NEWS: As forecasted in a recent show Pelosi is stepping down as announced today in January. Already the sickly media are waffling platitudes about her, it is vomit inducing how they celebrate evil people with a complete disregard of the public. As for my opinion bye bye Pelosi and please let the crypt door hit you on the way out.

Here is an interesting story all hidden from the public view in many ways, as it appears some in the 5 Eyes Alliance and the power players in the West have had enough of the Ukraine distraction and want an end to it. The White House is privately asking top Ukrainian officials to show openness to peace talks with Russia, the Washington Post reveals. The pressure is intended to alleviate foreign backers' concerns about a long conflict, sources say. Kiev's public refusal to negotiate with Moscow unless President Vladimir Putin is removed from power in Russia must be abandoned, people familiar with the discussions told the paper. However, the encouragement isn't aimed at pushing Ukraine to engage in actual peace talks with Moscow to put an end to the fighting, which has been underway since late February, the sources pointed out. Yeah right, let's not lose face is what they are saying, and lets look like we are pursuing something else. The shekel people are losing money, just like I warned in the clowns in panic series. The move is more of a calculated attempt to make sure Vladimir Zelensky's government retains the support of foreign nations, in which the public have become increasingly concerned about the prospect of the conflict continuing for years, they explained. Ukraine fatigue is a real thing for some of our partners, an unnamed US official told the WaPo. That is the second report now where the clowns have used the term fatigued, the other one was in relation to the Covid scam. Last month, Zelensky signed a decree, which officially made it impossible for him to hold talks with his Russian counterpart Vladimir Putin. Which proves Zelensky is a liar, after doing public speeches saying he would discuss peace and then privately signing a decree not to. It is embarrassing politics again, and more child-like behaviors that affect the Ukrainian people he is supposed to represent. Except he is not Ukrainian is he? He is Jewish, and his story tells you that never ends well for the people. The move followed the incorporation of the People's Republics of Donetsk and Lugansk, as well as Kherson and Zaporozhye Regions, into the Russian state as a result of referendums held in those territories. Russia, which has repeatedly invited Ukrainian authorities to come to the negotiating table in recent months, has blamed Kiev for undermining any potential for a peaceful settlement of the crisis. How can we discuss any possible agreements when there's no willingness to even talk to us from the other side? Putin said on Monday. So, we'll wait, maybe the necessary conditions will come about. Kremlin Press Secretary Dmitry Peskov suggested last week that the negotiations should also include the US. As any peace deal with Kiev would have little credibility because it could be instantly rescinded by Ukraine's backers in the West, he said. The deciding vote rests with Washington, Peskov insisted. I wish he would also state Tel Aviv as well as Washington, given they were the main backers of it. One suspects the West as they call it, the real name the Deep State are now panicking as nothing is working and they have finally realized America is collapsing around them, and there will be no funds for them or anyone in the near future. All of which this show and indeed the Trustee told them back in 2017.

Remember I warned about Poland would be next to be targeted after Ukraine? Two people have been killed in Poland after missiles landed near the Ukrainian border. Both are blaming each other, I suspect a NATO false flag personally. Designed to escalate the war and justify their open involvement, instead of behind the scenes involvement with 5 eyes agencies. War produces fear, public gets fearful and then asks for solutions, which they provide, meanwhile getting loads of orders for weaponry, how it works.

A large earthquake hit Tonga on Friday, triggering a tsunami warning and an immediate evacuation order from the government of the island nation. The United States Geological Survey (USGA) said Friday a 7.3 magnitude earthquake had been detected 211 kilometers east of Neiafu, Tonga. The earthquake occurred at a depth of 10 kilometers (6.2 miles) about 200 kilometers (124 miles) east of Neiafu, according to the government. Yet again the depth was 10km all of which means it was the earthquake weapon again. The question is what for? In world fighting, bases being destroyed or are these weapons used to open up mining fields? The reason I say mining is, wherever weapons of mass destruction have been used, there is an increase in mining for the chemicals and elements those weapons create. It is like printing your own money in essence. The same ones who benefit from war, also benefit from the mining. For evidence of that, look at the 4 corner States.

A bombing that took place in Turkey this week and killed 6 people, has raised concerns given the video of the alleged arrest of the terrorist. Said to be a woman linked with the Syrian militia, a branch of the Kurdistan Workers' Party, or P.K.K. The US sent condolences which was refused by Turkey and accused America of being part of it, due to working with the P.K.K. The P.K.K. denied involvement. But the video that accompanied the alleged arrest, somewhat gave it away for me. It all looked staged and when the woman got close to the camera, the military police guy pushed her head down so her couldn't be seen by the film crew. She was then paraded in a studio of sort with her face fuzzied out. Why would they do that? Oh and by the way the woman had a t-shirt on with certain words, it said New York. A future pointer to another event, or a message to someone?

Funny how his story repeats itself isn't it? And how familiar names pop up in differing scenes of the movie. In 2020 Arizona and Maricopa county were at the center of a storm, allegations of fake ballots and the voting was delayed and other shenanigans. In 2022 it repeats again, as the state continues processing mail-in ballots in the close race, Arizona officials have said the ballot-counting could stretch into next week. The majority of those uncounted votes are in Maricopa county. The Republican candidate Lake has called Arizona's elections system a laughingstock and accused officials of intentionally slowing down the process. Here comes the familiar name. The Maricopa's head of elections, Bill Gates, has called Lake's claims offensive. Another Be ill Gates causing issues, you can't make this stuff up. The Demoncrats will win the close calls and the election fraud will spin out for another two years. The solution to that is, if no one votes, there is no election, there is no fraud, miscounts, hanging chads, mail in ballot discarding, none of that. More importantly there will be no politicians taking the piss out of the people ran by Israeli lobbyists. Then it will be time for the people to appoint their candidates, not the ones selected for them.

The pure folly of putting your money into crypto currency, it is called crypto for a reason, it is dead currency. Well, a whole of heap of other stupid investors in this deep lying scam have just lost billions in assets. Sam Bankman-Fried gave the Dems over $40 million dollars, and that information is available from the Federal Election Committee. The Democrat's newest megadonor Sam Bankman-Fried was forced to try and sell the crypto exchange he founded to his biggest rival on election day. Bankman-Fried initially had a non-binding agreement that Changpeng Zhao, the leader of competitor Binance, would acquire the company. This was after FTX saw around $6 billion of withdrawals within 72 hours. Sam Bankman-Fried, the CEO of crypto exchange FTX considered the Democrats' newest megadonor ahead of the 2022 midterm elections, reportedly saw around $6 billion of withdrawals within 72 hours before Tuesday morning, forcing him to sell the company to its biggest rival on Election Day. It was reported that Changpeng Zhao, the leader of competitor Binance, said the company signed a nonbinding agreement on Tuesday to buy FTX's non-U.S. unit to help cover a liquidity crunch at the rival exchange. The stunning bailout came about as American voters simultaneously went to the polls. This is a truly crazy event in startup world, a Dot-com bust level event," tech reporter Eric Newcomer tweeted of the sale. Binance has now backed out of its plans to acquire the company, leaving Sam Bankman-Fried's crypto empire on the verge of collapse. FTX had $16b in customer assets, and they gave $10b to Alameda who blew it all, Alameda it seems is ran by Fried's girlfriend. Bankman-Fried was the second biggest left-wing donor in 2022 behind Soros. Who is Samuel Bankman-Fried also known by his initials SBF, is an American entrepreneur, investor and former billionaire. He is the founder and former CEO of FTX, a cryptocurrency exchange, FTX.US, its U.S. affiliate, and Alameda Research, a quantitative cryptocurrency trading firm. FTX experienced a solvency crisis in late 2022, which led to a collapse in FTX's native cryptocurrency, FTT. Amid the crisis, Bankman-Fried announced he would wind down operations at Alameda Research and resigned as CEO of FTX, which filed for Chapter 11 bankruptcy. Bankman-Fried's net worth peaked at $26 billion, in October 2022, he had an estimated net worth of $10.5 billion. However, on November 8, 2022, amid FTX's solvency crisis, his net worth was estimated to have dropped 94% in a day to $991.5 million, according to the Bloomberg Billionaires Index, the largest one-day drop in the index's history. By November 11, 2022, the Bloomberg Billionaires Index considered Bankman-Fried to have no material wealth. Before Bankman-Fried's wealth eroded in November 2022, Bankman-Fried was a major donor to the Democratic Party and many left-wing political causes. He was the second-largest individual donor to Joe Biden in the 2020 election cycle, personally donating $5.2 million, and donated $40 million to the Democratic Party during the 2022 US midterms elections.. Bankman-Fried had transferred at least $4 billion from FTX to Alameda Research, without any disclosure to insiders or the public, earlier in 2022. The sources said that the money transferred had included customer funds, and that it was backed by FTT and shares in Robinhood. Robinhood? More like robbing bastard. An anonymous source cited by the Wall Street Journal stated that Bankman-Fried had disclosed that Alameda owed FTX about $10 billion which were secured through customer funds stored in FTX when FTX had, at the time, $16 billion in customer assets. According to anonymous sources cited by the Wall Street Journal, the Chief Executive of Alameda Research Caroline Ellison told employees that Bankman-Fried was aware that FTX had lent its customers' money to Alameda to help it meet its liabilities. Bankman-Fried resigned as CEO of FTX on November 11 and was replaced by John J. Ray III, the same day FTX and related entities filed for bankruptcy in Delaware. John Jay Ray III, who led the disgraced energy titan Enron through rocky bankruptcy proceedings and a slew of settlements in the early-mid 2000s, has taken over as CEO at beleaguered crypto exchange FTX. Birds of a feather flock together applies there, these thieves are like cuckoos fleeing from one nest to another stealing peoples wealth. As for Bankman-Fried, he has an interesting connection that keeps cropping up and will not go away it seems. Bankman-Fried was born in 1992 on the campus of Stanford University into a family of academics. The University connection and the next one? Born and raised to an upper-middle-class Jewish family in California, he is the son of Barbara Fried and Joseph Bankman, both professors at Stanford Law School. So, now it seems the Jewish are running the crypto as well, that will not and never will end well. Personally I find the whole thing bizarre, no protection, no access to your funds, no physical assets, just fresh air tokens all for the desire to gamble. It is high level gambling with the same outcome for most in Vegas, where the banker wins and most people lose of all their money. The system does not allow the ordinary guy to win at it, like the card readers in Vegas who are banned.

Clowns in Europe are playing games with Energy again, this time through bureaucracy. There is a 1994 Energy Charter Treaty that allows utility firms to sue governments if they make changes to energy policies. Now several EU states say the pact is incompatible with the urgent need to tackle climate change. Germany will pull out of the 1994 energy treaty that has been widely criticized for protecting investments in fossil fuels, a spokesperson for the government said Friday. Franziska Brantner, parliamentary state secretary at the Economy Ministry, said the decision to withdraw from the Energy Charter Treaty, was part of the country's commitment to consistently aligning our trade policy with climate protection. She added that the move was also an important signal to the United Nations Climate Change Conference, COP27, underway in Egypt. Classic grandstanding and the focus of attention to their clown conferences. Europe's largest economy joins France, the Netherlands, Spain and Poland in withdrawing from the pact. The other countries have said the pact is incompatible with their commitments to the 2015 Paris accord to combat climate change. What is the Energy Charter Treaty? The ECT, which has more than 50 signatories including the European Union, was designed to secure energy supplies and offers protection to companies investing in the energy industry. Protection of the greed-based harvesters then, the vulture capitalists and now these same people are wishing to make a greater killing with their fake climate change script. Its focus was mostly on energy infrastructure investments in volatile ex-Soviet states in Central Asia and Eastern Europe, A key element of the treaty allows energy companies to sue governments over energy policy changes that could hurt their investments, exposing states to multi-billion-dollar compensation claims. German utility company RWE has used the ECT to start legal action against the Netherlands, alleging that the government failed to allow adequate time and resources to transition away from coal. The case may have partly motivated the Dutch decision to quit the treaty. In June, the European Union struck a compromise deal, to come into force next month if no signatories object, to revise the treaty to limit legal actions where they jeopardize climate goals. But climate groups have criticized loopholes left in the update and say it continues to put efforts to curb global warming at risk. Green parliamentary group leader Katharina Dröge hailed the German decision as a milestone. Remember when we all thought the green environment activists was a good thing, appears to have been another orchestrated ploy now doesn't it? No other international trade or investment agreement in the world has triggered more investor lawsuits than the Energy Charter Treaty, she said. This pact is an obstacle to the energy transition and costs the state billions. Does anyone ask what the energy transition actually is? Given the show Tuesday, one ponders is it Blue energy?

MEDICAL NEWS: Good news on the Covid front again. As the head of the World Health Organization said on Wednesday that global COVID-19 deaths have dropped 90 percent since February. Tedros Adhanom Ghebreyesus, the director-general of WHO, said at a media briefing that only 9,400 COVID-19 deaths were reported to the organization last week, down from the more than 75,000 deaths reported in February. We have come a long way, and this is definitely cause for optimism, but we continue to call on all governments, communities and individuals to remain vigilant, he said. Almost 10,000 deaths a week is 10,000 too many, for a disease that can be prevented and treated. Tedros said testing rates remain low globally, vaccination gaps are wide and the continued creation of new variants is concerning. He said WHO urges everyone to become fully vaccinated and get their next dose if they are eligible. Covid-19 cases in the United States have consistently fallen since the end of July before plateauing in recent weeks. Data from the CDC shows the number of weekly cases topped 900,000 at the end of July and has hovered around 265,000 since last month. Nice little distraction piece though, to focus only on Covid cases deaths and not on the burgeoning death rates of non-covid, but vaccine deaths.

That was the good news, this not so much as the psychopathic and greed-based scientists kick in again. In light of Tuesday's show and the dot connectors in that, this brings more parallels than people would like to admit. Pfizer and BioNTech have launched a clinical trial on a vaccine targeting both Covid-19 and influenza, the companies announced Thursday. The phase 1 trial is being done in the United States with 180 participants between the ages of 18 and 64, with the first participant dosed this week, the companies said. The follow-up period for each participant will be six months. Dr. Ugur Sahin, CEO and co-founder of BioNTech said; by combining both indications in one vaccine approach, we aim to provide individuals with an efficient way to receive immunization against two severe respiratory diseases with evolving viruses that require vaccine adaptation.. The combination vaccine is based on the currently available bivalent Covid-19 booster and a quadrivalent mRNA flu vaccine, which is designed to protect against four different flu viruses. The phase 1 trial will test for safety, immune response and optimal dose level of the combination vaccine, before moving on to larger trials. The data will also provide insight into the potential of mRNA vaccines to address more than one pathogen, Sahin said. Annaliesa Anderson, senior vice president and chief scientific officer of vaccine research and development for Pfizer, called this an exciting step in our ongoing journey with BioNTech. as we collectively look to transform the prevention of infectious diseases around the world. Even with existing seasonal influenza vaccines, the burden of this virus is severe across the world causing thousands of deaths and hospitalizations every year, she said in a statement. Are these people taking the piss, completely shut off from society, totally retarded or part of an agenda against the people? How can anyone be that blind? I guess the saying is true, blinded by science. All of which makes science another illusion game. Studies indicate Covid-19 vaccine efficacy fades over time, though it's not clear if every American will need an annual Covid-19 booster. Erm that assumes they worked to begin with, they don't and never have, even the flu jabs as we will find out in another report soon. As scientists continue to assess the need, several companies are at work on creating a single injection each fall that protects against both seasonal flu and Covid-19. In addition to Pfizer, pharmaceutical companies Moderna and Novavax have announced plans to work on a combo shot. Moderna said it anticipates starting clinical trials on a single-dose vaccine that combines a booster against Covid-19 and a booster against flu by the end of the year, with hopes of the vaccine being available for the 2023 season. Moderna COE Stéphane Bancel said during the Sept. 9 investor meeting; We believe this is a very large opportunity that is ahead of us, if we could bring to market a high efficacy pan-respiratory annual booster. A very large financial booster that equates to, regardless of whether it works or not, let's make some shekels again. Yes shekels because Bancel is Jewish and yes he went to Harvard as well, a breeding ground for greed based psychopaths it seems to me.

SOCIETY NEWS: In a predictable, yet nonetheless shocking outcome, the latest scores on the National Assessment of Educational Progress record the biggest decline in math in three decades. But why is it predictable? Why complain about it and not provide a solution to it, or even find out what is the cause? In mathematics, eighth grade students' NAEP scores dropped eight points from 2019 to 2022, according to results released Monday. Just 26% of eighth graders now perform math proficiently, down from 33% in 2019. Fourth graders saw a five-point decline in math, with the percentage scoring as proficient dropping from 41% to 36%. In both fourth and eighth-grade reading, student's NAEP scores dipped three points from 2019 to 2022. Thirty-three percent of fourth graders reached reading proficiency in 2022, down from 35% in 2019. Among eighth graders, reading proficiency declined from 34% to 31%. That's right, fewer than one-third of eighth graders now can read proficiently. Overall, 49 out of 50 states saw statistically significant declines in eighth grade math; 33 states saw statistically significant declines in eighth grade reading. Declines in some states were particularly acute: Fourth graders in Delaware fared the worst in math, losing 14 points, which is a year-and-a-half's worth of progress. Fourth graders in Maryland, New Mexico, New York, Virginia and the District of Columbia lost over a year's worth of learning in math with minus 10 points. Virginia fourth graders lost 10 points in reading. Oklahoma eighth graders lost 13 points in math, while Delaware and West Virginia eighth graders lost 12 points. Those in Maryland, Massachusetts, Minnesota, New Jersey, and Pennsylvania lost 11 points. Eighth graders in Colorado, Connecticut, Kansas, Maine, New Mexico, North Carolina, Ohio, Vermont, Washington, and the District of Columbia lost 10 points in math. The education researcher Ben DeGrow points out that, eighth grade math scores on the National Assessment of Educational Progress are devastating. Ninety percent of states lost at least half a year's worth of learning in math, with 18 states losing an entire year. DeGrow notes that only Utah schools and Defense Department schools were spared in the decline. Math and reading declines on the main NAEP, follow the declines in math and reading reported in September on the NAEP long-term trend assessment of 9-year-olds. Although scores fell in nearly every state to a greater or lesser degree, as Harvard University's Marty West found, student scores declined more on average in states where remote learning was more prevalent. The relationship between remote learning and learning declines is negative and statistically significant, but the strength of the correlation is weak, with remote instruction explaining less than 10% of the change in test scores, according to West's analysis. Which means declines in test scores are most likely a combination of bad policies: no shit sherlock! School closures induced by teachers unions that require emergency remote instruction, plus special interest groups' preoccupation with radical gender ideology and critical race theory during this crisis. As early as the fall of 2020, the CDC was reporting that in-person learning was rarely a source of Covid-19 outbreak. Yet teachers unions continued to fight to keep schools closed, some even doing so this year in places such as Chicago, Detroit and Boston. And when they did decide to engage in remote instruction, parents could hear the charge of anti-racism guru Ibram X. Kendi echoing through their child's laptop after a lesson on the gender unicorn. Kendi argues that policy outcomes are central in measuring and effecting racial equity. He has said, all along we've been trying to change people, when we really need to change policies. Finally someone else who gets it, forget people and focus on policies, because if we do, those in positions of power will crumble. When speaking in November 2020 to the Alliance for Early Success, Kendi was asked if that even means abiding racist behavior and attitudes if it leads to winning an antiracist policy. Kendi answered with a definitive yes, I want things to change for millions of people, millions of children as opposed to trying to change one individual person. One bright spot exists: Catholic schools. While public school policies led to historic declines in learning over the past two years, Catholic schools safeguarded student achievement. For example, students in Catholic schools saw no declines in fourth grade math, while public school students lost five points. Although public school students lost three points in eighth grade reading, Catholic school students actually gained a point. These scores do matter. As economist Eric Hanushek has demonstrated, academic achievement scores predict future economic growth. Higher scores on the National Assessment of Educational Progress test in a given state, portend higher economic growth in the future. Yet, as some have quipped, two weeks to slow the spread turned into two years to flatten a generation. Yep the two weeks meme again, yet curiously no one in the media held them accountable for that statement. Sadly, the new NAEP data are proving that to be true. Whilst some of this is attributable to the jackass scamdemic policies, education in this country has been plummeting since the 1930's. The problem is the policies imposed upon the schools, too many jobsworths going beyond their power, a serious lack of vision on behalf of the teachers, due to their lack of complaining or raising awareness of how poor the education curriculum is. Also a lack of responsibility on behalf of the parents, but that is all about to change with this next piece.

Another example of the authorities crying foul when things don't go their way, they get petulant as this piece proves. Rep. Eric Swalwell, D-Calif., took to Twitter Wednesday lamenting how stupid it is for parents to be in charge of their kids' education. What a ridiculous comment that is, and underlines the arrogance of these people and their weakness with the desire to control people. Swalwell was responding to a quote from Sen. Tim Scott, R-S.C., who said, we are putting parents back in charge of their kids' education. Swalwell continued; Please tell me what I'm missing here. What are we doing next? Putting parents in charge of their own surgeries? Clients in charge of their own trials? When did we stop trusting experts, this is so stupid, Swalwell tweeted. When they sold us down the river Mr. Swalwell and have proven to be incompetent at best and criminal at worst. Swalwell was swiftly and harshly mocked on Twitter for his comments. Nicki Neily, the president of Parents Defending Education put it succinctly; We stopped trusting 'experts' when they locked our kids out of classrooms, tried to force-feed them propaganda, and proved that their political agendas were more important than our kids' wellbeing. Exactly. Rebeccah Heinrichs, a senior fellow at the Hudson Institute tweeted, as their mother, I am the expert of my kids. Exactly again and refreshing to see people seeing through the utter tripe these education boards and planners are doing to our children. But it gets better. Swalwell's tweet came the day after pro-parent school board candidates won elections across the nation. In Florida, where education has been a hot-button issue for the last year, all six school board candidates endorsed by Ron DeSantis won their runoff, resulting in 24 of the 30 candidates the governor endorsed winning their seats. The Minnesota Parents Alliance was founded just nine months ago to train and support school board candidates across the state. In Tuesday's election, 49 candidates endorsed by the parent's rights organization won their races, and candidates on seats in 15 of the 19 school districts where the Minnesota Parents Alliance devoted resources. This is great to see from my perspective, people now finally taking their own responsibility and actions, this augurs well for the future. That is the whole point of our positive action group until someone did a really bad negative action against our own group. If you push at them, they will buckle, they cannot handle not being in control.

In looking into our Job Rates, a rigged system was discovered and uncovered. Along with the rigged system, a broken Democratic Party was found, in need of reformation. Mr. Biden and the Democratic Party are manipulating our unemployment rates, so as to make them lower, enhancing their political image. But in doing this, they hurt American workers, including Black Americans. In an attempt to hang on to political power, they are putting politics before people. This might be why every effort to get them to voluntarily come clean, about our job situation, has failed. You may wonder why Democrats are being called out for the practice of manipulating our job rates. Well, research shows, it was them, who rigged the system 28 years ago, in 1994 during the Clinton administration. The Republicans also used the Democratic Party's rigged unemployment rate system, throughout and over the years, to their advantage, when it was politically profitable for them to do so, during their control of the Oval Office. The scheme of undercounting jobless workers, including blacks started in 1994, when Biden was a Senator. At the same time, these Congressional Black Caucus members were also in Congress, and they currently sit in Congress, today. They may have or should have been aware of former President Clinton's policy, of undercounting the job rates of working-class Americans, including Black Americans; they are, Delegate Eleanor Holmes Norton, Representatives Maxime Waters, Sanford Bishop, James Clyburn, Eddie Bernice Johnson, Bobby Scott, and Bennie Thompson. The real jobless rate for August is 7.0%, (U-6) not 3.7% (U-3), making the black rate, 12.0% at a minimum. These numbers are pulled from a table of categories, which were developed as a result of a redesign of unemployment measurements done in 1994. The end result of the redesign was, a modification of how to calculate the number of idle workers, in our economy. Read the complete study yourself, at this link: <https://www.bls.gov/opub/mlr/1995/10/art3full.pdf>. After such a vigorous study, it was concluded the most comprehensive of the six categories in describing our unemployment situation was the category rate of U-6, which is the real unemployment rate. After the study was done, you would think the Clinton administration, would adopt the most comprehensive rate, or rather, the U-6 category rate, which is the 7.0% rate today, and present it as our official unemployment rate. It would be the right thing to do. The reason they did the redesign of the rates was, to get to a more exact rate of joblessness for all six categories and worker groups that would be affected. Yet more Johns Hopkins math, and when will people see through the illusion of it all? What it also proves is, no matter who or what you put into power, whether by color or gender, they do nothing for and by the people, and again when will people see through the illusion of that?

A CNN piece spoke with critics knocking the lottery system as a form of systemic racism that targets poor Black and Brown communities across America. These communities are disproportionately made up of Black and brown people. Critics say the consequence is that marginalized people, will be driven into deeper debt by a system that is transferring wealth out of their communities. The national director of Stop Predatory Gambling, Les Bernal, called the lottery a form of consumer financial fraud and a form of systemic racism. I wouldn't cite racism per se, I don't think that helps, as it negates the opportunity for all people to say no, but this next line concerns me more. The state money generated from the lottery sales often do not feed back into the community, but rather into colleges and higher-income school districts. When you add the State property taxes and how much of it goes towards schooling, this raises major concerns. A: Why with so much money into schools are the children failing? B: Why with so much money into schools are teachers low-balled on pay? C: Is the lottery and State Property Taxes funding the schemes and programs of the CIA? Given the amount of programs we have exposed in colleges and universities? Where there is money there is corruption and essentially the lottery is another tax on the people. It is the seducement again, that people fall for, no matter the staggering odds of which you would succeed with. The rags to riches story is rare, and thousands if not millions tried the same route and failed. All people have to do to end this taxation on the people is, stop playing and paying for their game.

Several pieces tonight showing the public and some in the media are fighting back, against the rising tide of minority based politics mixed with pro pagan da and divisive agendas. This is something our show has highlighted, not because of the color, but because it is blatantly wrong. This report from the Washington Examiner is long overdue and it seems the tide is beginning to turn. How many pieces tonight will show that, please take note of them because it is an important milestone. The report said this. It must be all that white privilege going around the country, but a recent survey showed that 1 in 6 hiring managers was asked not to hire white males. That's the discriminatory behavior implemented in companies throughout the country, according to data from ResumeBuilder. It's obviously discriminatory and violates federal laws, including Title VI of the Civil Rights Act of 1964. However, such a report won't receive widespread media scrutiny or the attention of politicians because, well, it is white males who are being discriminated against. Racism, discrimination and prejudice are permitted, and sometimes even actively encouraged, when it involves white males. The Left has created a culture that vilifies white people, and it was only a matter of time before the ideology spilled over into corporate America. Corporations don't even try to hide their anti-white bigotry anymore. One out of every 6 managers surveyed claimed they were asked to deprioritize white men when evaluating candidates. Additionally, 14% of them have been told to deprioritize hiring white women. Moreover, over 55% of respondents claimed they often had to pass on qualified candidates because they were not diverse enough. Over half of hiring managers felt they could lose their jobs if they didn't hire enough diverse employees. It would have been a significant issue if this happened to any other race. Politicians, pundits and national newscasts would have declared their outrage. Protests and marches would have occurred, and the main narrative would have been that the patriarchy and white supremacy were again rearing their ugly heads. But when white people are the victims, the purveyors of racial equality are nowhere to be found. Absolutely 100% spot on, which means by definition they are racists, and running racist policies against a people of no color according to them. The report continues; Equality, diversity and inclusion are all buzzwords thrown out the window when it involves white people. The Left has created a society in which the lives of white people don't matter. A candidate's merits should be the sole determining factor when hiring people. Actively looking not to hire someone because he or she is white is illegal and morally reprehensible. This has been going on for far too long. No one should be discriminated against because of their skin color, and everyone should have equal opportunities. It should be stopped when the victim is a racial minority and when the victim is white. Advocating anything else is discrimination, and any person claiming otherwise for any reason is a racist bigot. Fairly stirring words and brave in this and their world, we need more to stand up like this and call it out. We at THI have warned of this very scenario since its inception in 2016, we have all watched it unfold in a spectacular manner, aided and abetted by people with short memories, forgetting the fact that two wrongs don't make a right. It never has and never will. Maybe it can be used as a good thing in overview? The fact that whites had to go through what blacks and Hispanics have had to tolerate, courtesy of our ignorant parents and grandparents. This means they experience both sides and some balance can be brought into the equation. But one can really solve the lesson of racism, by telling the full truth to people regarding their genetics, true diversity and who implemented the program of racism in all of its forms. We at THI all know who and what that is, and understand the problems and dynamics connected to it all. It is time the rest of the world found out, our book delivers that in stark clarity, no matter how painful the truth is. Multiculturalism the co-existence of diverse cultures in a society, 1965, unless you are white it seems.

Diverse what does it really mean and is there a twist to it? Diverse meant different in kind, not alike, essentially different, late 14c, all of which is true in the strict sense. The sense of including and promoting persons of previously under-represented minority identities is from 1990s. Which came under the banner of political correctness, which was not about helping blacks or other people of color, but targeting another race, the whites. 30 years on, has political correctness improved anything for the black or other color races? No, it hasn't, the problems back then still prevail now. But here is another version of diverse and perhaps is telling of which version they are using on us is: In Middle English it also could mean disagreeable, unkind, hostile mid-14c.. All of which fits the current modus operandi of diversion, and another example of how we didn't define it. Diverse, became diversion became division. Only we the people can end that, not political goons or correctness.

EXPOSE: In a recent November 3rd show we mentioned Marcion as part of the list of Christian sects or religions. Certainly the narrative attributed to him seemed to fit what we know now, here is a reminder. The Marcionites were followers of Marcion of Pontus. He rejected the Jewish God Yahweh, claiming he was not the father of Jesus. In fact, Marcion rejected any Jewish texts that would become the Old Testament. He believed Paul was the only true apostle, encouraged celibacy and forbade marriage. He like other Gnostics, he believed Jesus was never human. Who was Marcion? He lived roughly 85-160 AD, and during his lifetime he founded a church that exerted a powerful influence on the development of early Christianity, and which for several centuries rivaled the Catholic Church. So explains Richard Edmondson in his 2015 biographical sketch of a major figure in the creation of the Christian religion whose main ideas were eventually discarded. It was a fateful decision, triggering harsh consequences that have turned the world into an endless series of blood-drenched circuses. Marcion, you see, was deeply opposed to what he referred to as the Judaizers in the early Christian Church, and he advocated a Christian Bible wholly devoid of any part of the Old Testament, consisting solely of the Gospel of Luke and the letters of Paul. With amazing prescience, he seems to have instinctively realized the pitfalls that awaited the new faith, should it try to reconcile and balance the vengeful God of the Old Testament, with the God of love and compassion taught by Christ. The pitfalls which indeed managed to trip the church at various times through the centuries, but which became so manifestly egregious in the latter half of the twentieth century that today we find Christianity swamped in a sea of irrelevance, unsure of what it even stands for, with people leaving the faith in droves. This was Richard Edmondson's 2015 assessment of Marcion's career, describing the kind of church both he and many other people wanted but didn't get. Edmondson wrote his story with this message: it may be in our best interest to see that Marcion's less-Jewish ideas take root among those who cannot fully face reality. The book was called: Chuck the Old Testament? An Early Christian Who May Have Had a Good Idea by Richard Edmondson. <https://nationalvanguard.org/2015/04/chuck-the-old-testament-an-early-christian-who-may-have-had-a-good-idea/> With their usual typical media mind warped totalitarian bias, scholars today have a tendency to view Marcion as an anti-Semite. The Anti-Semitic jibes have kept the great lies going, it renders too many people frightened to speak out, and the first sign of critique, out rolls the anti-Semitic line followed by condemnation. This then deflects away from the original words or narrative, it becomes lost in name calling and those desperate not to be seen as racist. But how can the telling truth or questioning something, be racist? These are the same people that brought us political correctness and the latest in word salad stupidity, woke. But Edmondson is clear about Marcion's intent and the suspicious behavior of the church fathers. Marcion wanted to free Christianity from the Old Testament, but the church preserved it. Which tells you the church is a part of the conspiracy. This is, but one of many false assertions the megalithic Christian church has foisted on its duped adherents throughout the centuries, which now manifest in contemporary Jewish propaganda, with such toxic tropes as strength in diversity and we're all in this together. Strength in diversity and we're all in this together, could not be further from the narrative of the Jewish and Israel itself, in general terms never mind the religious context. But which diversity meaning are they applying? As we covered earlier. Goodness and mercy vs. vengeance and psychopathy, which God would you pick? Although much can be and has been said about the dual nature of the human condition, both types can't coexist in one personality. According to Edmondson, Marcion's popularity exceeded Rome's for a time until the Deep State bishops of the still coalescing Catholic Church said no to his unorthodox view of the one true religion. Interesting use of words, deep state bishops? A deep state is a type of governance made up of potentially secret and unauthorized networks of power, operating independently of a state's political leadership in pursuit of their own agenda and goals. In popular usage, the term carries overwhelmingly negative connotations. The range of possible uses of the term is similar to that for shadow government. The expression state within a state is an older and similar concept. Historically, it designated a well-defined organization which seeks to function independently, whereas the deep state refers more to a hidden organization seeking to manipulate the public state. Except the deep state are both descriptions. Potential sources for deep state organization include rogue elements among organs of state, such as the armed forces or public authorities such as intelligence agencies, police, secret police, administrative agencies and government bureaucracy. Yep, all of the above applies as we have revealed many times. The modern concept of a deep state is associated with Turkey, a presumed secret network of military officers and their civilian allies trying to preserve the secular order, based on the ideas of Mustafa Kemal Atatürk from 1923. Let's have a closer look at Mustafa Kemal Atatürk who instituted the deep state just after the first world war. Born Mustafa Ataturk, then at some point added the middle name Kemal, which then morphed into Kamal, he was not born in Turkey either, but Greece. Scholars have tried desperately to label him as a Muslim, but other sources who were no doubt silenced, declared his mother was Jewish. This caused the people to question him and his motives during deep and radical reforms, including changing their language. Atatürk initiated a rigorous program of political, economic and cultural reforms with the ultimate aim of building a modern, progressive and secular nation-state. He made primary education free and compulsory, opening thousands of new schools all over the country. He also introduced the Latin-based Turkish alphabet, replacing the old Ottoman Turkish alphabet. Due to the large Jewish community of Salonica in the Ottoman period, many of the Islamist opponents who were disturbed by his reforms claimed that Atatürk had Dönme ancestors, that is Jews who converted to Islam publicly, but still secretly retained their belief in Judaism. Well I never, the Donmeh we covered in Part 8C of FHSTOS. Here comes a reference to Part 7 of FHSTOS. There are also opinions that the deep state in Turkey and counter-guerrilla was established in the Cold War era as a part of the Gladio Organization, to sway Turkey more into NATO against the threat of the expansion of Soviet communism. So, Turkey has been under Donmeh control for the past 100 years, just like Russia and the Jewish Bolshevik takeover. In the seventeenth and eighteenth centuries political debate surrounding the separation of church and state, often revolved around the perception that if left unchecked the Church might turn into a kind of State within a State, an illegitimate encroachment of the State's civil power monopoly. That is the illusion, they are one and the same program. Here is further proof of who Atatürk was and who he worked for. In his 26 April 1920 message to Vladimir Lenin, the Bolshevik leader and head of the Russian SFSR's government Atatürk promised to coordinate his military operations with the Bolsheviks' fight against imperialist governments, and requested 5 million lira in gold as well as armaments as first aid to his forces. In 1920 alone, the Lenin government supplied the Kemalists with 6,000 rifles, over 5 million rifle cartridges, 17,600 projectiles as well as 200.6 kg of gold bullion. In the subsequent 2 years, the amount of aid increased. In March 1921, the General National Assemblies representatives in Moscow signed the Treaty of Moscow the Friendship and Brotherhood Treaty) with Soviet Russia, which was a major diplomatic breakthrough for the Kemalists. The Brotherhood? Oh my that is revealing, as well as assemblies, which is a church terminology. The Treaty of Moscow, followed by the identical Treaty of Kars in October the same year, gave Turkey a favorable settlement of its north-eastern frontier at the expense of the Armenian Soviet Socialist Republic, then nominally an independent state. Armenia remember was genocided during WW1, a better term was ethnic cleansing, an estimated 600k to 1.5M Armenians met their death during that time period. Remember Armenia was another border country of Russia. Relations between the two countries were friendly but were based on the fact that they were against a common enemy: Britain and the West. At the beginning of the 20th century, the deep state was also used to refer to government-owned corporations or private companies that seem to operate largely outside of regulatory or governmental control. Indeed they do, but in reality they are the governmental control unit. Perhaps the deepest state is the fake country known as Israel itself, the reference to a deep state of bishops who are priests and subsequently cohens, reveals the true path, cause and issue for centuries. The churches decision had two colossal impacts on posterity. Marcion contended Jesus did not exist in the flesh, but instead was an eternal spirit offering hope to all. But the greater church, led by Jews, rejected this teaching, meaning Jews were the ones who initially invented the idea that Jesus was an actual living breathing human, being in addition to being who they said was the Son of God. Did it change the future two thousand years ahead of time? The author asked; indeed, it did. The author then pondered and asked; What if Israel never existed? It is worthwhile to ponder just how the world would be different today had the Marcionite Church, rather than the Catholic Church, prevailed and become the dominant strain of Christianity. For one thing, we can conjecture almost assuredly the state of Israel would never have been founded in 1948. Edmondson, then made an assessment that if better known would rock the entire world. Without an Old Testament, there would never have been a view of Jews as God's chosen people, and without this, there would have been no significant Christian support for a state of Israel. Early Christian Zionists such as Cyrus Scofield and John Nelson Darby would not have had a leg to stand on; and John Hagee would perhaps be a used car salesman today; Theodor Herzl probably would never have gained much of a following other than among Jews, and the Balfour Declaration well may never have been issued by the British government. In short, it's possible to conjecture that had the Marcionite Church prevailed, there would be no state of Israel today. I concur, it would have saved millions of lives, the world would be much fairer, less corrupt, less wars, less evil and children would be safer and learn proper teachings. Instead of the abomination that goes with education, of pro pagan da, overt sexuality, divisive agendas, fake history and government worship leaning towards Fascism, which was created by the very same group. How peaceful would the world be if the nation of Israel had never existed? The author asked. Full of warmongering Jews who express their hatred of humankind by regarding all other people as cattle, Israel is the enemy of every country on Earth while pretending to be their friend and benefactor. Cursed by a verifiable history of swindling and betrayal before leaving behind the smoldering carcasses of countries picked clean by the moneylenders' hellish cash machine, Israel and the Jews control every person in the world because they ultimately control everyone's money. If Marcion's view of Christianity was the true one, then the modern maniac nation of Israel would never have come to exist. It was the Jews who insisted Jesus came in the flesh because making him real, mostly by force, showed them the population was under control and it has been ever since. It is nice to hear the other views of people complementing our own research and narrative. It is just a shame the damage these people have done to all races, including the average Jewish person themselves, as we have recounted many times. The Jewish people have to reject all things Israel, the bible, Torah, Tanakh and Talmud, which is the religion of not Christos, but the religion of iron-fisted law. A law unto themselves, using Latin as it's driving force, just like Ataturk did to change the Turkish language. Latin is the language of the reptilians. Creator vs. redeemer: The two principal sources of Edmondson's analysis are: Marcion: The Gospel of the Alien God, by Adolf Harnack and Lost Christianities: The Battles for Scripture and the Faiths We Never Knew, by Bart D. Ehrman. The way Edmondson tells it, there were really two Gods forming in the minds of men: One was a punitive, petty, and cruel God, who presided over a corrupt world. This was the God of the Old Testament, referred to by Marcionites as the Creator God, but his creation was a world far from perfect in their view. Clearly there the word creation and creator has been purposefully misrepresented. His creation is nothing to do with creating us, just a nasty world filled with darkness. He was the creator of that happenstance, not the original creator of everything. The other God Marcion saw as a redeemer, a God of love, mercy, truth, and compassion, this was the God of Christ. Marcion referred to him as the Alien God, alien in the sense that prior to Christ's appearance on earth he had been unknown to humanity. Interesting choice of words there, Alien

god. This is the duality choice again, one is nice and one is not, so pick the nice one, except they are the blue and red pills and both our poisons. The Alien god is presented as the savior program, who starts off being nice and then once everything is in place, the takeover begins and the niceties end, just like the Draco. The real god has never made an appearance here, it is not in physical form and never will be. So, even Marcion was duped into believing the Lucifer Rebellion program of religion.

Edmondson doesn't mention this, but many earlier religions, notably Zoroastrianism with its god Ahura Mazda, combined both good and evil aspects in the deity worshipped by ancient Persians. Marcion saw the Creator God as vengeful, wrathful and unmerciful, but perhaps most significantly of all he viewed him as ignorant. For instance, he had not known where to find Adam in the Garden of Eden, and had found it necessary to ask Adam whether he had eaten from the forbidden fruit. But even worse was his ignorance of the Alien God. The utter ignorance of the World-Creator about the other God is the worst aspect of all his ignorance; it shows him to be inferior in the most extreme degree. But since, because he does not know the other God, even the sphere and the nature of that God are incomprehensible to him, true goodness is also completely closed to him. Marcion wanted to free Christianity from the Old Testament, but the church preserved it. He did not forbid his followers to pick up the book but even recognized that it contained material that was useful for reading. But he saw in it, a spirit different from that of the gospel, and he wanted nothing to do with two different spirits in religion. Was he right or was the church, which did not detach itself from the book, right? Edmondson asks: How could the wrathful, vengeful God of the Jews be the loving, merciful God of Jesus? Marcion maintained that these attributes could not belong to one God, as they stand at odds with one another: hatred and love, vengeance and mercy, judgment and grace. He concluded that there must in fact be two Gods: The God of the Jews, as found in the Old Testament, and the God of Jesus, as found in the writings of Paul. The trouble is, neither are correct in historical or real terms, as we revealed in our Cosmic Genetics series. Jesus or Jeshuau was a Melchizedek, and they were no different to the other self-importance people who represented themselves as gods or son of god. The consequences of the initial lie: But without an Old Testament, there would never have been a view of Jews as God's chosen people, no significant Christian support for a state of Israel, the Balfour Declaration well may never have been issued by the British government. In short, it's possible to conjecture that had the Marcionite Church prevailed, there would be no state of Israel today. Israel is not heaven; it's hell on Earth. Paradise for psychopathic perverts; permanent pain for everyone else. Earlier I offered a critique of Ehrman's analysis of what might have been had the Marcionite church prevailed, coming to the conclusion that in all likelihood the modern-day state of Israel would never have been born. One can of course carry the conjecture further: without the establishment of the state of Israel, there would have been no Nakba, no Deir Yassin massacre, no 1967 war, no 1973 war, and no pro-Israel lobby in America today. Without the pro-Israel lobby, the wars in Iraq would possibly have been averted. The half a million Iraqi children, whose deaths the Jewish Madeleine Albright felt were worth it, could well still be alive. The Palestinians would have a state of their own, would therefore not be subject to having their homes bulldozed or destroyed by bombs, conceivably there would be no blockade of Gaza, no checkpoints in the West Bank or mothers giving birth at them, and no apartheid wall. The Palestinians who were killed in the first Intifada, the second Intifada, those who perished in various Israeli missile attacks on Gaza, including Operation Cast Lead, would either still be alive today or else possibly have died of natural causes. And now, as the citizens of the world remain stymied and abused by governmental crackdowns based on a phony epidemic, these familiar abuses have reached the streets of America with illegal aliens paid by Jewish billionaires enthusiastically burning down the country. We have missed many opportunities in the past to correct our corrupt course that permits the rich to own the poor and abuse them at will. Whether we survive this current rearrangement of the facts of our existence or not, we now know for sure that the people we have chosen to guide our world to safety and security cannot be trusted whatsoever, as they all conspire to lobotomize the human population into a manageable and obedient herd. This piece was like another overview of our FHSTOS, the church, the Jews, Bolsheviks, Brotherhood and more. I agree with that statement 100%, and refreshing to see that others are seeing through the illusion with stark clarity. I will add to that list Mossad and the people of Lebanon, Syria, Jordan, Egypt and Iran would all be alive had the church not took it's dark forces path. Ultimately we have what we have, due to the poor choices of others. Everyone started off as a light body being until they made choices, remember that.

OTHER PIECES: The UN says the world's population has hit eight billion, just 11 years after passing the seven-billion milestone. After a big surge in the middle of the 20th Century, population growth is already slowing down.

It could take 15 years to reach nine billion and the UN doesn't expect to reach 10 billion until 2080.

It's hard to calculate the number of people in the world accurately, and the UN admits its sums could be out by a year or two. So they use Johns Hopkins math then and make it up as they go along with their latest agendas.

But November 15 was its best estimate for the eight billion line to be crossed.

In previous years, the UN has selected babies to represent the five, six and seven-billionth children, so what can their stories tell us about world population growth? From 2B in the 1930's to 8b in 2022, despite every mother on the planet going from an average of 4.7 to 2.6 children, despite birth control being introduced more universally since the 1960's. Despite all white countries birth rates being below 2, 2.10 per mother is the minimum to keep a population stable. Despite 9m per year dying of hunger, around a similar numbers for aids, malaria and TB. Despite 79m dying in wars in that time also, according to their Johns Hopkins figures, which is a gross underestimate in and of itself, given 70-90M Russians were slaughtered in that time. Plus 50M Chinese due to Japan and their own Fascist puppet leaders. Yet amidst all of this concern about the increase in births, they run a program to have mothers give birth in fake circumstances via IVF, does that make any sense whatsoever? No, because it was a program and all evidence points to it being a hybrid program, whether off world or not. I would like people to chime in more on that, or perhaps they just chime ra, is it chime ra or chimera? For those new, chimera is half man and half beast. If true it is no sleight on people who are hybrids or people who went through IVF either, because no one had any knowledge on it for sure. Maybe this is the beginning of that narrative being unearthed, and maybe the rest of the Majestic 12 documents on the Aztec crash can find there way to me, so I can ascertain more on these hybrids.

This is an interesting piece from the 6th century BC, even more interesting is the name attributed to the original. Before we existed, before the stars and planets existed, before the universe existed, there existed the dream, the idea in motion. But what set this idea in motion? Who or what was the dreamer? Let's call this the Divine, and define it as the total set of all possible concepts, definitions, objects, matter and rules, all forms of life, mind, universe and spirit. It is the concept of all concepts, the set of all sets. That the Divine exists is without dispute, as the concept of the Divine exists as a notion which is sufficient to validate itself. To say there is no Divine Creator means the concept, the notion has to exist, the divine possesses material existence, as matter exists, rules of matter exist as one cannot exist without the other. The only place rules can exist in theory is in a dream. Rules can exist on their own as a notion, matter cannot exist without rules, for example no 2 objects can occupy the same position in space. Just like you cannot have two souls in the one vessel. Thus, the Divine Creator is the dreamer, the Universe is the dream and the divine has material existence. Dimension is the canvas of reality whereupon all material existence depends, and all conscious beings experience through their mind whenever they think or dream. Every thought, every reality depends on dimension, which is no place but every place and has no material existence. Dimension is created by conscious observable thought. Existence depends on at least one observer and the object being observed. Thus for the objective universe to exist, there must be a universal observer. The Divine Will wishes to exist and this free will action is the greatest action for the very existence of existence itself, depends upon the free will of the ultimate creator. Human existence exists in reality as name and identity, flesh and blood, in thinking, ideas and imagining. But where do the ideas and imagining come from? Where does the energy that energizes a living being come from? Nothing can come from nothing so the mind and spirit come from somewhere, mind is everywhere and nowhere and has no material existence. So, what is our true essence as individuals? What is the soul and where does it come from? Quotes about the Divine etc. sourced from Tara, written 6th century BCE. Tara if the same person was the wife of Perun, the URS and the sources of the Vedas.

Every change, every form of growth, has to do with our minds, as does every form of misery and suffering. The latter more true than the former, as every real change and form of growth on an exponential scale, only comes from the heart. It is a rather sad state of affairs, then, that we modern people are seldom taught the crucial art of mind-ninjadom: the conscious and deliberate management of our thoughts. Indeed, we are not even taught that such a thing is possible. We were never taught anything with the mind as it is controlled or controllable. The ancient mystery schools taught adepts so well and it is possible in the next epoch of the future that, that can be restarted in a light way, not as the corrupt versions of it now, all done by the dark magicians and their covens. Thoughts are so important that the only way to re-integrate hardened criminals into society, and essentially turn them into somewhat decent human beings, is a form of hardcore thought therapy over long time spans. In these interventions, the therapist ruthlessly corrects the criminal's thought world by making him aware again and again of the pathology of his reasoning. But even that only works in relatively few cases because, as with all therapy, the subject must show at least a minimal desire for change, which is typically not the case for example with more psychopathic individuals. The problem is the therapist or the rapist of the mind, is not taught too well either. They like science react to the effects and never address the cause in any depth, otherwise there would not be so many re-offenders. Unlike those criminals, most of us don't think about robbing the grandma next door blind and about how justified we are in doing so, because we were wronged and deserve it. These are typical thoughts of the criminal mind. But we all have many lesser criminal thoughts wandering about in our minds: theories created out of fear, bad thoughts fueled by resentment, justifications based on a sense of entitlement, whole thought chunks we engage in that make us feel good the same way drugs do, etc. Correcting such thoughts over and over again by way of a careful thought management is key to moving towards a more healthy, productive, and ultimately happy place. Those thought processes are all in the low vibrational field, elevate the self and those thoughts begin to be cast aside. That is called going within, a prospect that terrifies most, yet in overview is it not totally bizarre? Why would people look at others, yet not look at themselves? In essence this says you are frightened by yourself? Hence the term called, frightened of your own shadow. The common sense question is; why are you frightened of yourself? You create your own reality, why would you create fear of you? Indeed, it seems that changing our thought patterns can often literally cure disease. But how to go about it? As some of the Eastern traditions are good at pointing out, the first step is to realize that we are not our thoughts. It's rather that thoughts come and go, often triggered by external stimuli, and that there is a deeper I behind it all that can observe this mayhem. Observe the operative word, not absorb. This deeper I can also intervene: it can shift around thoughts, change the tracks these thoughts tend to run on, focus on certain thoughts while letting others fade into the background, and so on. It's quite useful to picture your inner thought world as a crazy bedlam where all kinds of thoughts jump around, become the focus of attention, just to be forgotten entirely for a while, only to suddenly crop up out of nowhere again. That is because we stay too long in the low vibration, and it will crop up again as you haven't address the cause or the effects. But it gets worse: amidst all the chaos, there are recurring patterns that we tend to repeat again and again: we see something, which makes us feel something, which brings up a thought, which lets us feel something, which brings up a thought from the past, which makes us feel something. Over and over, round and round it goes. That is looping, and it can only go round, all of which means it repeats. To reclaim our sanity, and to become whole and functional again, we desperately need to break that cycle: rearrange our internal landscape in real-time in the present moment, while paying attention to the nexus between thought and feeling. The present moment is being in the now, too many want to focus on the past or the future, and ignoring without being in or correcting the now, the future will never be as good as you wish it to be. Managing one's thoughts is a long journey with many twists and turns, there are no fixed rules or step-by-step guides on how to do it, except that the first step must always be to observe. That being said, here is a few personal tests for your to overcome things and you may find it useful. Find a thought that makes you feel uncomfortable, that gives you the urge of moving away from it, of distracting yourself. This could be anything: maybe something you need to do that you are procrastinating about, an embarrassing experience, an upcoming event you are afraid of, something or someone that has hurt you. That is bringing up the shadow and or inner work. Then find another thought that gives you a kick, that makes you feel happy, often this is something that you immediately want to dwell on if you find yourself confronted with an uncomfortable thought. Such happy thoughts might have to do with pride, maybe a compliment you received, some fantasy of yours about your future, meeting a potential love partner, dreaming about an exciting trip, achieved a difficult task or overcome a hurdle in life, anything that, if you let your mind wander towards it, gives you that superficial kick which numbs your pain of the uncomfortable thoughts. This is then about filling the void, out with the uncomfortable when it is addressed and replaced with a happy thought. Now, try to hold these two thoughts in your mind simultaneously: the one that repulses you and the one that attracts you. You will feel an emotional tension, a being-torn-between-the-worlds, a back and forth of happy molecules and bad-feeling molecules. This is like the dance between light and dark, which wins depends only on your choices. And yes being torn between the two worlds is fence sitting, make your choice and live with it.

If you sit with this tension for a few moments, interesting things may start happening: a new energy emerges which is joyful, but fundamentally different from the merely escapist happy kick. More like a soul-deep rejoicing, combined with profound understanding and big picture vision. You begin to transcend the petty world of feel-good, feel-bad, and the endless hamster wheel in your mind that oscillates between, being crushed by bad vibes and escaping to good vibes. It is here that the real, the true, the sacred are to be found. And it is here that something entirely new arises. The two poles of a bow, or the two sides of a string instrument, are under massive tension, yet they make an entirely different phenomenon possible, the shooting of an arrow or the sound of music. Same with the two poles of feel-good and feel-bad chemicals: they are the precondition for an entirely new type of energy. The new type of energy is the triality. You can use this energy to fly to the stars, figuratively and in some cases with soul development literally speaking. It gives you the strength to stand your ground, to do something useful, to have new ideas and insights, to enjoy everything in your life, to deeply feel grateful even for your trials and tribulations. It's as if this energy can flood your whole being and, for a moment, flush out all the crap that keeps you enslaved to the whims of this world, including your own whims. The struggle in our minds is real, and it must be fought relentlessly. Operating in the heart and not the mind makes things a whole heap easier also. It may seem the arduous path, but it leads to development, as for staying in the head? Yes, it is easier, but your head will keep spinning like a loop, and just keeps repeating stuff, now that is insanity and even more arduous.

ENDING PIECE: No doubt you are all still pontificating over Tuesday's show, one that brought many dot connectors from all angles. A veritable potpourri of thought patterns, emotions, concerns, omg's and all finished off with a heart centered message. That show had it all, in essence it filled in pieces of FHSTOS, the Expose series and many other pieces that reside in the penultimate section of our show. It also brought up the title of another of our shows, although was not mentioned, fiction is fact and fact is fiction. And yes as warned it would bring up triggers deeply, and it did on a much wider scale than people expected or envisioned. One member stated he was triggered within the first hour, another wrote to me and said this; Ok, so am triggered, I feel too much, I was in a running river of puddles by 2/3 of the show, feeling the pain of so many. At times it's a burden to feel so much hurt for the suffrage of other life-forms, I've never been able to find an adequate shield from feeling so much. The only opposite to that is, not feeling at all, that is the realm of the psychopaths, clowns, EL-ites and the Draco. To them an empath is considered not only a weakness, but as something resembling retarded as their service to self culture does not allow for it. But those emotions is what sets us apart, and despite their outwardly loathing of us, internally they admire us. They have to, as they have spent much time trying to be like us or piggy back on our development. It is sad even for the fake ones cos what they're doing is just wrong. Wrong, Wrong, Wrong! Thanks for a closing that did much to ease the pain, though there are times I'd wish to be angry. Angry yes, but then I wonder what good would that do, because it just feels like everyone is hurting, even the abusers. Observe don't absorb is the lesson with that, too many empaths take on too much pain and trauma of others, that unless is kept in check, you become another victim/victimizer statistic. You must decide what is yours and what is theirs, allowing them in your field is not a good move, they must stay outside of your own personal field, otherwise you are damaging or putting yourself at risk. Let the other aspect mentioned in the show apply, of letting go. Yes, the abusers are hurting, dare I say it they are smarting, their great plans have failed and they are up shits creek without a paddle. No lord, god or other savior program they have convinced themselves of, will be alleviating their plight or end. I find it is daunting in and of itself to feel any kind of compassion for them, yet I do. They are victims as well in many ways, lied to and abused possibly more than we have, all their material wealth does not make them happy though, as greed breeds more greed and so for them nothing is never enough. I'd like to emphatically proclaim that I'd prefer not doing this again, rinse & repeat incarnating I mean, it's just to ridiculous a process, me thinks. So, I've got to reach a healthy balance as best I can this time around.

Yes, we all need a healthy balance in and of life., between work and play, less fear and more love. One member expressed disbelief in how evil and unfeeling they are, but that is a wrong assumption based on people putting their own morals and principals of life onto others. They feel? Hardly, everything with them is all so cold and calculated. Presuming everyone feels the way we do, is a big mistake humanity has made. They revealed their modus operandi in the show with the line: Reps are bred for efficiency not emotions. One member mentioned about them being a spark of creation as well, which they are, until they made wrong choices and became parasites. Like vultures, flies and maggots feeding on the rotting carcasses, but only if we allow it. The show even had a live download when discussing their climate change agenda, the message was they are trying to reverse the natural progression change, that the planet and the people left will experience. Our own Source's special version of bliss, that is not controlling, domineering or evil in nature, all done in a flower of life non Metatronic way, that will end the reign of the dark forces and their minions here. A non-flood or catastrophic event that will bring the balance back, but, we have to work at it to keep it going and sustain it, otherwise the dark will penetrate it again and we go back to tyranny. The show revealed the enormity and scope of the technology available, but we would be wise to avoid most of it. They have to rely on technology as they are not intelligent or advanced enough to do things themselves. Technology will be our own downfall unless we keep it in check, in essence technology can be seen as the Black Sun, because those that go to far with it, end up eliminating themselves. Which in essence is the ideology of the Black Sun, to eliminate all life-forms. Another major revelation that has transpired since the show in another download and realization, will be explosive and will be revealed in another show, when I have time to process it all. There has been a lot of stepping back in the past month by me, as other dynamics comes into play, other realizations and also other timing style processes' that have to be understood and formulated ready for our time. This in part has delayed the blueprint, although some people playing games didn't help it initially, that has all been addressed and overcome now and we are back on track, with an even better plan than the original. Further news about that and several other exciting events that will be unfolding before the end of the year, will be forthcoming and so look forward to that. Remember despite all their vast array of technology, medical and genetic shenanigans, operating by stealth, lying about our history, denying us knowledge and so much more, they still haven't and will not defeat us. They tried and tried and tried again, and failed every time. They can play games, send minions to distract us, delay us but we always comeback stronger and with a better plan and outcome. The next phase for humanity will define more clearly which side you are on, the light or the dark, those are determined by your actions, not words, words can and have lied to us, actions don't.
