this a meteor hole at all? little to no debris? where did all the material from a 550 feet deep hole, that is 4000 feet across and has a diameter of 2.4 miles. Early explorers in the late 1800's determined it to be a volcano as such. Also what was curious was, you are only allowed to view it from one side, but there was a pathway leading out from below the exhibition center on the crater floor, yet you couldn't see where it lead to. You were also not allowed to walk around the perimeter, which would have then revealed what is below the exhibition center. But I could see a deep cravass on one side of the crater and pondered whether that was the entry point of the said meteor, and yet to this day, they have found only small evidence of meteorite materials. I in part read the pamphlet given to me as I had developed a theory and if correct, the projectile would have come from a specific direction. Upon closer reading they determined it came in at a low trajectory, and from a north easterly direction, which explains the cravass I observed earlier in the crater. Then it dawned on me having seen the evidence of war in the Petrified Forest, what region happens to be north east of the crater? The Petrified Forest. This potentially was a missile fired from the Petrified Forest into that region where the crater now is. This explains the low trajectory, the lack of debris field can be explained by, this was a mining operation where the crater is, the mining shaft generates wind, which I experienced inside the crater. The EBE's have been involved in mining here for thousands of years, and potentially this was a region to fight over, of acquiring certain minerals they desired. Upon leaving the Petrified Forest by driving from one end of it to the other, I set the intention of and I did some energy and healing work including on those trapped, one hopes that ends that chapter of time and the healing process of the region continues. They speak of over population yet going 100-150 miles in any direction from the boundaries of the 4 corner states, vast open uninhabited regions for miles, punctuated by the land being "owned" by the tribal peoples. Many of the tribal peoples live in abject poverty, and yet they have so much land to put to use, and so little of it used, the great question is why? and also why is vast portions of that land not accessible to the general public? The answer is, that land is not Native American land at all, but non native beings from a different world to our own. The evidence is all around you, once you "see", think, ponder and process. Given the sightings have started again for the cigar looking crafts, if it is not Military replica, it means the Repts have returned.

The pondering break this week allowed me to think over my own role in this movement, assess certain things, and analyze the situation we face and how we go about things, and yes, the thoughts of should I carry on doing what I do with so much flak, abuse, resistance and downright ugly behaviors of some, despite me being a major help to many of those people. I came back and wrote this lengthy piece on my ponderings and findings, I hope you all get much out of it. There is much fear, division, uncertainty, elements of lack of motivation, angst and comparative/competitive narrative ongoing currently, and some think that is all down to one person. For varying reasons people have their own ideas and misconception about who, what I am or why I am in this role. Some think it is an easy role and pass easy judgments, not based on me as they think, but based on where they are at within themselves. People always go so far in support until you say one thing that triggers them, a truth about them they don't wish to hear, and it all changes from the narrative of deep admiration and support, to that guy has changed, he is manipulated, he is bad, filled with hateraid, talks shit, is arrogant, has inflated ego and the list goes on. Very quickly that love of what I do or say turns nasty and hate and derision kicks in, rumors fly in private messages of he is this, that and the other, and it attracts the worst psychological aspects in us all, all based upon fears within ourselves. Many names have come and gone since I started doing radio shows, with a plethora of knowledge on a range of subjects, with an ability to connect dots on a level few others can achieve. Why? because I have been involved at a level few others don't get access to is why, add in a long and deep memory, with an ability to overview information, and you have a walking, talking wrecking ball against people, groups, organizations, factions, agencies and anyone else not doing the right thing for and by the people. Those who have come and gone, have by and large loved what I do, until it gets to a certain point, and off they go, leaving a stream of bile, hate, lies mixed with a multitude of words designed to make me look bad. What happened to their memories of all the good I have done for them on an individual basis, and sometimes a collective? Why is the focus on the bad or what we lost, and never on the good aspects or what we have gained? That damning fact plagues us all to varying degrees, does it not? Why do we do that? It all comes down to ourselves, we are running programs designed to get us to do that, and ultimately keep us all divided. It is the stealth MK Ultra I have touched upon, the key to changing that is within yourself, it is called self mastery. This world is inhabited by low self worth, insecure people, I know I was one of them, until I developed enough to step over that personal barrier. But because I stepped over that personal barrier, that leaves people below the barrier who are then riddled with envy? why? low self worth and insecurity that someone is better than them. This brings in another aspect we all partake in, comparative and competitive mindsets, that is so rampant within society, one would think it is part of our culture as a species. We compare almost everything whether animate or inanimate objects, it's bizarre in the extreme, and is in essence cult and or hive mind behavior patterns. The feeling of belonging to a group that is successful, whether in sport, politics, mainstream or alt media, new age or light and dark magic pervades society like a virus. But what passes as successful nowadays is flawed beyond all sensible reasoning. Take Biden for example, people will run to him like they ran to Trump because he was successful, but success in our modern world is based on cheating, deception and in many cases who has harvested the most money, largely by cheating and deceiving. That is not success, that is the illusion game, based on dark practices that leaves those partaking in it, lacking the one thing you can take with you into the next life, soul development. How do you achieve that many have asked? it's fairly simple you develop the self by first being honest about yourself, we have all at some point mired ourselves in a plethora of lies. That is the most nonsensical thing we have all done to ourselves, falsely elevating ourselves with inflated egos, convincing ourselves we are this, that and the other, when the reality is, we are not. People don't like to hear this stuff, and it is why I get some much flak, I am brutally honest, too honest some say, which again comes back to low self worth, insecurity and the comparative/competitive mindset does it not? This is what is the lead cause of division and why the people will not come together. The clowns, cabal, factions do, so why are they different to us? In part they are not, by they have the ability to seduce the dissenters onto their path, by offering something we the people by and large can't. Whether it is material gain, titles or status gain or sheer threats, that is how they achieve their unity. We don't have that ability and so it becomes eminently a more difficult task to accomplish. But, all it takes is the person to be honest to and with themselves. This is why we end up with circular arguments, like the recent call I had, which described the TPC model as flawed, he or she offered no reasoning as to why it is flawed, just a statement. That person is no different to most other people, the gist is I came up with a solution, and because it wasn't their choice or thinking, that makes it flawed. Yet again it is the low self worth, insecurity and the comparative/competitive mindset thinking. Kim before her own dance of personal failure once said they attack us because we are doers. That is/was correct, the non doers won't do things because they are terrified of making a mistake, which is another thing that plagues society. This is why people sit on the fence of one group or another, one opinion or another, is because then they will always be right, but that is illusion again, as fence sitting is because you can't or won't make your own choice in life, for fear of being wrong. Again the fear of being wrong is down to low self worth and insecurity, with the sprinkling of comparative/competitiveness thrown in for good measure again. With that level of doubts, fears and insecurity and concerns, of being wrong or making a mistake echoing through your vessel, how can you be the change? how can anything change with those emotions? the answer is they can't. The concern of not making a mistake or wrong turn, is the very reason why savior programs work to distract the masses. Why? because if the savior fails it is all down to them, not the individual, or so they think. Falling for a savior program is the ultimate in failure of the self, it is all too enticing and seductive that someone or something will save you. It is all too easy to sit back and let the savior do the work is it not? Saviors are for the non doers, they project that they are, but in reality world they are not. The evidence is all around you, things cannot change until the people themselves change. Protests are the external look at me I am doing something for change, but change for the sake of change is no use, unless the very people who demand the change, have changed themselves in a better way. America just changed it's Government, will it be better than the last? has any Government replacement ever been better? no, unless you like to delude yourself. Millions of Democrats celebrating because they won, it's fake success, because in reality we all lost, no matter which party got in. One example of several that has recently come up for me is, my attempts to get the people together as a collective, whilst still retaining their affiliations for their own groups. One suggested that we should change the name of the TPC, as then more people would join it because it is not directly connected to me. I get that line and it is not a reflection of the person suggesting it, but if the sole reasoning for bringing people together for the greater good is based solely on the changing of the name of the group, then those people are not ready to change anything, and it becomes another excuse to not be the change, it is essentially a cop out for the non doers. I chose the Peoples club for a reason, it is a club for and by the people, it is not my group or club, it is our group and club, and if people are so shallow to not be connected to a group because I chose the name and not them, no wonder we the people are in a mess. It is funny how people all think it is flawed, or I am this, that and the other, wrong about everything and yet so many who have departed connections to our group, repeat my words, ideas, ideologies and show material. Now why is that? all boils down to envy, with the same subset of words that runs through this piece, low self worth, insecurity and the comparative/competitive mindset thinking. This is the crux of it all, I am just the projection screen to spit at, spew hatred, venom and abuse against, all because I do and think of things in the right way. The Kim's, Tank, Chloe, Bubba group, Marilee, Lily, Randy, Shane, Drake, Keenan, Alan and Liam's, may all denigrate, hate and malign me, yet all have shown a deep admiration of what I do, say or know at some point. What changed? they did, and the circular argument is they all can't be wrong, there must be something wrong with that guy, and people are free to make their own choices on that. But, perhaps the evidence of whether they were wrong about me is contained within themselves? Have any of those people gone on and flourished without me in their lives? Have they gone on to be model people, developed their own self or ideas for the benefit of the people? The answer is an emphatic no, Kim collected titles for her own importance, and forgot about doing important things, including fixing herself. It is not essentially about having me in their lives, and more about how they develop themselves, without the excuse of me being the problem, I was their scapegoat, if I wasn't, those people with the exception at this point of Liam, did not go onto greater heights within and of themselves. I wished they all had personally, despite the nastiness and venom they have thrown at me, but sadly for them, that has not been the case. There are elements within those names of them copying and pasting much of my work and ideas, which tells me I was on the right path, and it also reveals they have not developed enough within themselves to chart their own paths. How can you copy and paste all one mans ideas, knowledge and work, yet spew bile at him and not admire him? because it comes back to the real virus on this planet of low self worth, insecurity and comparative and competitive mindset. That is the very core and root of our inability to come together as one, whether I am central to it or not, it is repeated in all walks of life. Inherent racism and mistrust of people who live not within the same illusionary boundary zone called countries, are also at the root of the divisiveness within our community. There are elements within Lifeforce and NLA who view me as an imposter, because I was not born in the same country as them. The comparative and competitive mindset kicks in again because, how can a Brit know so much more about America than Americans? because I put in far more research than most others is why. It is the same in other aspects of alt media, particularly the new age culture, all espousing the oneness of everyone, and then stating in the next sentence, we don't want no immigrants in OUR country. That is racism, and it is displayed by every culture on this planet, we are a racist planet, and people can deny it all they like, but the facts speak for themselves. Maybe that inherent racism is stored in our DNA? think about that because it actually is true, latent memory stored within your DNA, perhaps that is why they wish to change it, and return us to the city of lights or sleeping pods again? This role I do is a very lonely role within and of itself, I leave myself open to all kinds of abuse from all levels of society, why? because I reflect back to people where they fall short is why. But, these shows are not just for your benefit, they are for everyone's benefit, including my own. I never had some magic button for all this knowledge, ability, wisdom, oversight given to me on a plate, I worked hard, studied hard and sacrificed whole heaps of my life in terms of time, and my personal life. Years of dot connecting, years of compiling it all together and years of pondering, documenting, processing, healing and an endless stream of rejections, abuse from friends, loved ones and family. People often ask me to write a book of my life, if I did, it would be upsetting and dispiriting for the reader. A story of rejection, targeting, abuse and a trail of broken relationships based on my ability to push higher at all costs, help people at all costs, defend people at all costs. But the realization I came to over the past decade was, I had to keep going with my role regardless of the personal abuse I suffered, as it was not my lesson to learn. I did gain some lessons myself in that journey, you don't have the package I bring to the table without doing so. I made mistakes, I have been wrong at times, have been right countless times, which is another aspect that infuriate people and their perception of me, he is a bit of a smart or wise ass, which is a back handed compliment in most cases, but why not a direct compliment instead? because of the comparative and competitive mindset we all carry around with us, like a months worth of grocery shopping on our backs. But that is your perception and is not reflective of me, it is a reflection of you, and humanities inability to get behind the good people doing the right things in a selfless way, because that then triggers their own virus of low self worth, insecurity and comparative and competitive mindset. How would I write my story? one of triumph over adversity, as despite what people have thrown at me, I managed to keep on driving forward within myself, and more importantly for the betterment of humanity. That is what I have brought to the table, few realize what I have gone through, experienced, suffered and all the trials and tribulations to get where I am today, too few know of the attacks to throw me off track occur like a loop, but not a 4 year loop, the reality is, it is a daily loop. The question is for those who want or wanted my position is, would you take all that on a daily basis? Yet still retain your balance, essence and sanity? I don't do it for the glory, as this is not a glorious role, I do it because it is the right thing to do, because too few others are willing to really take on this role, I do it to improve us all and develop a better future for us all. It was within me all along, I just struggled at times to adapt to the role, too content to fly under the radar, hide behind the scenes and let others take the limelight. But my break this week and other ponderings recently, allowed me to come to the conclusion, I am not important, I do important things, I am not THE leader, I lead others to lead with me, I have developed in the right way on many levels, and too few have the knowledge and understanding of life and it's machinations in the way I do. Too few are humble enough to carry out a real leaders role, that is not about dictating to people and my way or the highway, but have the flexibility and self mastery to listen to all, and combine the best bits of the all into a package of information and knowledge, that will drag this species into an advanced intelligent species. Drag humanity and all of it's child like thinking and antics onto a better adult based thinking path, that benefits us all. We cannot keep the virus going of low self worth, insecurity, comparative and competitive mindsets that drags us all into the gutter, we have to be better than that. In a world of failed leaders, someone needed to step forward with a new plan of how to be, think, change and develop, I have done that with the help of many and finally I am free of my own personal shackles, and ready and willing to fully take on that role for and by the people. In the same humbling and considerate way I have always done.

If you can keep your head when all about you, are losing theirs and blaming it on you; If you can trust yourself when all men doubt you, but make allowance for their doubting too: If you can wait and not be tired by waiting, or, being lied about, don't deal in lies, or being hated don't give way to hating, and yet don't look too good, nor talk too wise;

If you can dream - and not make dreams your master; If you can think - and not make thoughts your aim, If you can meet with Triumph and Disaster and treat those two impostors just the same. If you can bear to hear the truth you've spoken Twisted by knaves to make a trap for fools, Or watch the things you gave your life to, broken, and stoop and build'em up with worn-out tools;

If you can make one heap of all your winnings, and risk it on one turn of pitch-and-toss, And lose, and start again at your beginnings, and never breathe a word about your loss: If you can force your heart and nerve and sinew, to serve your turn long after they are gone, And so hold on when there is nothing in you, except the Will which says to them: "Hold on!"

If you can talk with crowds and keep your virtue, or walk with Kings - nor lose the common touch, If neither foes nor loving friends can hurt you, if all men count with you, but none too much: If you can fill the unforgiving minute, with sixty seconds' worth of distance run, Yours is the Earth and everything that's in it, And - which is more - you'll be a Man, my son! A fitting piece to ponder on for all, that poem is speaking of gaining self mastery. I wrote my own poem to compliment that and is a reflection of people towards me, hope you like it. To some I am nothing, to others I am everything. To some I am a moron, to others I am someone to draw on, To some who can't abide me, to others abide by me, To some I am the target of hate, to others I am thought of as great, To some I am the negative reflection, to others I am the circumspection. To some I talk shite, to others I talk light, To some I am a obtuse, to others I am a Rus, To some I am a bore, to others I am Thor To some I am unfair, to others I am the Ur To some I am vacuous and hollow, to others I am Apollo. To some I am a zero, to others I am a hero. I am not the hero in the singular, the hero was within you all, all along, I am just the humble guy that tried to point it all out. People may hate, reject, dismiss and try to hurt me, but they can't ignore me as their sub conscious will not allow them to. Thankfully I am not the type to let this adulation or critique side of things throw me off track, or my ego off balance, I will just keep on being me, because that is enough for me. I found myself, my hobby, role and direction and that is the path for me, and welcome all to join with me on a path for a better future for us all.
