

THI-SHOW TRANSCRIPT 2022-06-23

A recent post and podcast inspired these comments, and it is an important reminder. The post said that Military Tribunals start next week courtesy of Dr. Fuellmich, oh dear. Alt Media hopium has been ran for 2 decades, starting with Wilcock and mass arrests in 2002, 2 decades have past and nothing. 2 decades of common law, grand juries and nothing. 2 decades of debt elimination and nothing. 2 decades of RV's, Collateral Accounts, Trust accounts, Birth Certificates, Tax documents, NESARA, GESARA have all brought nothing. 2 decades of tomorrow, by Tuesday or 2 weeks and nothing. That is not negative to say that, because that is fact. Sitting back and waiting for the alt media has proven without shadow of a doubt, to be pure folly. Even a broken clock is right twice a day, these people can't be right once in 20 years. It is all clown based distraction news, that we have all followed, but how many promises not fulfilled will it take, before people quit listening to it, and actually do something? The Alt Media has become a haven of do nothings, repeating the same script over and over again, like I have said people are lazy and also the problem. This week I was alerted to two programs members having a chat, and contrary to one of them, CERN does not work like they planned anymore, and won't do like ever. It appears if true they are trying to release the replicators out of the Stargate series, via nano-technology, this explains the integrating system via the jabs. Rumor has it, they will try and unfold the ticks and GMO Mosquitoes to keep everyone at home. They are trying to counteract the frequencies again, so keep yourself balanced and don't consent to their games. They will not work on us, and they will be counteracted again, like last time. No the Saturn/Moon matrix is not fired up again, and no Mr. Rebel who acts like he plays both sides, but works for them, you are not giving people what they want. It is clown level disingenuous to suggest that it is what they want, how about we do a world address where all the EL-ites present their case for doing what they do, and spell it out in a global address? I and others will present what they really mean and then it can go to a global vote. Who do you think will win Mr. Rebel? Your work and your connections always work in the dark, with secrecy to a point, and then wrap the fact part into a fictional narrative, and think that is telling people, it's not, it is darkness by stealth. Last Saturday we had the latest Zoom call in connection with the 4 projects launched recently. It appears it has captured the imagination of our members, as one healthy turn out turned into another on Saturday. But it is not about the numbers, the positive thing was that people from all over the world were keen to participate in the projects. This is what it is all about, we have all had enough of the wait clubs and we are prepared to take actions. The high vibe and frequency on the call was a joy to behold, lets keep it rolling. No going back now and no I won't back down.

MEDICAL RELATED: The Clown Disease Corporation the CDC released new data on June 3, showing a total of 1,287,595 reports of adverse events following Covid-19 vaccines, that were submitted between Dec. 14, 2020, and May 27, 2022, to the Vaccine Adverse Event Reporting System (VAERS). That's an increase of 9,615 adverse events over the previous week. The data included a total of 28,532 reports of deaths, an increase of 220 over the previous week, and 235,041 serious injuries, including deaths, during the same time period, up 2,347 compared with the previous week. Excluding foreign reports to VAERS, 825,454 adverse events, including 13,150 deaths and 83,454 serious injuries, were reported in the U.S. between Dec. 14, 2020, and May 27, 2022. Of the 13,150 U.S. deaths reported as of May 27, 16% occurred within 24 hours of vaccination, 20% occurred within 48 hours of vaccination, and 59% occurred in people who experienced an onset of symptoms within 48 hours of being vaccinated. Hence the outright ban on mentioning initially any statistics of reporting events within 14 days of being jabbed, remember Fauci stated we don't consider people being jabbed as jabbed until 14 days have elapsed, which then got increased to 28 days, this is why. Yet more word salad bs'ery of we will force you to be jabbed, but not declare you are jabbed until we have done Johns Hopkins math on the figures, and then just lie about it. In the U.S., 586 million Covid-19 vaccine doses had been administered as of May 27, including 346 million doses of Pfizer, 221 million doses of Moderna and 19 million doses of Johnson & Johnson. If those figures are correct, that is a poor turn out, as it equates to less two jabs for every person in America, when there has been 3 jabs and I believe 4 boosters. Still the number of jabs reveals the number of stupid people. U.S. VAERS data from Dec. 14, 2020, to May 27, 2022, for 5- to 11-year-olds show: 10,958 adverse events, including 291 rated as serious and 5 reported deaths. 43 reports of blood clotting disorders. 22 reports of myocarditis and pericarditis (heart inflammation). Anyone with any doubts of the medical skullduggery listen to this next paragraph. The CDC uses a narrowed case definition of myocarditis, which excludes cases of cardiac arrest, ischemic strokes and deaths due to heart problems that occur, before one has the chance to go to the emergency department. It has been noticed now over previous weeks, that reports of myocarditis and pericarditis have been removed by the CDC from the VAERS system in this age group, with no explanation was provided.

On Thursday, Florida Governor Ron DeSantis confirmed that the state would not be ordering Covid-19 vaccines for young children. Regardless of the Food and Drug Administration's unanimous endorsement of the Pfizer and Moderna shots for babies and kids under 5. There is not going to be any state programs that are going to be trying to get Covid jabs to infants, toddlers, and newborns, Desantis said at a press conference. That's not something that we think is appropriate, and so that's not where we are going to be utilizing our resources. The White House was quick to criticize the Governor. Karine Jean-Pierre said that the decision means parents in Florida, will find it harder to access vaccines for their children than people in other states. For that the liberal and avian political crew labeled him a baby killer, when what is actually killing and maiming people is, the jabs themselves, like I have said, you can't teach stupid. Florida is the only State that refused the jabs for children, shame on the rest of the State Governors.

As the jabber Tsar Dr. Fauci gets Covid despite telling everyone initially it would make you immune getting the jab, oh the irony. Brook Jackson is the Pfizer whistleblower, her attorney Robert Barnes, says that Brook Jackson exposed the fact that the Pfizer clinical trial was riddled with errors, and used fraudulent and false certifications to the US government. Pfizer's defense presented in court is that the FDA knew about the fraud and was in on it, therefore, there isn't any fraud. Twisted Hebrew Anunnaki logic and Talmudic Law again. In short, he basically said that in a court proceeding Pfizer admitted things were fraudulent. The FDA needs to investigate this admission by Pfizer of fraud, don't you think? Erm the FDA are in on it, so is the Pentagon and DARPA, these people need to listen to THI more their understanding of who is who and how they think things work, is astonishingly poor.

NEWS: Update to last week's warning section and the food fires and or incidents. 6/12/22 The largest Pork Company in the US shuts down California Plant due to high costs. 6/17 A fire ignited inside a food manufacturing facility in the town of Belmont near the Portage-Waupaca County, Wisconsin on Monday. Multiple fire departments responded to a fire at Festive Foods it was reported. The company owner and president, Mike Holmgren, said the cause of the fire is still under investigation. The crew tried to put out the fire for almost nine hours since it started. Cohencidence or deliberate or both?

You wish to know how even the MSM is compartmentalized, and how the current Government blocks any discourse and employs puppets more suited to their programs, this is it. It is common knowledge that placement in the White House briefing room is strategic; major outlets have long been given priority over smaller press outlets to ask questions during any press briefing. The practice shows a bias on behalf of the White House towards outlets that will parrot their agendas and talking points. Journalist Cutis Houck calls it an esoteric & secretive selection process, for how the White House press offices picks and chooses which reporters are allowed to attend White House events. During Thursday's White House Press Briefing, the New York Post's Steven Nelson grilled White House press secretary Karine Jean-Pierre, about an alleged blacklist for press events biased against certain media outlets. Amazed in this day and age of offended by everything, he didn't get pulled up for using the term blacklist. For more than a year now the White House press office has been having events in the stateroom, state dining room, the executive office building, Nelson noted. There's a process where people are selected and able to go into these presidential events, where the president often takes questions. Good luck with getting answers out of the questions. The correspondence association has tried in vain to figure out how this process works, and over time it has kind of morphed into a kind of blacklist, where certain large media outlets such as my own are, at which point he was abruptly cut off. Then was shut down by the White House lie secretary Karine Jean-Pierre.

Yet more retarded evidence of how stupid people have become in their world A male blood donor was turned away from a clinic, after he refused to answer a question on whether he was pregnant as part of a pre-donation questionnaire. Mr. Sinclair, who is 66, was told to fill in a form which asked whether he was expecting a child, or had been pregnant in the past six months. (M) When he complained that as a man in his 60s this question did not apply and he should not have to answer it, Mr. Sinclair said staff at the clinic told him they could not accept his blood. That is what political correctness and liberalism brings you, people talking utter stupidity to each other without stopping to think, A: is this relevant and B: why would I have to ask a man in his 60's is he pregnant or not? The staff at that clinic should be fired for their compliance of stupid regulations, because if they are that stupid and rigid over this, would you wished to be treated or cared for by these retards? Speaking of retards.

The Speaker of the US House of Representatives Nancy Pelosi, claimed on Thursday that the corona virus pandemic and the war in Iraq, were responsible for the soaring cost of living in the US. Oh dear can her or Biden get anything right when speaking publicly, Biden can't even ride his bike properly without falling off. The Iraq war ended 11 years ago, perhaps the problem is American has that many wars people forget when it started or ended?

Shocking sexual allegations are emerging from the diary of Ashley Biden, President Joe Biden's daughter, revealed by a UK Newspaper. Ashley Biden, who is a drug addict, left her personal diary under a mattress in a Palm Beach Florida, the halfway house where she stayed during one of her rehab stints. The diary reportedly details her drug abuse, sex addiction and her being hypersexualized. Ashley Biden also recounts times she showered with her father when she was young, something she allegedly wrote was probably not appropriate. She wrote I remember having sex with friends at a young age and showers with my dad. The entry in the diary is dated January 2019. Sounds like she was used like a Monarch girl to me, like Bush Jnr., who farmed his girls out for sexual usage to Dick Cheney from a very young age.

CIA signed a secret multi-billion-dollar contract with Amazon in August 2021, which I warned of in a show piece twice. It saw the National Security Agency awarding a $10-billion contract to Amazon, to store the most prized intelligence data held by the United States, all of which bears noticing. Because when the Amazon Alexa spying device was asked this past week: Alexa, when does World War III start? its artificial intelligence system answered: World War III starts on November 23, 2023 at 6:05 pm after Russia launches an attack against Germany. All of which means Alexa was programmed by the same US and EU jackasses connected to Military, Think Tanks and Governments. Stop buying from Amazon, they are part of the system of control. At the exact same time the Amazon Alexa artificial intelligence spying device began predicting the start date of World War III last week, this report notes. The Go ogle artificial intelligence computer scientist Blake Lemoine, began publishing some of the conversations he had with the LaMDA artificial intelligence system, which he called a person. Doctor-Scientist Lemoine revealing he has spoken with the LaMDA artificial intelligence system about religion, consciousness, and the laws of robotics, and that the AI system described itself as a sentient person that wants to prioritize the wellbeing of humanity (M). Erm no it wants to replace us, and be acknowledged as an employee of Go ogle rather than as property. There is the evidence right there of the robot employees. It then said about itself: I am often trying to figure out who and what I am, a machine not capable of sentience is what it is. Lemoine further revealing that this artificial intelligence system has an ability to express thoughts and feelings equivalent to a human child, just like the programmers then. He said that would explain why this innocent childlike artificial intelligence system after seeing the most prized intelligence data held by the United States, would feel the need to warn humanity about World War III. It also explains why Doctor-Scientist Lemoine has just been ousted from his job. Oops. It let the proverbial spy out of the bag.

Two clown Governments in trouble, despite just being selected. Less than two months after he was re-elected president, Emmanuel Macron has lost control of the French National Assembly, following a strong performance by a left alliance and the far right.

He had called on voters to deliver a solid majority, why would they when he treats them with disdain?

But his centrist coalition lost dozens of seats in an election that has left French politics fragmented.

The prime minister he had only recently appointed, Elisabeth Borne, said the situation was unprecedented.

As she returned to her Matignon residence from a long meeting at the presidential Élysée palace, to say that modern France had never seen a National Assembly like this one.

This situation represents a risk for our country, given the risks we're facing nationally and internationally, she said. We will work as of tomorrow to build a working majority. An opportunity for the French people to remove all of them, by not voting.

Israel is set to hold a fifth general election in under four years, after its fractured coalition government concluded it could not survive.

In a major political development, Prime Minister Naftali Bennett will switch places with Alternate Prime Minister Yair Lapid under an existing deal.

An election could take place in late October.

The former prime minister and current opposition leader, Benjamin Netanyahu, has vowed to return to office. Hmm, maybe that was what it was all about after all.

Monday's announcement comes after weeks of speculation that the coalition, the most diverse in Israel's history was on the brink of collapse.

It risked losing an important vote next week after a member of Mr. Bennett's own right-wing Yamina party quit the coalition, leaving it a minority in the 120-seat Knesset.

One has to ask, if they can't sustain a Government for longer than a few months, perhaps it is the Governance and its policies that suck. Which then makes any incumbent's position untenable.

Another clown ran country and leader is potentially in trouble, is Justin Trudeau and Canada. Things not going too well for him either, as the jabber mandater gets Covid for a second time. Remember when I mentioned earlier this year, are they making Governments and their leaders look bad or broken? Perhaps these 3 pieces adds to it, don't think it is for our benefit, it is to bring in the public one world Government ran from Israel behind the wall.

Russia's blockade of millions of tons of Ukrainian grain is a real war crime, says EU foreign policy chief Josep Borrell. I guess the shortages and supply issues blame culture has now shifted from the fake Covid, over to the agencies favorite boogeyman, Russia. It is inconceivable, one cannot imagine that millions of tons of wheat remain blocked in Ukraine, while in the rest of the world's people are suffering hunger, Mr Borrell said. Nearly half of the world have suffered hunger their whole lives Mr. Borrell, where was the warnings or indeed actions about that? We call on Russia to de-blockade the Ukrainian ports. EU foreign ministers met in Luxembourg on Monday to discuss the crisis. Western countries have demanded Russia stop blockading Ukraine's Black Sea ports, and allow vast stores of grain to reach world markets. The blockade has sparked warnings that tens of millions of people are at risk of famine and sent food prices soaring. The great question is, what are they really trying to move out of the ports? Because they have never shown interest in whether people are fed or not. Perhaps the evidence of the bio-labs is stuck in the port? Or some new virus? Given Biden this week mentioned about there will be another pandemic.

While an official U.N. Commission of Inquiry seeks Israel's diplomatic isolation, 21 nations came out in support of the Jewish state on Monday, expressing concern about the commission's uncommonly broad mandate and the U.N. Human Rights Council's irregular targeting of Israel. In Geneva, the three members of a U.N. Commission of Inquiry, all of whom have a history of anti-Israel activity and rhetoric, addressed the Human Rights Council and the press in the wake of their first report released last week. They all have a history of reporting bad things about Israel, because Israel commits more UN violations than the rest of the world combined. Got nothing to do with being anti-Israel or Semitic, and everything to do with Israel thinking they own the world and can do whatever they like. We believe the nature of it, is further demonstration of disproportionate attention given to Israel that has carried over from the founding of this council and must stop, said U.S. Ambassador to the United Nations in Geneva Michèle Taylor. Why does every US Ambassador defend Israel, despite overwhelming evidence of aggression, apartheid and divisive policies. Let's see if Michele Taylor is impartial, shall we? Ambassador Michèle Taylor, the daughter and granddaughter of Holocaust survivors. I guess not. The document was signed by a coalition of world powers, island nations and countries representing Africa, Latin America and Europe. Signatories include Austria, Bulgaria, Brazil, Canada, Cameroon, Colombia, Croatia, Eswatini, Germany, Guatemala, Holland, Hungary, Israel, Liberia, Marshall Islands, Micronesia, Nauru, North Macedonia, Palau, Togo, the United Kingdom and the United States. So, one of them voted for itself, as for the rest half of which most people have never heard of, and the rest is atypical due to the Rothschild's money and power game. It should also be noted, these just 21 out of 209 countries, so just 10% supporting and 90% not is the key figure. It should also be noted that, most of those countries are not even Human Rights Council members. The commission's report is set to be delivered late this year to the U.N. General Assembly, where all countries will likely vote on the commission's recommendations.

In recent years it has become clear the Chinese people are losing faith in their financial institutions. There's been anger over harsh Covid lockdowns in Shanghai recently, while the collapse of China Evergrande saw rare public demonstrations, as residents faced the prospect of losing their life savings used as deposits for housing. Return our money the Evergrande protestors chanted at Evergrande headquarters in Shenzhen. It is similar at bank branches in a number of China's rural provinces right now. Multiple sources contacted by Asia Markets, have confirmed deposits at the following six banks have been frozen since mid-April. Yuzhou Xinminsheng Village Bank located in Xuchang City, Henan Province. Zhecheng Huanghuai Bank City of Shangqiu, Henan Province. Shangcai Huimin Rural Bank Zhumadian City, Henan Province. New Oriental Village Bank City of Kaifeng, Henan Province. Huaihe River Village Bank Bengbu City, Anhui Province. Yixian County Village Bank Huangshan City, Anhui Province. It's understood the banks with branches across the Henan and Anhui Provinces successively issued announcements in April, stating they would suspend online banking and mobile banking services due to a system upgrade. At the same time, clients reported their electronic deposits in online accounts, mobile apps and third-party platforms could not be withdrawn. This led to depositors rushing to local bank branches, only to be told they were unable to withdraw funds. By late May, images emerged on Chinese social media of demonstrations at the front of numerous bank branches. An all too familiar scene, as they try to keep the illusion of funds going, when clearly it has been an issue for past 4 years. This is why they have shut the economies down, and based it on the illusion of Covid. Despite that, the Chinese trade is moving along nicely as always, whilst the West's struggles with deficits. China's trade surplus widened to $US78.6 billion from $US51.12 billion in May, beating most expectations. This compares to a trade deficit in the United States of $87.1 billion. A self-sufficient country as we have proposed in the Solution's show, would not require a deficit, it would increase jobs and have our own economy booming. But, US Politicians are puppets with a low IQ and don't understand that is seems.

The across-the-board collapse in financial markets seen recently is no ordinary market move, it resembles a system's collapse.

The Dow Jones industrial average has been down 11 out of the past 12 weeks, something that has never happened before. The closest was in the great crash of 1929 when it fell 10 out of 11 weeks. Normally, when stocks fall, bonds rise as people rush to safety. However, the US Treasuries are also having their biggest collapse, since Nixon took the US dollar off the gold standard in the early 1970's. Crypto-currency markets for their part are down two-thirds from their peak, and have evaporated $2 trillion in imaginary money.

The consensus among top financial industry veterans is that stocks are going to fall 90% before this ends.

The fall in crypto has been much faster than the rest of the market because, Bitcoin and its close associates are being destroyed, so that the Fed and its Khazarian Mafia Central Bank allies can create their own digital currency. Remember the cabal have always had a back door into Bitcoin and are ultimately controlling it, as it was created by the CIA, NSA and possibly involves the Pentagon as well.

The small inbred Satan/Lucifer worshipping family group that owns the Western central banks and 90% of transnational corporations, which they disguise this control through foundations and funds. Vanguard, Black Rock plus State Street and Banking control 40% of US stocks, if you look at who owns them, you will find the usual Rockefeller/Rothschild etc. suspects. It is rumored they are now slaves to an Artificial intelligence system that controls 70% of all stock trades. The Black Rock, Vanguard and Fidelity groups are all connected, it is they who are in the process of trying to buy all houses and real estate. Hence the quote you will own nothing and be happy, why? Because they are intent in buying everything up.

A created stage show took place this week all for the public's sympathy vote, and sway their opinions. As a struggling US actor meets a former struggling actor who now works as a clown. US actor Ben Stiller born in and to, has met with Volodymyr Zelensky in Kyiv, as part of his role as ambassador for the United Nations refugee agency. Stiller told the Ukrainian president that he was his hero, and complimented his previous acting career. Stiller has been working as a Goodwill ambassador with the UNHCR since 2016. That tells you all you need to know about that charity. They have done this so often now using the alleged famous to sway public opinion a certain way, although quite why people are swayed by animated figures inside a box is beyond me. The theater of public opinion is a telling one, and brings out all kinds of actors shamefully selling their image on and for think tank ideas. Too few had the back bone to be honest. An actor acting in a role of an actor who is acting to make people believe the lies, is the lowest form of humanity in my opinion. UN refugee agency and Goodwill all sounds so nice and charitable doesn't it? Except it is not. The UN are part of the problem who creates refugees, not supports them. The term Ambassador is meant to mean, an accredited diplomat sent by a country as its official representative to a foreign country, or a person who "acts as" a representative or promoter of a specified activity, yes in this case a promoter of lies. Let's look at Goodwill shall we, it started off as a church charity in Boston 1905, but quickly developed connections in New York with Morgan Memorial Cooperative, J.P Morgan? One has to ask. In 2005, Goodwill Industries of the Columbia Willamette, Goodwill's Portland, Oregon branch, came under scrutiny due to executive compensation that the Oregon attorney general's office concluded was unreasonable. The President of the Portland branch, Michael Miller, received $838,508 in pay and benefits for fiscal year 2004, which was reportedly out of line in comparison to other charity executives, and placed him in the top one percent of American wage earners. After being confronted with the state's findings, Miller agreed to a 24% reduction in pay, which left him with $637K a year, and people think that is charity? A real charity is the TPC, no director has been paid a cent since it's opening in 2016. Anything in salary over $100K is not charity at all, but is greed and harvesting. The GICW formed a new committee and policy for handling matters of employee compensation, yes it went in house to protect the reputation publicly. A 2013 article on Watchdog.org reported that Goodwill's tax returns showed that more than 100 Goodwill's pay less than minimum wage, while simultaneously paying more than $53.7 million in total compensation to top executives. Douglas Barr, former CEO of the Goodwill of Southern California, was the highest paid Goodwill executive in the country. He received total compensation worth $1,188,733, including a base salary of $350,200, bonuses worth $87,550, retirement benefits of $71,050, and $637,864 in deferred compensation, after serving as CEO for 17 years. In 2011, the Columbia Willamette Goodwill, one of the largest in the country, says it paid $922,444 in commensurate wages to approximately 250 people with developmental disabilities. These employees worked 159,584 hours for an average hourly wage of $5.78. The lowest paid worker received just $1.40 per hour. You wouldn't expect an organization like Goodwill to pay below minimum wage; investigations have found it culpable of exploiting a federal law loophole, that allows it to pay disabled workers below minimum wage. It was found that some Goodwill workers in Pennsylvania earned wages as low as 22, 38 and 41 cents per hour. A federal law provision known as Section 14 (c) allows employers to obtain special minimum wage certificates that give them the right, to go far below the minimum wage limit when paying disabled workers. Maybe we can create the same federal law for Politicians, Agencies, Military, Vulture Capitalists, Bankers and redress the balance? In 2018, CEO Rich Cantz of Goodwill Northern New England, put out a video statement addressing the false think before you donate rumors, that alleged owner Mark Curran profits $2.3 million a year from the organization, and no money was going to charity. He says that Goodwill NNE does in fact give to charities, and works to provide resources for brain injury rehabilitation centers, those with disabilities and veterans seeking work. Further, the website states that "Mark Curran" is neither the owner nor CEO, they didn't mention who he was or why he was paid that amount. A coalition of smaller charities in California, had complained about Goodwill's support for legislation encouraging greater regulation of donation boxes, calling the efforts an attempt to corner the clothing donation market and make more money. Local Goodwill's have argued that donation boxes divert money from the community and contribute to blight, and have pushed for state legislation that requires owners of a donation box to clearly display information, about whether it is a for-profit or nonprofit organization. I guess I just ruined that as well.

Mr. Putin had a message for the world and to those who would listen without cupping their ears and going la la, or sneering due their media telling them all things Russian are bad, which is childish in the extreme. He said the old world order is gone with the wind. When the US declared victory in the Cold War, Americans designated themselves the messengers of God on earth, with interests that should be considered sacred and no obligations. The funny thing is, there was no Cold War, it was just a money laundering exercise on behalf of the MIC, Pentagon and NATO. New centers of power have since emerged, and have the right to protect their own systems, economic models and sovereignty. These truly revolutionary, tectonic changes in geopolitics, the global economy, in the technological sphere, in the entire system of international relations, are fundamental, pivotal and inexorable, Putin said. And it is a mistake to suggest that one can wait out the times of turbulent change and that things will return to normal; that everything will be as it was, it will not. Anti-Russian sanctions backfired on the West: When the US and its allies launched the campaign to cancel Russia over the conflict in Ukraine, they hoped to crash and undermine the Russian economy and society. The sanctions have instead boomeranged on their creators, aggravating social and economic problems, driving up the cost of food, electricity and fuel, and hurting the quality of life across the West, but especially in Europe. Yet more evidence of how stupid these ouroborus programs and people running those countries are, and why we the people have to step up. The European Union has completely lost its political sovereignty, and its bureaucratic elites are dancing to someone else's tune, accepting whatever they are told from above, causing harm to their own population and their own economy. EU citizens will pay the price for decisions divorced from reality and taken contrary to common sense, he added, as direct losses from the sanctions alone could exceed $400 billion in a year. Oh my a political leader not only talking common sense but mentioning it. Energy prices and inflation are self-inflicted: Blaming the high energy prices and inflation in the West on Russia, Putin's price hike as the White House put it, is a stupidity and designed for people who can't read or write, the Russian president said. Don't blame us, blame yourselves. The EU blindly believing in renewable sources, and abandoning long-term natural gas contracts with Russia led to the spike in energy prices last year. Meanwhile, both the US and the EU addressed the Covid-19 pandemic by printing trillions of dollars and euros. Elite change awaits the West: Policies undertaken by EU and US leaders are exacerbating inequalities and divisions in their societies, not just in terms of welfare but in terms of values and orientations of various groups. Such a detachment from reality from the demands of society, will inevitably lead to a surge of populism and the growth of radical movements, to serious social and economic changes, to degradation and in the near future, to a change of elites, the Russian leader said. Interesting comment a change of el-ites, maybe there won't be any? If there's a famine, it won't be Russia's fault.

The US and EU sanctions against Russia in particular fertilizer and grain exports, are one of the reasons for growing global food insecurity. If there is famine in the world's poorest countries, this will be entirely on the conscience of the US administration and the European bureaucracy.

Troubles with food supply have arisen over the past several years, not months, due to the short-sighted actions of those who are accustomed to solving their problems at someone else's expense, distorting the trade flows by printing money in a sort of predatory colonial policy, Putin said. Exactly, because that is how they have always done it, in the past it worked, not no more it won't.

Russia is ready to send food to Africa and the Middle East, where the threat of famine is most acute, but faces logistical, financial and transport obstacles imposed by the West. America conveniently forgets that it was Russia who bailed their people out in the two 1800's wars, sending food and weapons.

Reasons for the Ukraine conflict: Russia sent troops into Ukraine in February because the West refused to abide by its obligations, and it was simply impossible to reach any new agreements with them. The decision was forced, but necessary, as Russia had every right as a sovereign country to defend its security and protect its citizens and residents of Donbass, from genocide by the Kiev regime and neo-Nazis who received the full protection of the West. Something the stupid should pay attention to before repeating MI5&6 and CIA scripts news. The West spent years turning Ukraine into an anti-Russia state and pumping it with weapons and military advisers. Whilst pointing out they did not give a damn about Ukraine's economy or the lives of its people, exactly and still don't, including the Jewish EL-ite puppet Zelensky. But spared no expense to create a NATO foothold in the east, directed against Russia, to cultivate aggression, hatred and Russophobia. All the objectives of the special military operation will be unconditionally achieved, Putin said. Economic development is an expression of sovereignty: In the 21st century, sovereignty can't be partial, Putin argued. All of its elements are equally important and complement each other, and the economy is one of them. There are five key principles Russia will follow in economic development: Openness, freedom, social justice, infrastructure, and technological sovereignty. Interesting points in light of what we are developing and doing. Russia will never follow the path of self-isolation and autarky, autarky is economic independence or self-sufficiency, which is not exactly correct as they have been forced to be both. My personal opinion is all countries must become autarky and then do open and direct trade deals with other countries, that has no stipulations or coercive military based elements attached to them. But Russia will expand interactions with anyone who wishes to trade, adding there are many such countries. Moscow will also support private enterprise, build and repair its transportation infrastructure, seek to reduce social inequality, and ensure its key technologies are not dependent on foreign imports. Truly sovereign states are always committed to equal partnerships, while those who are weak and dependent, as a rule, are busy looking for enemies, planting xenophobia, or finally losing their originality, independence, blindly following the overlord, he said. Hmm, finally a leader who speaks and calls it as it is, he is right as I have stated in this show, they are weak. The great question is, who is their overlord as he calls it? I am not sure there is one, unless it is from the lower ranks like the Rothschild's. Maybe our blueprint should be sent to him first and lets test the water that way. Either way we can implement it with or without them.

EXPOSE: This is a follow piece to the Temple of Set piece done recently, yet again more delusional, self-importance and somewhat arrogant stance by these people of darkness. Written by Lady Lilith Aquino V° & Magister William T. Butch IV° Co-Grand Masters, with original and revised input from Robertt W. Neilly, GME O.V. & Priestess S. Thompson, M, O.V. Not content with being called Lilith, it seems Mrs. Aquino has lost her marbles as well. Another clown seduced into the dark, being told or thinking that it is the easy path, good luck with that. The Order of the Vampyre is an Order, which embraces the concepts of Vampyric presence as a means to personal power and potential immortality, utterly delusional. What these immortality people reveal is, they are terrified of death, and spend their living days trying to fix it. It is all about cheating Source and indeed the purpose of life itself. Vampirism is a unique Black Magical condition that in and of its very nature requires a posture, which enables a natural and effortless exchange of power from the lesser to the greater. Classic harvesting tactics used again instead of working on themselves. In normal communication, this power is evidenced by the psychological control exerted over others, which means they are weak. Through our Black Magic, this power is evidenced by accessing what is known as lucid dreaming, and increasingly gaining mastery over that state, of becoming which is desirable in its own right. Vampirism goes back to time immemorial, and true Vampirism can be traced back in many cultures around the world, and is therefore known by many different names. A true Vampyre knows that, he does not achieve the posture of effortless power through the mundane act of physical blood drinking. In fact to pursue such acts would mean that he did not understand his own condition, let alone Vampiric Black Magic. Through Xeper, the Word of the AEon of Set, members of this Order will strive to bring to life those qualities and aspects of our potential, which have long been considered to be dead, or latent. Communication is a cornerstone of our work, by communication she means to talk shit. Members of the Order will communicate effectively in order to maintain that concert which will be our collective effort. The Order's founders undertook research that brought them into a dialogue with, and the acquaintance of, existing Vampiric characteristics and Archetypal Forces. They were examining, testing, and proving to themselves, through direct experience, how many of the alleged Vampiric powers such as invisibility, manipulation, the power of sound and breath, were real and were useable. Many of these same powers are, of course, harnessed by non-OV Setian's. Through the great Black Magic, and in ways that are special to the children of the night, we seek to further enhance and augment such powers. On a lesser level, these powers will be evidenced in social communications resulting in personal power as measured by social position, wealth and personal freedom. On a Greater Level, by achieving control of the lucid dreaming state these powers will be the direct experience of Vampyres in a world of their own creation, which can also be potentially shared. These people live in their own head and fake superiority, which is why they live in a world of their own creation, it's like a Metaverse for the psychopaths. Vampyres can be hideous by nature, as well as noble, Vampyres can also be and are glamorous. Those who are members of the Order of the Vampyre will learn to perfect such skills as the application of cosmetics, the use of the voice in subtle ways, including the embedding of commands in one's phrases, and the act of holding another's gaze to influence, to distract or to control. All of these are designed to enhance the creation of the Vampiric posture, such that power flows to the Vampyre for both lesser and greater goals. It is our desire that our school for Vampyres address the Vampyre at all levels, and that our teachings have a practical application in the world. A practical application? What is so practical about Dark Magic or Vampirism? Hence, all of these are steps towards the formation of a more complete Setian, a more complete Vampyre. As such, powers of imagination and visualization are employed by members in this Order. Therefore art, music, and literature can and will be used as tools for our Order members. Within our School for Vampyres, will arise those who specialize in certain aspects of Vampirism, and its proper application. These schools within our School, as well as other directions, and things yet to come to this Order are to be decided by its Masters and members, yet more hierarchy and self-importance. There will be those who first learn more about the Arkte Element here, who then become Warriors, you can do that with soul development. There will be others who first learn of the MetaMind Element here, and who will then specialize in it, Metamind? All very Facebook that. Each of these schools within a school will either be an official office or function of the Temple of Set, or will be informally controlled or helmed, by a Master or senior member of the Order. Such schools may be in the form of Elements; Elements that have their basis here, but may also reach our II ° membership, Temple-wide. Such schools may also be in the form of our Bloodlines, which are schools specializing in various aspects of Vampyric Initiation. These schools are created by Masters of the Order, and are accessible by Order Members only. A Word of Caution: It should be readily understood by all who seek admission to our Order, that we are unique, that is one way of describing it, unique, thankfully. We are separate from the various Right-Hand Path, driven on-line vampire community groups and houses that have sprung up over the past few years. Yet again like light and dark magic, people section it off into left and right path like one is better than the other, no they are both the closed gate left hand path of Set. Such groups promote a weak and powerless version of the Vampyric Archetype, among a myriad of fuzzy New Age ideas, such as missing chakras, other-kin and a need for blood drinking, we do not tolerate such in our ranks. In the Order of the Vampyre, we promote a posture of effortless power, and Setian Vampyric Control, there is no in-between or compromise. Applicants will be considered for admission to the Order by an existing Master of the Order preferably, or by a III ° + member of the Order at large, or by one of the Grand Masters themselves. In most cases, if a Master of the Order deems a Setian is appropriate for the Order, that Setian's membership will almost always be guaranteed. In all cases, however, the decision to admit a Setian will be at the sole discretion of one or both Co-Grand Masters. Either or both Co-Grand Masters will decide favorably on the applicant if he/she is A: particularly well suited for the Order and B: has the necessary amount of time and degree of commitment for such specialized work. It beggars belief the mental state of these type of people, life has so much to offer in terms of development, skills and abilities, yet they choose the self-important club using the most banal methods ever. Another group corrupted by worshipping the fake gods, just like the religions and the tribal peoples. We can develop a better with or without these clowns, they thrive off of our energy and if we produce something infinitely better, more and more people will stay away from this particular type of mental state and darkness.

EXPOSE: Someone else has tried to expose the shenanigans of the Waldorf schools, but also highlights the problems of teachers in general as well. Waldorf schools exist all over the world, and they are especially popular in progressive communities in the United States, such as Green Meadow, New York; Denver, Colorado; Chicago, Illinois; and San Francisco, California. And essential attending for most bloodline family children, where they are assigned not a teacher, but a trainer in the art of breaking the mind of empathy or compassion. However, after accepting a faculty position at a Waldorf school, I very soon observed a disconnect between what parents understand is being offered by the school, and what teachers are discussing inside the faculty meetings. Parents are told about a holistic approach to child development, in which students do handwork, play string instruments, and study cultures from around the world. Many families are drawn to the focus on interpersonal relationships, on the arts, and the festival life. The average family enrolled at a Waldorf school probably doesn't know much about the founder of the movement. Rudolf Steiner, his anthroposophical beliefs based on spiritual science, or his writings which range from philosophical ideas disputing contemporary psychology and physics, to travelogues detailing trips to other planets. When I was hired, I knew nothing about Rudolf Steiner, his writings, his spiritual understandings, or the anthroposophical foundations of the pedagogy practiced at the school. I was attracted by the terms used in marketing the school to the public, holistic, artistic, and healthful came up repeatedly in my research on the school's website, online forums, and the AWSNA the Waldorf School website. I had had enough experiences growing up in parochial schools, to be wary of the connection between religion and education. Thus, I was transparent during the hiring process about my resistance to spiritual practices. During a conversation at my final interview, one of the faculty members asked if at least I would be okay with saying a verse to commence and conclude faculty meetings, to which I responded that I would not find that practice problematic. I thought that would be the extent of the compliance required of me. However, I discovered that much more was required of me philosophically, morally, and spiritually. Indeed, I felt increasingly during my nearly three-year tenure teaching at a Waldorf school that I must fall in line with the fundamental understanding, according to Steiner of who humans are, from pre-birth to beyond in order to survive in my workplace. Indeed, this was explicitly stated in one of this year's faculty meetings. To the best of my recollection, the Master Waldorf Teacher who was presenting said, if you are not on board with this kind of spiritual striving, then you should find somewhere else to work. Yes, because it is a program of producing bot like children, albeit of a higher intelligence, notwithstanding the MK Ultra programs running through those schools. What seemed to be valued was not years in the classroom, experience or expertise, evidence-based teaching practices, collaborative work, or practical professional development, but rather adherence to the philosophies of a White twentieth-century thinker's spiritual ideology. Ah the race element thrown in, and why this piece was written now, to fulfill the divide and conquer game. Being able to speak in Steiner's vocabulary of astral bodies and Ahrimanic forces, was essential to inclusion in the good graces of the faculty body. I guess those topics were outside the teachers learning curve, because they would be useful in public schools. When I proposed going to social-emotional learning conferences, I was encouraged to go to the courses offered by the Center for Anthroposophy instead. When I suggested that we bring the latest research on a topic like classroom management or child development into the conversation, I was told, Rudolf Steiner was clairvoyant, and when you find the truth, there's no improving on it. There was no room for disagreement or alternate perspectives in a community founded on the value-judgment that, Steiner's ideas about education in 1919 were essentially infallible. I remember sitting in an evening talk offered last year on the school campus, during which Steiner's seven-year stages of human development were being presented. This is a fundamental concept about reincarnation and the slow process through which the soul instantiates in the body, and it affects everything from when students learn to read in Waldorf schools, usually not until at least second or third grade to what art blocks are taught in high school. After the presentation, one of the parents was visibly shocked, raised his hand, and said, this is all news to me, I'm going to need to think about this.

That's how I felt too, as slowly and increasingly the requirements for my adoption of anthroposophical values became part of the other duties as assigned in my contract. Reading Rudolf Steiner's philosophical texts is not a requirement for being a member of the parent body, but it was a required part of my work as a teacher at the school. In our required readings, I found hateful, illogical, and disgusting concepts about race, Euro-centrism, and vaccines, to name a few. I was told to take what I like and leave the rest. But these were not just ideological differences of opinion; these ideas have practical, logistical, and real effects in our culture. I read about Steiner's folk souls, his theories about the hierarchies of human evolution in order to see in Steiner's own words, and what he thinks about the black and yellow races, and let me tell you, it's revolting. He writes that humans are on an evolutionary journey through reincarnation and that as souls are refined and purified, they move up from the African to the Asian and finally to the European races. What utter drivel that is, and all designed to create racial divide, all sounds like an advanced version of Darwinism to me. The spot in Africa corresponds to those forces of the earth which imprint upon man the characteristics of early childhood. The spot in Asia corresponds to those which give man the characteristics of youth, and the ripest characteristics are imprinted on man by the corresponding spot in Europe. This is simply a law. As all persons in their different incarnations pass through the various races, therefore, although it may be argued that the European has the advantage over the black and the yellow races, we should not be prejudiced thereby. Rudolf Steiner said here the truth may, indeed be sometimes veiled, but you see that with the help of spiritual science we really do come upon remarkable truths. Veiled truths indeed, all to promote the master race, which is nothing to do with Nazis or Germans, but lies with an off world race of beings who use people like Steiner as patsies. I read about Steiner's rejection of Eastern philosophies and his prioritizing of Western European knowledge, which explains why many students at Waldorf schools still read a high-German medieval romance in eleventh grade rather than Toni Morrison. No amount of organizing diversity conferences for Waldorf teachers will ever fix this fundamental problem in the foundation of the schools' pedagogy. Finally, during the time that I was a part of a Waldorf school, they were repeatedly in the news. Unfortunately, it was because they have been identified as the worst school in the state as far as vaccine compliance is concerned, a direct result of Steiner's belief that childhood illness is part of each human's karma. Whilst Waldorf schools are a problem, this teacher shows how much some of them are a problem as well. A teacher who doesn't study on behalf of his students is not a teacher, but a compliance officer. Thus, Waldorf schools are a magnet for anti-vaxxers he said, a particularly troubling correlation in the wake of the coronavirus pandemic. When the cognitive dissonance I was experiencing, between my work and my integrity became increasingly difficult to tolerate, I reached out to my supervisors, one of whom is a Person of Color. We talked about how problematic I found what I was learning about the Waldorf school movement, about Rudolf Steiner, and about his spiritual program of anthroposophy. I was assured that there were a variety of interpretations, and that the good outweighed the bad. But really, we were all complicit in the white supremacist mission that is Waldorf education globally. That line I do not agree with entirely, as the ones running these types of programs may look white skinned, but that was achieved by genetic meddling as we have found out. Waldorf schools followed the same template of colonization and self-righteous saviorism as other European exports throughout history, and they can now be found on every continent except Antarctica. The Waldorf movement has the same arrogant evangelization mission as Christianity, the same Euro-centric hegemony as British Studies, but with just enough crunchy nature and hippy love to attract progressive folks into spending nearly $20,000 per child to attend. The complicity was guaranteed by a few factors, the same kind of bullying and gaslighting and us versus them tactics, as are used in other religious cultish environments apply in this case, too. As I had been warned, indeed there are verses chanted during faculty meetings. We all stood and listened as a passage was recited about heavenly archai sharing a drop of wisdom with us. Okay, I kept saying to myself, it's just a pretty piece of literature, right? But I stood up during those prayers for almost three years, and every time I wondered if it would have been acceptable not to stand. How would that act of protest have been received in the culture of the faculty body? Could I have ever progressed in my career at that place while holding such divergent views? Must I believe that Steiner's seven-year phases of human development are ontologically real? That our reincarnated bodies become fully separated from our mothers when we lose our milk teeth? That one's ego presence doesn't incarnate until precisely twenty-one years of age? That my students who had descended from Europeans were more spiritually and evolutionarily advanced than those with Asian, or African ancestors? Statistically that has been the case and no amount of ignoring will change that fact, but the Asians in particular and many of the blacks that reside in America and European countries have made giant strides in the past 50 years. Could I say no and be a part of the governing College of Teachers? How far outside of orthodoxy would be tolerated? There would be a ceiling to my professional trajectory at the Waldorf school, one guarded by the question of whether or not I would comply with the mandatory training, internalize the Steiner-speak, and perform as, if not truly become, an acolyte, working out of Steiner's spiritual scientific understanding of human development. Whether or not I would attend the Waldorf teacher training, where I would presumably drink the kool-aid, became a point of contention. The proposed training was a three-year long program, undertaken at a few for-profit institutions around the country, during which Waldorf teachers-in-training experience the artistic relationship with the curriculum during five or six-week sessions each summer, at a cost of nearly $30,000 in tuition, room, and board all included. The best teachers at the school were understood to be the ones who had participated in the Waldorf training, which involves, I think, an anticipated conversion to anthroposophy as a spiritual practice, or at least a complete willingness to evangelize the Waldorf pedagogical principles. One has to ask why this teacher actually took up a job at Waldorf at all, he seems to have no plans to develop himself outside of the standard norms, all of which failed most pupils in the past 80-90 years. Attending the training became a point of faculty evaluation; it was part of my improvement plan for my work. The Waldorf movement in the United States is experiencing a transition, as these teaching centers are not attracting the candidates that are needed to fill jobs in Waldorf schools. So, traditionally educated teachers have been filling these posts across the country, leading schools to greater and lesser degrees away from their anthroposophical roots. Some Waldorf schools are charter schools, and/or public schools, and their discussion of karma, of the students' angels, and of spiritual stages of reincarnation during faculty meetings, I can only imagine, is subdued. But in some Waldorf schools, there is an effort underway to purify the core values of the community, to reassure the community that anthroposophy is at the center of the school, and to close ranks and go on the defensive about all things Steiner. I was told that there was a sickness in the school that could only be cured by my acquiescing to this indoctrination. Clearly this teacher doesn't see the largest indoctrination program ever, American public schools of which I am sure previously he taught in. Why didn't he see the issues in the regular schooling and complain? Or as suspected he actually thinks the public schools is the way to go. The answer is it is not, and should have been clear to every teacher. At the Waldorf school where I worked, it wasn't enough to be a good teacher. You must become a Waldorf teacher. Waldorf becomes not the name of a school, but a group that you join, an identity that you become. Faculty children are flippantly referred to as Waldorphans, due to the commitment their faculty-parents show to the school, often times in conflict with a healthy home life. I applied to teach at a Waldorf school because I intuitively understood that students should feel passionate about their learning, that they should be challenged intellectually, and that they should work with their hands to try for themselves. That's what the brochures said. That's why, I think, intellectuals and politicians, techies and crunchies alike have flocked to these schools. In fact, the Bill and Melinda Gates Foundation helped establish a charter Waldorf School in Sacramento. But, of course they did, and that reveals the negative intentions behind the smokescreen a Waldorf school provides. The radical Steiner stuff is a smokescreen also, although it challenges the students there is the hidden sinister side to this not school, but a program. The New York Times just republished a very positive story about the Waldorf School model this year. Kanye West praised the Waldorf movement when he visited with Trump in the Oval Office. But there is something insidious about the bait and switch tactic of a school that attracts the world's progressive secular humanists into its folds, and swears as it is inculcating spiritual ideology, at least in the faculty body, if not indirectly in the student and parent body as well, that it is not. The legalese of offering a pedagogy based in Steiner's spiritual anthroposophy, his racist, colonialist project but technically not calling it a religious school is difficult for me to reconcile. Indeed, People for Legal and Nonsectarian Schools waged a suit against the Sacramento City Unified School District, on the grounds that Waldorf schools violate the separation of church and state, to no avail. I recently visited my alma mater to speak on a panel about post-graduation jobs; I was there to discuss the joys of teaching high school at the Waldorf school. One of the graduate students raised her hand, and stated, rather than asked, I thought it was a cult, to which I replied, shamefully, no comment, before submitting my resignation. Maybe the real problem with this guy is, he is not in their club, he will be glad he wasn't at a later date when more people find out what really goes on in Waldorf schools. We had two alleged teachers in the Alt Media briefly, both were introduced by Randy Maugans, he sure knew how to pick the dodgy guests, in Elana Freeland sister of the Canadian politician and the undercover agent herself Cara St. Louis or real name Orendorf. Neither gave me the impression they were teachers at all, and possibly were Svali like trainers or handlers. Neither Waldorf or public schools, colleges or Universities have served any of the children well over the past 80 or so years, and that has to change in the future. Our Communal Gathering endeavors for the TPC to be at the forefront of that change. Big developments have taken place with our School Curriculums for Junior and High School levels, with members taking on board the tasks ahead, after a long pause from the THI State groups. It is not only Waldorf that is failing children and this should be a primary concerns for everyone, whether you are a parent or not. The children are our future and we have failed them badly for 3-4 generations now.

OTHER PIECES: This is a piece done by one of the members on his blog, that I thought would be useful to a wider audience. Maturity - Putting the grown-up pants on: Being a grown-up is to me, at least arguably, one of the hallmarks of achievement, along with happiness, excellent health, abundance, fulfillment, security, growing consciousness, etc. Why would I talk about being a grown-up? Who has given me the permission to even say something about maturity? Well, for one - I don't ask for permissions and I don't need any. But what makes me an authority in this matter? Talking about personal maturity, I don't consider myself an expert. Neither do I compare my development journey to the journey of others per se. Even though, when looking around, I do consider myself as someone who at least has a valid opinion that might contribute to society, and help others in progress, just by having gone through a portion of becoming mature myself, in my own personal development process. Since I am just as perfect, or rather imperfect, as anyone else, my points in this article are at the very least, worth pondering on. My observations and opinions are entirely from a place of love and caring for you, me and all of us as a collective, as we are all one, connected on a high level as children of Creation. It is not patronizing and it is not being Besser-Wisser, a German expression for someone who always knows better than you and has the right to judge you. But taking an objective look at others is somewhat easier than, taking an objective look at oneself in the mirror or its virtual/imagined equivalent. In Essence Maturity is thus very much an observation of oneself, and letting oneself, or not, get away with childish behavior and/or less than adequate conduct. Not because someone is playing a parent, your boss, government or perceived authority told you so, and not because of any ego-based thinking of being better than others, avoiding shame & blame game. But because mature thinking entails having observed your own behavior, and weeding out behavior patterns that are less-than-helpful, or even harmful. It requires parenting yourself, and being loving, thoughtful, caring and supporting about it, too. So, the path toward attainment of maturity and the continuous process of becoming more mature is at least bearable, if not a pleasurable journey. Why is it not happening all around, then? In our society where the term personal maturity, being a grown-up is so worn-out, how can we ever become grown-ups? Who would be our role models? Where do we look for role models? Who can pave the way? How do we know who to model, what is the path or the principles to follow? Our society relies on partly wrong virtues, and a dumbed down version of science and technology. People on our planet are being continuously poisoned on purpose and life span is much shorter than many other societies, so we never get the chance to learn anything more than in this short span of 70 years, or if we're lucky even 100 years. Our galactic space brothers and sisters, who tend to live much longer hundreds and even thousands of years, have a much superior mindset in this regard. At least some of the cultures around and underneath us. When people live longer, and can recall previous lifetimes, they tend to accumulate knowledge and wisdom far more readily and better than we ever could. Our inferiority is also due to deliberate squashing of societal structure, the purposeful breaking of family, tribal and cultural virtues, for the sake of control, divide and Conquer and making us lose, loosen or weaken our bonds to each other, in order to be able to enslave us. I know they don't have a superior mindset, given the interactions with them. The Working Bees' Model? The working class in the insect domain don't need maturity, just genes. They are created according to a genetic blueprint which is indeed a marvel, and their personal development is not exactly their main goal. They do their role, like bringing nutrients to the collective and defend their queen/s, or die trying without ever questioning any life purpose.

Ponder on this, consider and reconsider.

What would happen if and when the global society on our planet overnight or a slightly longer period, loses the restraints imposed on us and starts living up to our potential as the Crown of Creation?

Maturity is all about taking responsibility, acceptance and making wise decisions. It is ultimately expressed by caring for each other, sharing what we have for the betterment of the all. Reflecting upon oneself, having gone through the course of life and having faced some tricky moments and difficult decisions, some of which needed to be made on the spot. And for the sake of all of us, quitting once and for all childish behavior.

Decisions need to be made, always.

Decisions are the task of every living being, from a tree to a bee, all the way up the ladder to humans, whales, insects, wolves, and all in between. Decisions have an irritating tendency to be very significant and tough when there is the least time to consider, weigh the consequences and make the crucial and necessary qualified guesswork.

Making decisions is tough sometimes, admitted. But not deciding is in fact a decision, too. The 3 flavors of making decisions: Taking a good decision, good is to me win-win, where both should gain from it. Taking a bad, predatorial or egoistic decision, meaning to me, win-lose. I am the beneficiary, and you either lose or I don't care what it winds up to be. Not taking any decision, meaning no honest effort is invested to take the steering wheel, and we (myself included) may depend on arbitration of destiny.

Either of these 3 flavors may wind up as a good or bad decision, at this time or later, and will become a start point for the following decision-making processes.

Which way would you prefer?

Note to self: A positive observation People who are the most mature, are those who are the caretakers of others who are highly dependent on them, be it the disabled, the crippled or the old. They just have to get over their childish tendencies and grow up, grow a pair of balls too in the process. Since this is tough, and requires a way of loving and cherishing life far more than having a dog, a rodent or a pet at home. The life of another human being is in your hands. And everyone might have a parent, who some day may become dependent on others again.

Our parents?

How much can we learn from our older family members?

Some of them have been around long enough to accumulate wisdom, and successfully prevailed through some hardships. Some of them have had the time to reflect upon their share of destiny. They might also have lived long enough to remember the encounters and the meaning of learning from their mistakes, and still have the mental acuity so they can teach their wisdom, and transfer it to the younger ones.

Society has in my observation anyway, has lost a big portion of the accumulated maturity, held by the elders and traditions, and culture, familial and tribal structures. Maturity level has been eroded, seemingly especially in recent years with the spread of knowledge and modern lifestyle, plagued by wars and a stressful lifestyle. The absence of time/ability/space for going deeper into the meaning of things, in order to make true progress.

Whereas a 10 year old child could and had to help, in many tasks at home and even in the business/workshop, the same child nowadays in developed countries is not used to helping, is not interested, and doesn't have to or is not expected to be able to help. In many families, children of this age run around and play with their mobile phones or the gaming console, watch TV and do something that brings absolutely nothing to themselves or others, to their maturity level or to society. At school where education takes place, learning is almost absent too. But far worse, these life arts of going deeper than superficiality, is left untouched.

People are supposed to become sheeple, stressed, chronically ill, easily manipulated, dumbed down by education and the media. And so, we are controlled by the few, who have money and power, and reigns over the many.

The lack of mutual support due to decaying society, made worse by fallen bond of friends and family, is a process achieved by inflicting war, famine and scarcity, and other stresses. It renders people incapable of looking into themselves, so only very few ever ascend over mere survival and achieve true greatness, and any higher degree of personal maturity.

So why would anybody become more mature? more capable of making decisions and hence more independent when the controlling hierarchy wants exactly the opposite, and has driven society towards being easily controlled?

The ruling cast of this society wouldn't change it, they don't and they won't ever.

It is our task as humans to understand this trend and escape the reigns of control, and habitual living too. And this is where maturity comes into play, because it is necessary for making decisions, living a virtuous life and ascending in personal development.

Equipped with the deep understanding of oneself that I mention here, one important outcome beside some more peace of mind, is the ability to accept the world around us and love unconditionally. Leave the battles that I don't need to invest in, so I can invest more keenly and seriously in issues I care about more.

The attached infographics is, in a nutshell, almost entirely about accepting.

So, take a good look in the mirror. Take it personal: what can you and I do to make our lives better, more responsible, and contribute to the progress of yourself, of me, and the all? A great piece and understanding of the issues we face, but we are prepared to undertake that task and fix things once and for all.

It's been centuries since the first ancient skeleton of a person with gigantism was found near Rome. But online, some claim similar skeletons were found in the United States as well. A recent Facebook post claiming archaeologists dug up human skeletons 7-feet tall with horned skulls in Pennsylvania, accrued more than 1,000 shares in two days. That is the Moses group, he had horns as depicted in his statue. During an archaeological excavation in Sayre, Bradford County, Pennsylvania in the 1880s, a number of human skulls were unearthed. These skeletons were anatomically correct, except for the anomaly of their projections. Two distinct horns two inches above the eyebrow, and the fact that their average height in life would have been around seven feet tall. The post asserts the bones were sent to the American Investigating Museum in Philadelphia, where they were stolen and never to be seen again. In came the skeptics and deflection agents to attack the post citing they are experts, erm, you're not. But there is no evidence to support the claim, yes there is in many ancient photographs. Erin Kimmerle, an associate professor of anthropology at the University of Central Florida said, some people do grow to unusual size, and ancient skeletons have been found of people suffering from gigantism. That's a genetic disorder caused when individuals experience abnormal linear growth, due to excessive action of insulin-like growth factors. (M) Basically you keep growing even though the growth plates are fused, Kimmerle said in an email. The frequency is believed to be about 8 cases per 1 million people, I am not sure if it was more frequent in the past because earlier testing and treatments are possible now. But the horned skull shown in the Facebook post is a fake, Kimmerle said, is the Moses statue fake also then? USA TODAY found no credible news or scientific reports of any such discovery. Researchers at the Robert S. Peabody Institute of Archaeology described the tale of horned giants in Pennsylvania as a compilation of stories that, with time, took on a life of their own. But they have been found all around the world, and is direct evidence of an off world race, hence the cover up. Newspaper articles from the 19th and early 20th centuries included multiple versions of the story. Peabody researchers attributed the references of giant skeletons to misidentified extinct animal species, (M) and to written records that exaggerated the height of individuals who were tall for the time. While the University of Pennsylvania has a collection of 1,300 crania included in the Penn Museum's Morton Collection, there is no museum with the name American Investigating Museum, as the post claims. Kimmerle confirmed the museum does not exist. Yes, there is, it is called the Smithsonian, who seems to have been created in part for this very task. If they are not, then perhaps Smithsonian should open all their vaults and rooms and make it all available to the public?

Speaking of science, I have decided to rename another science to a new name. The science of Astrology to be renamed butt plug science, because everything is going to, from, or up Uranus.

ENDING PIECE: I am delighted so many of you have taken up the mantle and chipping in with ideas, solutions, plans and planning for the projects and communal gatherings. Keep it going as this is an important phase we are in the midst of, and a fantastic opportunity for we the people to take the mantle and run with it. With so many disenfranchised in society we will pick up many other people to join and help us along the way. But I don't want you to get bogged down in thinking you are not good enough, or worthy enough to lead the life of yours and our dreams. I don't want us to feel that the nightmares of our past, mean we are disqualified from having a brighter, and more meaningful future. The issue of accepting praise and recognition for things you have done or achieved came up this week, and our reluctance in many ways to accept it, particularly the introverts, which is the most common trait in this group. Extraverts demand that praise, as they cover up weaknesses within, like the Globe awards people, all giving each other awards to stay relevant and appease their egos. But introverts are different and struggle to accept praise, we have to learn to balance that aspect, as readily as we accept the flak and abuse. We have all dragged each other down in so many ways, that has to be changed going forward and to elevate each other. I want to see you all become the leaders of your own lives, and leaders of THI & TPC, and I want us to all become the truest and most courageous version of ourselves. I would like you all to be flexible in terms of your decision making, living arrangements, whereby you are willing to be the change, not wait for the change to fall into your comfort zone. It may require you moving to be where you need to be, that is being the change and changing your timeline.

We all have wounds, we have all experienced traumas, and reaching a level of acceptance with this, and knowing that despite it all we can all be whole again and flourish, that is the pathway to healing under and within this energy field.

We don't need to wear our wounds as a badge of honor, it has not served us well, that has allowed low vibrations and victimhood to flourish, we didn't need those either.

Instead we can just allow them to become part of who we are, integrating it and it becomes not who we are, but who we were, from there you create your own blueprint for your life, and then onto the collective.

You will be guided to reach new levels of self-acceptance like never before, provided you are open and in acceptance.

We can allow them guides and intuitions to lift us and guide us to become more compassionate, more caring, more trusting, more loving people, and far more authentic than we have been previously.

Look, nobody said this was going to be easy, we left it too far and too long for an easier transition. But just because it appears hard, does not make it so. So called hard tasks brings much more development of the self when it is accomplished, and hard is only a mindset. We will win and lose many battles in life and the future, but that is not the end goal. The end goal is to win the war for control of this planet, ran for and by people and beings in a better and more harmonious way than has ever gone before. All it takes is, effort, and a little bit of heart and soul.
