

THI-SHOW TRANSCRIPT 2023-04-13

We're hosting a Zoom this Sunday, April 16th, 5pm EST, to kick off the discussion on how we want to distribute the Blueprint. The Zoom details and link are in The New Blueprint for Humanity General Discussion Group in the Communal Gatherings, so please join the CG on the thinkdifferent website, all are welcome. NEWS: Another of the tech and crypto world people has been taken out it seems. Bob Lee was part of the tech establishment. The former chief technical officer of Square and founder of the $40bn payment app Cash App. In the early hours of Tuesday morning, he was killed in a stabbing, in a supposedly safe part of San Francisco. His death has sent a chill through the tech community. Are they removing all the crypto people to steal all the codes and funds, or setting us up for a different version of monetary clownery, either way it won't work.

A member had an interesting interaction with a disability attorney recently. Where during the course of discussion he confirmed Social Security is severely backed up. All because employees at the state level have refused to go back to work on a mass scale and they are so far, unable to staff with new employees. He estimated staffing was 50% at best on the federal level and far less on the state level. The collapse continues...

Further signs the public is now avoiding their systems of control. As a survey from the WSJ and the research organization NORC at the University of Chicago found that, 56% of Americans say earning a four-year degree isn't worth the cost. They tie their skepticism to mounting student debt and the idea that tangible job skills aren't always gained during time in college, according to the survey. This is further encouragement the people are rejecting the old world, up to us then to provide an alternative. Which we have endeavored to do with the Blueprint.

Another example of the pro pagan da falling apart in America. Russian President Vladimir Putin's popularity in the United States has reached its highest point since 2020, years before his troops invaded Ukraine, according to new data. The Kremlin leader's popularity among Americans, as of the first quarter of 2023, stands at 21 percent, according to pollster YouGov. In the first quarter of 2021, Putin's popularity hovered at 15 percent, and shortly after Russia began the war with Ukraine, it was registered at 17 percent. Moscow's troops crossing into Ukraine in February 2022 was met with condemnation from Western countries, including the U.S. At the time, President Joe Biden said the Kremlin had chosen a premeditated war that will bring a catastrophic loss of life and human suffering. Yet he was a politician when America blitzed Iraq and Afghanistan for no apparent reason other than to line the pockets of the shekel makers. Ukraine attacked their own people and Russians living there, hence not an invasion but a rescue mission. Mocking bird committees must be in full flow currently, trying to stem the tide, that won't work either.

Recently we mentioned about French Tv highlighting adrenochrome and the involvement of elites. The guy's name is Gérard Fauré, who talks about adrenochrome openly on a French tv show. He mentions Celine Dion when discussing the adrenochrome and that 58,000 children go missing every year, and that the children come from children's homes or are kidnapped. He says blood is taken from 3 years of age, and younger in my opinion. A young woman in prison wanted to sell her child to an adrenochrome lab. The things people will do for money is mindboggling. He was talking about a French comedian who was caught driving on cocaine, but suggests he is also involved with the adrenochrome and young boys. Some woman on the panel had written an article about adrenochrome and says it exists. Yes it exists, but the public don't wish to face it. They have warned us about it in at least two movies recently, Jupiter Ascending and the Avatar 2 movie, yet the truth fearing masses just turn a blind eye to it all. Thankfully large swathes of that practice has been negated, although more needs to be done until it is eradicated and the vampiric entities are dealt with. The fact it is even being discussed on MSM is a massive plus though.

Disney CEO Bob Iger has lashed out at Florida's Republican governor in an ongoing public battle between the entertainment company and the state. On Monday, Mr.Iger said that Governor Ron DeSantis's recent actions have been anti-business and anti-Florida. State lawmakers targeted Disney after it criticized a Florida law curtailing gender and sexuality education. Mr.DeSantis has pushed for more state control over Disney's Orlando theme parks in the dispute. During a Monday meeting with Disney shareholders, Mr.Iger said a company has a right to freedom of speech just like individuals do, according to US media. He said that Mr.DeSantis got very angry about the position Disney took, referring to the company's objection to the state's Parental Rights in Education Act, dubbed by critics as the Don't Say Gay bill. The measure bans school instruction about sexual orientation and gender identity for pupils aged nine and under. This exchange is interesting on many levels, and being a resident of that region for 16 years I have some knowledge on the matter. First off, does Mr.Iger who is born in and born to, consider indoctrinating young children in school about sexual matters, not a conflict of interest in relation to Disney? Disney is presented as wholesome and family like, but pushing sex and gender issues on the children, is not a good image for the company one would think. Secondly, it is long past time that the powerhouse that Disney is, was reigned in a bit. Massive tax breaks, cheap loans and devious practices to acquire more land and far too much controlling of the local councils policies. Kissimmee would have had a transport system by now only for Disney. They refused to support the transport system due to the line stopping at their rival Universal Studios before Disney. The power and control over Kissimmee is enormous and needs to be balanced. Again this piece can be looked upon as an attack on the old order.

More exposure of the old order. A founding member of Pope Francis' child protection advisory board resigned, citing a host of problems inside the commission and in its relationship with the Vatican bureaucracy. In an unusually frank resignation note, the Rev.Hans Zollner cited inadequate financial accountability, insufficient transparency about decision-making and a lack of clarity about staff hiring and the board's relationship with the Holy See's sex abuse office. Francis announced the creation of the Pontifical Commission for the Protection of Minors in 2013 to advise the Vatican on best practices to prevent clergy sexual abuse. He named Boston Cardinal Sean O'Malley as the commission's head. The board has gone through several iterations since then, most significantly when another founding member, Irish abuse survivor and advocate Marie Collins, resigned in frustration in 2017 over Vatican stonewalling on the commission's proposals. Zollner's departure suggested a similar, but broader degree of frustration that touched on internal governance issues as well. Yet, the church of lies, abuse and harvesting continues to try to stall the full public disclosure of their atrocities. The public who follow this cult are to blame as well at this point. Entering a church knowing many of their houses of worship have been abuse centers, is a dereliction of duty by those who participate in this cult.

Yet more exposure of the pedophilic behaviors of the so-called elites was on display this week. Following the Pope's version a few years back, just how much more evidence do the masses need, before they see the problem? The CIA agent the Dalai Lama issued an apology on Monday after a video of him kissing a child on the lips at a Buddhist event went viral, sparking widespread criticism and debate online. In an official statement, the spiritual leader's office said: The Dalai Lama often teases people he meets in an innocent and playful way. Yeah right Biden and co.uses the same excuses. Do they consider the child's feelings when acting in a so-called innocent and playful way? Why do all the young girls Biden has grabbed all look very uncomfortable? A video clip has been circulating that shows a recent meeting when a young boy asked His Holiness the Dalai Lama if he could give him a hug. It continued: His Holiness wishes to apologize to the boy and his family, as well as his many friends across the world, for the hurt his words may have caused. The Dalai Lama, it added, regrets the incident. The video showed the Dalai Lama kissing the boy on his lips as he came forward to pay his respects. The spiritual leader could then be heard saying in the video, can you suck my tongue and sticking out his tongue. The video and later the official statement angered social media users. Some observers said that it was akin to pedophilia, while others commented that it was creepy and disgusting. It is not akin to, it is pedophilia and predatory behaviors towards a child, he should be removed from his position immediately. If that happens anywhere else, people get fired and or arrested, but these EL-ites think they are untouchable and that has to change going forward.

Yet another exposure of the old order's Military arm, which seems to be increasing heavily now. Hopefully the public will back our blueprint for a new military, because the old one never served the people. The US Armed Forces still spend about $100 million annually on advertising. Let's overview that shall we, spending $100M of our money to encourage parents to send their children to get maimed and killed in fake wars. Who are the stupid ones here? It is utter madness in overview. Amidst falling approval ratings and lack of recruits, the Pentagon has chosen a new tactic: viral TikToks made by psy-op agents. US military personnel often share their everyday life on TikTok. Some joke around and play pranks on their companions, others share what they do and eat in the army, etc. One of today's most popular 'military influencers' is Hayley Lujan, also known as lunchbaglujan. Lujan is known for her provocative, somewhat cynical sense of humor, friendship with Donald Trump's son, and the fact that she is not a simple soldier, but a specialist in Psyops - Psychological Operations. Psy-ops are covered up programs and or missions. The career platform for US military recruits states that, such soldiers are known for their communication expertise using unconventional tactics to persuade and influence foreign allies and enemies in support of U.S.Army objectives. Lujan's subscribers are aware of this, they assume that her account is part of a carefully designed marketing strategy. The influencer's goal is to help bolster the reputation of the US military, particularly in the eyes of zoomers. Or, as the authors of "Know Your Meme" say, to get simps and the dudes who reply to every picture of boobs with OMG DM me to enlist. I know sex sells they say, but these are disgraceful tactics. Empty barracks: The US Armed Forces have been experiencing a shortage of volunteers for several years. Despite reductions in military staff over the past 40 years, the number of personnel decreased by nearly half, the service is still short on recruits. In 2022, the military only managed to recruit 45,000 servicemen out of a planned 60,000. As a result, the Secretary of the Army Christine Wormuth announced that members of the National Guard and the Army Reserve may be called up for active service. Units could also be further reduced since it may be impossible to fully staff all existing detachments. Recruitment to the Air Force and Navy was more successful, but only because it involved candidates who were not able to start service in 2021. This personnel shortage can be attributed to several causes. First, the US doesn't have enough suitable candidates. Entry requirements vary based on the service branch of the armed forces, but the main criteria are similar: a candidate must be between the ages of 17 and 35 years, they must be physically and mentally healthy, they must present a high school diploma and pass an entry test for the corresponding service branch. The candidate must also be a US citizen or at least possess an immigrant Green Card. Despite the relatively simple requirements, finding the right people hasn't been easy. According to a recent Pentagon study, only 23% of young people in the United States are fit to serve. The rest have health problems: obesity, mental disorders and addictions. Some of which is caused by the Military and the Agencies themselves, with dodgy research testing of the American public via spraying, water, food or pharmaceuticals. The situation has been aggravated by the coronavirus pandemic, as isolation significantly affected US schoolchildren and took a toll on their physical health. Moreover, lockdowns have made young people more indecisive. Studies show that men who studied in high school remotely and engaged in less communication with peers, are more likely to postpone important decisions such as applying to universities or joining the armed forces. Recruitment is also getting harder because of an increasing number of young Americans who suffer from addictions. For example, alcohol and drug abuse disqualifies about 11% of those who are otherwise fit to serve. Additionally, marijuana in some form or another is now legal in most states. However, those using the substance still cannot enlist in the military. Another of their ouroboros programs, as it is the CIA who supplies most of the pot to Americans to make them docile and inadequate, but the other end is their Military can then no longer use them people. High school dropouts are another problem affecting military service. In 2020, 3.2 million students graduated from high schools in the United States, but those without a diploma are not able to enlist. Even if the US had twice as many healthy and educated young people, the armed forces would still face a shortage of volunteers because the population no longer holds the army in high esteem. The chaotic withdrawal of troops from Afghanistan, an increasingly divided domestic political system, and disputes about the role of NATO in the modern world raise issues, and quite a few uncomfortable questions for the US Armed Forces. Moreover, the military is criticized by politicians on both the left and right. The former label it a bulwark of racism, homophobia and imperialism. The latter believe that the military blindly follows woke culture and does not react to national threats quickly and decisively enough. Notice no one references the complete pointlessness of joining the military in the first place? If only politicians families fought wars, then there would be none. Skeptics also point out the cynicism of the law, which considers 17-year-olds not old enough to buy a can of beer, but old enough to die and kill for the sake of obscure goals. Different ethnic groups also have different attitudes toward the military. For example, Blacks and Latinos give less positive ratings to the US Armed Forces than White Americans. White Americans have swallowed the pro pagan da more, is what that reveals, one hopes that changes in the near future. Neither traditional propaganda on the protection of freedom (M) freedom my ass, nor the progressive ads about minorities in the army have been of much help. The Pentagon understands that both in terms of politics and combat effectiveness, it's dangerous to ignore the declining popularity of the armed forces. So, in order to recruit more young people, the military is brushing up its image not only through conventional advertising, but with the help of cute influencers. Shameless those people. Whilst it is a positive less people are willing to join the war machine, the fact the nation's youth is only at 23% adequate enough is alarming on many levels. In 2018, public trust in the military was rated at 70%, in 2022, that number dropped to 48%. I would expect deeper declines in the coming years. This augurs well for our military solutions put forward in the Blueprint. We need to stop sending our children into shekel based wars, and stop paying a trillion dollars a year to destroy things and provided unlimited budgets for CIA contractors to rebuild what has been destroyed. You may rebuild buildings, but you cannot rebuilding lives lost due to this heinous machine. The truth is marching on.

MEDICAL NEWS: Another expose of the fake science and their meddling with our health, to fulfill death quotas and create shekels by making us sick. The National Toxicology Program on Wednesday released a draft report linking prenatal and childhood fluoride exposure to reduced IQ in children, after public health officials tried for almost a year to block its publication. After public health officials tried to block it for a year? These people are employed allegedly to look out for our health, but as many of our shows have revealed, they do anything but. The U.S.Department of Health and Human Services (HHS) and the CDC initially blocked the NTP from releasing the report, according to emails obtained via a Freedom of Information Act request. The same two departments involved in the Covid scam. But a court order stemming from a lawsuit filed by Food and Water Watch against the U.S.Environmental Protection Agency, forced the report's release this week. Whose environment are they protecting, because it is certainly not the public's is it? The NTP, an interagency program run by HHS that researches and reports on environmental toxins, conducted a six-year systematic review to assess scientific studies on fluoride exposure and potential neurodevelopmental and cognitive health effects in humans. The report, containing a monograph and a meta-analysis, went through two rounds of peer review by the National Academies of Sciences, Engineering and Medicine. Comments from reviewers and HHS and NTP's responses also were included in the report released Wednesday. According to its website, the NTP removed the hazardous classification of fluoride in response to comments in the peer-review process. All of which proves the government is a part of it, as clearly, they have no control or oversight of these fake agencies. The report states: Our meta-analysis confirms results of previous meta-analyses and extends them by including newer, more precise studies with individual-level exposure measures. The data support a consistent inverse association between fluoride exposure and children's IQ. The results were robust to stratifications by risk of bias, gender, age group, outcome assessment, study location, exposure timing and exposure type, including both drinking water and urinary fluoride. These findings fly in the face of the empty, unscientific claims U.S.health officials have propagated for years, namely that water fluoridation is safe and beneficial, said Robert F.Kennedy, Jr., Children's Health Defense chairman and chief litigation counsel. It's past time to eliminate this neurotoxin from our water supply. The controversial report will play a key role in determining the outcome of a lawsuit brought in 2017, by several nonprofits against the EPA to end fluoridation of drinking water. We had to fight hard to have this report even made public, Connett said. The CDC and HHS buried this. If they had gotten their way, this report would have never even seen the light of day, Connett said. Since the trial began in 2020, U.S. District Judge Edward Chen has been waiting for the NTP to complete a systematic review of fluoride's neurotoxicity before ruling on the case. Groups like the American Dental Association publicly pressured the NTP to exclude any neurotoxin claims from the reports. Which proves the dental boards are in on it as well. There is zero evidence it provides benefits for our teeth whatsoever. Connett said during the trial, the EPA repeatedly claimed that, the plaintiffs' allegations about toxicity could not be verified because there was no systematic review. Except there is, and the dental, CDC and HHS have tried to ignore it. These are the very people we are entrusting with our health, it is pure folly at this point. Again this type of article plays into our blueprint. If sufficient of the public get wind of this report, then the confidence of the public in the medical establishment will erode further and actions will have to be taken.

SOCIETY SECTION: The rise of Nazism largely perpetrated by agency stooges rears its ugly head again in America. If only these people would realize by being Nazis, they are playing the game for the real Nazis they profess to hate, the Zionists. Whilst I understand more than most the white race is under threat, I will never condone the hatred or violence displayed by these groups. There is a better way of taking on the system than marching like lunatics causing discord everywhere. Plus it allows the system to go look at these idiots who are violent, largely staged by agencies and think tanks. It also allows the MSM to write articles like this condemning it. The same MSM who promotes other hatred based groups like Antifa and Black Lives Matter I might add. Last fall, just blocks from my apartment in Cambridge, Mass., a gang of neo-Nazis gathered in Harvard Square on a Sunday afternoon. Videos showed a group of masked white men shouting, spitting, cursing homophobic slurs and chest-thumping at students. They were part of the Nationalist Social Club, a local neo-Nazi outfit, nicknamed the 131 Crew, as if it were a sneaker collective and not a gang. In researching the rise of the fascist movement in the United States, I have found troubling parallels to 1930s Italy and Germany. From cult worship and rising antisemitism to hatred of minorities and birthrate theories steeped in eugenics, the overlap between the Fascist ideas of the interwar years and our own are too stark to ignore. Except they are not theories, are they? Why is it that so many young white men, particularly of my generation, are turning to fascism and the far-right? A nonfactual statement, the majority of young white men are not turning to fascism at all. This is how they steer the narrative and influence the bots or non-thinking people. A recent survey by the Anti-Defamation League found that 85% of Americans believe at least one anti-Jewish trope, a rise since 2019. It should be 100% given all the evidence, but notice the article is formulated by the ADL, who are a Jewish think tank agitating group, who are only interested in portraying everyone as anti-Jewish. Whether the 131 Crew, or Gavin McInnes, the VICE Media co-founder and Proud Boy founder, or even the nether reaches of QAnon, Andrew Tate-land and the message board 4chan: the angry, alienated male is finding fascism not just appealing, but cool. In the case of McInnes, his Proud Boy affiliates are currently on trial in federal court for sedition, or trying to overthrow the U.S. government by force. What a load of nonsense that is, that is in relation to the Pelosi and DNC staged riot, but this is how the Jewish press report things. McInnes hails from Ottawa, Canada, we don't start fights, McInnes has said, but we will finish them. Far-right influencers have won legions of followers on YouTube and other platforms and amassed hundreds of millions of views, tapping into an aggrieved male psyche that few other media reach. This is before even considering alternative forms of social media where the far-right gather. If we miss recognizing this fascist cult, it is because it exists in plain sight. Those last few lines reveals why they are doing articles like this, fear. We must stop this rise against us, by turning the people we are oppressing against their own people. Fascist cult is interesting given the Hebrew cult run and destroy everything. The Hebrew cult is not and never was the average Jewish person, they are as oblivious to what is and has been going on as much as the blind, death and mute masses. The word fascism is often thrown around loosely, and some may feel applying this label is overly dramatic. But its current manifestation in the U.S. mirrors its incarnation eras ago: an ideology that glorifies the traditional masculine, believes in a spiritual right to exact violence and calls for the seizure of government for authoritarian rule. So, now we have had an attack on whites and males, a programmed article much? The fascists are unified by their love of violence, their hatred of progress and their sinister sense of entitlement that declares that America belongs to them. What is wrong with Americans declaring their country belongs to them? Surely that is better than a certain country stealing other people's lands and then declaring it their own? Fascism feeds off culture wars, exploits psychological insecurities and uses deeply held resentments to convert the impressionable. At a time of intense polarization and cultural battles over race, gender and democracy, it's not surprising that fascism has found young adherents, this time as a lifestyle, with cosplay. That is because it was created that way, without the programs running there would be no need for such groups. In Italy, Benito Mussolini, in the very first pages of his The Doctrine of Fascism, noted that Fascism is not merely political doctrine but a spiritual attitude. In Italy, as in the rest of Europe in the interwar years, Fascist parties won increasing shares of the vote, giving people not just a political cause to live for through the state, but also carnivals, parades, fairs and other forms of social bonding. All of which was orchestrated through the church of Rome. Remember in our book where we revealed the CIA was working with the Vatican during the war. For tens of millions of Europeans, Fascism was fun, and for some years, it was seen as a legitimate alternative to liberal democracy. The Fascists, then and now, placed unique emphasis on propaganda. Oh, the irony of that statement, as Fascism was born out pro pagan da. Notice that word is increasing in the MSM, citing propaganda by the cult of propaganda themselves. Another case of accusing others of what they are doing. Indeed, at a meeting of radio broadcasters in Berlin in 1933, Joseph Goebbels, the Nazi minister of propaganda, gave the state broadcasters some urgent advice: The first law is don't become boring! From the start, Fascism was focused on culture, Mussolini wanted a strong, masculine society reminiscent of the Roman Empire. Which was the Draco remember. Hitler was likewise entranced with the imagined past, and in the memoirs of Albert Speer, his chief architect, one finds Hitler examining architectural designs and building plans for hours on end. A mass murderer interested in architectural designs? Does that fit the narrative? The Nazis took particular aim at degenerate and Jewish art, raiding the museums and galleries, destroying any hint of modernism. Or he was removing the Hyksos material that is not our version of human? An enormous amount of effort went into creating the aesthetics of Fascism in both Italy and Germany: the performances, carnivals, stage shows, youth rallies. All of it duly filmed, edited, put out to the public before social media. A bit like the false flags then before and during social media, same entities same program is why. Today's fascists are malleable and take on different forms, some more racist than others, some more sexist. But they're drawn to the propaganda and symbols of racial and sexual brutality. For many young white men, fascism starts as a cultural identity, rather than as a political ideology. Culture shapes thoughts that, if poisonous enough, will carry horrifying consequences. The authors and the think tanks are clearly trying to mold people's thinking and turn what is a valid complaint, filled with a plethora of proof, of how the white race is under attack. Is it cultural for America to invade and bomb 60-80 countries since WW2? If it is about violence, why only focus on one group? Why not focus on all violence instead? But you see, that doesn't fit the agenda. Notice they never mention the issues the group brings up and addresses it? Oh no, let's just label them violent and extremists. Some of them are, but does that define a whole group or race, like this article suggests? In the shooting at the Emanuel African Methodist Episcopal Church in Charleston, S.C., in 2015, the mass killer wore a jacket emblazoned with the flags of Rhodesia, a racist former British colony that became Zimbabwe and apartheid South Africa. Erm let us correct that, as Rhodesia was not British per se, it was owned and ran by the Jewish Rhodes family. These people need to read real history, not make wild assumptions and point fingers. The Rhodes were part of the British Israelite cult, who used Britain like they use America now, to run their programs. The emblems of white supremacy and fascism were woven into his clothing. The 2019 mass murder of Muslims in New Zealand was livestreamed on social media. Last November, the murderer who killed five people at a gay nightclub in Colorado Springs ran a neo-Nazi website and used racial slurs while playing video games. If that is true, you never know with their Manchurian candidates games, then that violence is plain wrong and not worthy of the cause, period. When fighting any cause, you must never stoop to their levels.

EXPOSE: Here is another expose of the medical fraternity, and further proves our claims that; A: it is all shekel based and B: they are not interested in our health. This report is shocking in its depth and scope and provides a deeper insight to the skullduggery of all the medical organizations. It is also another example of other groups now questioning everything we have done for the duration of THI. Again that augurs well for the Blueprint. Under the 1984 Bayh-Dole Act, government scientists can collect royalties from drug companies for discoveries they make while working on the public's dime. Taxpayers fund government research, while Big Pharma, the National Institutes of Health and NIH scientists keep all the profits. Just like the Military then, the people provide the funds for military hardware, they then sell the hardware to foreign governments and the contractors keep the money, a massive scam of epic proportions. As a patent holder who profits from royalties, the NIH has a significant stake in regulations that impact patents and vaccine mandates, and may use its influence to benefit itself rather than the public. The NIH distributes $32 billion of taxpayer funds as research grants each year. As the largest federal grant-maker, the NIH has a monopoly on what research gets done and what doesn't. Scientists vying for grants also recognize that in order to get funding, they have to play by the rules, and that means doing work that supports establishment narratives on public health policy. In late February 2023, Moderna agreed to pay $400 million to the National Institute of Allergy and Infectious Diseases (NIAID) for the patent it holds on Moderna's mRNA shot. One has to ask sarcastically, is the NIH self-funding? The patent process is a part of the Covid mRNA shots that the media haven't really addressed and people in general don't know anything about, probably because it's a total racket. Based on internal documents and correspondence, it appears the NIAID funded the creation of SARS-CoV-2. At the same time, it patented and receives royalty payments for the vaccine against said virus. All of which proves that A: it is a scam and B: it was premeditated. The National Institutes of Health (NIH) is supposed to be the primary government agency responsible for public health research, but by the looks of it, it appears instead to be in the business of creating public health threats in order to profit from them. Just as we exposed 3 years ago with the early Expose series based mainly on Covid. The agency itself isn't the only one raking in profits. Many patents are held by individuals working at the NIH/NIAID. So, taxpayers fund research that may or may not work out, while Big Pharma, the NIH and individuals at the NIH profit from products that end up on the market. This is a clear conflict of interest that can hurt public health in any number of ways. For starters, it incentivizes the NIH to support and promote potentially dangerous drugs, as we've clearly seen during the Covid pandemic. The NIH also has a significant stake in regulations that impact patents and vaccine mandates, and may use its influence to benefit itself rather than the public.

Conflicts of Interest Influence Public Health Policy: In a video called the Full Measure video, investigative journalist Sharyl Attkisson reports the findings of watchdog group Open The Books. Which recently took a deep dive into the issue of government scientists collecting royalty payments from pharmaceutical companies, for discoveries made while working on your dime. As the largest federal grant-maker, the NIH has a monopoly on what research gets done and what doesn't. According to OpenTheBooks.com founder and CEO Adam Andrzejewski, the NIH distributes $32 billion of taxpayer funds as research grants each year to an estimated 56,000 different entities. That basically buys you the entire American health care space, he says. As the largest federal grant-maker, the NIH has a monopoly on what research gets done and what doesn't, as it decides which scientists and projects get that money. Scientists vying for grants also recognize that in order to get a piece of that pie, they have to play by the rules, and that means doing work that supports establishment narratives on public health policy. But that's not all. The NIH is also gobbling up patents, which further weakens its incentive to protect and promote what's truly in the public's best interest, due to the financial conflicts of interest that come into play.

How the Third-Party Royalty Complex Works: As explained by Andrzejewski, under the 1984 Bayh-Dole Act, government scientists can collect royalties from drug companies for discoveries they make while working on the public's dime: Here's how the third-party royalty complex works. You have a government scientist funded by taxpayers, and they work in a government lab that's also funded by taxpayers. Then when they have an invention like a drug, device or therapeutic, the NIH then licenses that invention to the private sector. The private sector then pays royalties back to NIH. NIH then distributes those royalties on a royalty split schedule, back to the scientist. Details of those royalty payments to government scientists are kept as strictly held secrets. In fact, these royalty payments are kept under such closed wraps, scientists who receive them aren't even required to divulge them on their financial statements, let alone to the public. Congress can't even access those data. Another example of no government oversight, in fact this medical financial chicanery resembles the National Security Act provisions of not seeing, speaking or hearing of anything. One has to ask at this point; just what does a congress person do? And what purpose or whose purpose is Congress serving? In mid-June 2022, Sen.Rand Paul questioned then-NIAID chief Dr.Anthony Fauci about whether he'd ever received royalty payments from an entity to which he had given a research grant, and whether he or anyone else on the vaccine committee had ever received payments from vaccine makers. Fauci suffered one of his now-famous lapses of memory and wouldn't answer. And yet no one follows it up and makes him or them accountable, that has been the problem.

NIH Fights to Shield Conflicted Parties: Paul's questioning of Fauci came on the heels of a lawsuit filed against the NIH to obtain these payment disclosures. The lawsuit was filed by Open The Books in October 2021. But while the NIH eventually did release them, many of the most crucial pieces of information were redacted, and Paul's attempt to get answers led nowhere. Told ya, just like the National Security Act, redact everything. As noted by Andrzejewski: That lawsuit unearthed 3,000 pages of royalty payments to NIH scientists from 2010 to 2021. During that time, 2,407 government scientists received $325 million in secretive royalty payments, averaging out to more than $135,000 each. But much is left unknown, as the NIH redacted or blacked out key details. We don't know who paid it, we don't know how much each individual scientist received, we can only see their names and count the number of times that each scientist received a payment. They also redacted the invention, the license number or the patent number, so, every single one of those individual third-party royalty payments, has the appearance of a conflict of interest. We need to be able to follow the money. Unelected bureaucrats are running the entire American health care complex without any scrutiny. They're basically telling the American people, sit down, shut up and pay up. We'll run things and that's not how the federal government is supposed to operate. Therein lies a deeper problem, that's not how the federal government is supposed to operate, says who? Have we defined how they should operate? Or have we ignored how they operate for too long and they rape and pillage us uncontested? All government departments as our blueprint testifies, needs to be ripped up and started again with clearly defined ways of operating for and by the people only. Covid jabs are rife with Conflicts of Interest: Conflicts of interest also appear to have played a role in the U.S.government's preferential treatment of Pfizer and Moderna during the pandemic. Well I never, Pfizer was the first to receive government authorization for its Covid jab, and it just so happens to be part of an NIH royalty-sharing agreement. Moderna also has such an agreement. What this all means is that the NIH helped invent certain technologies that went into these shots, and then licensed those technologies to Pfizer and Moderna in return for royalty payments. So, the NIH has been making tens of millions of dollars from the Covid shots. Could that financial incentive influence the NIH's stance on vaccine mandates? What do you think? As you may recall, Johnson & Johnson's Covid jab was vilified for causing blood clots. The U.S.Food and Drug Administration even limited the authorized use of the Janssen shot to people over the age of 18 who have no access to Moderna's or Pfizer's jabs, and/or those who voluntarily opt for the Janssen shot, understanding the risks. Meanwhile, Pfizer's and Moderna's shots also cause blood clots, but neither of them was placed under restrictions. Instead, both were added to the U.S.childhood and adult vaccination schedules, Janssen wasn't. The NIH's secret royalties and the conflicts of interest these payments create, were also addressed by Rising hosts Robby Soave and Briahna Joy Gray in a recent episode. Alexander Zaitchik, author of Owning the Sun: A People's history of monopoly medicine from aspirin to Covid-19 vaccines, also joined them on the program. In Zaitchik's view, the biggest scandal is not that government scientists are receiving royalty payments from drug companies but, rather, the intimate relationship that exists between government and an industry that is using the monopoly system to price gouge the American people. The system has been price gouging Americans since virtually its inception. Certainly since 1871 and even more defined since they stole control of America's money supply with the fake bank called the Federal Reserve in 1913. The NIH has basically abandoned its role to serve the public, Zaitchik says, and instead has become much too aligned with the industry and is an enabler, an accomplice and a protector of these monopolies. The vaccines are a point in case. There is the problem again, assuming they are in our interest, these organizations have never been in our interest. Not ever, not one of them and the sooner people realize that the better. There is not as single entity of any variety globally operating for the benefit of the people, a harsh and brutal fact. Government science was basically given, along with these massive research subsidies, through Warp Speed to Moderna, and there were no public interest provisions attached. There were no pricing promises, there were no requests that technology be transferred or shared with other parts of the world. It was basically a conveyor belt for private industry, so, for me, the real problem is the NIH being fully aligned with industry on the monopoly question when public science is involved. You can all thank Mr. Trump for that, aligned with his accomplice the Trustee. The public gets fleeced coming and going: When public monies are being used for research, any scientific discoveries ought to be used for the public's benefit, and the patents should remain public property with broad licensing rights. This used to be the default position, but not anymore. Personally, I beg to differ, it just went even more underhanded. In the 1970s, Big Pharma convinced Congress that this policy was slowing down innovation, and that if companies were allowed to claim exclusive rights to the patents, they'd be more apt to innovate. The Bayh-Dole Act was an outgrowth of this. Bayh in part did this act due to his wife having advanced cancer and the research could be increased due to claiming the patents of it. Bayh was also on a plane with Ted Kennedy that crashed and almost killed all of them, which is suggestive he was part of the Black Sun elements. But we can now see why and how that doesn't work. Public health is literally being sacrificed for profit, and since government agencies are in on it, there's no one left to look out for the public's interests. Additionally, the public ends up getting fleeced twice. First, our tax dollars are being used to fund the research that private companies then lay claim to, and then we end up paying top dollar for the products we funded the development of, as there's no price competition. As noted by Zaitchik, while the Bayh-Dole Act is a bad law, it does have a rider that says generic production of drugs created with government funding can be mandated. However, every time patient groups have approached the NIH and asked for this provision to be enforced, as the monopoly is hurting patients who cannot afford the exorbitant prices, the NIH has rejected those requests. For example, the U.S. Army invented a breakthrough prostate cancer drug, and Americans are paying six times the price for this drug compared to other parts of the world. Does anyone ask why the US Army is involved in that level of medical research? But even though the government has the power to lower the price by mandating generic production, it refuses to do so. Do you still think they are interested in our health? Nope, it's all about the damn shekels again. The whole system, up and down, has been completely corrupted by the amount of money and power the industry has been allowed to amass, because of the corruption in the patent system in general, Zaitchik says. Big Pharma endangers public health: There was a paper published in Surgical Neurology International in October 2022, titled The Pharmaceutical Industry is dangerous to health, further proof with Covid-19. The Covid-19 period highlights a huge problem that has been developing for decades, the control of science by industry, the author, Fabien Deruelle, an independent researcher in France, writes. In the 1950s, the tobacco industry set the example, which the pharmaceutical industry followed. Tobacco is the effect they wish you to focus on, like it causes cancer etc. But the real cause of issues with tobacco is, not the plant itself, but the chemical these same scientists adds to the cigarettes. Since then, the latter has been regularly condemned for illegal marketing, misrepresentation of experimental results, dissimulation of information about the dangers of drugs and considered as criminal. Yet, it was the government and medical scientists plus the FDA who approved the damaging additives. Therefore, this study was conducted to show that knowledge is powerfully manipulated by harmful corporations, whose goals are: 1: financial; and 2: to suppress our ability to make choices to acquire global control of public health. Deruelle's paper reviews a long list of techniques that drug companies use to shape and control the science, including the following: Falsification of clinical trials and making data inaccessible, faked studies, conflict-of-interest studies, concealment of the jab's short-term side effects, concealment of the fact there is no knowledge of the long-term effects of the Covid-19 jab. Dubious composition of the Covid shots, with many ingredients remaining unlisted, inadequate testing methods, conflicts of interest within governments and international organizations and the bribing of physicians. Denigration of renowned scientists who express differing views, the banning of alternative effective treatments and unscientific countermeasures that eviscerate liberties and freedoms. Government use of behavior modification and social engineering techniques to impose isolation, masks wearing and vaccine acceptance and scientific censorship by the media. All of which we have witnessed in the past three years, is it bad yes, but also an opportunity to see things as they really are, not assumptions. The White-collar crooks are running the show. Deruelle points out that, all but one of the primary drug companies producing Covid vaccines, Pfizer, Moderna, AstraZeneca, Merck and Johnson & Johnson, all who have long criminal histories. Having been busted and fined huge sums for illegal marketing, recommending drugs for off-label use, misrepresenting trial results and concealing information about known dangers of their drugs. Moderna is the only exception, as it's only been around since 2010. Deruelle writes: These are some of the fines these companies have paid out, and yet curiously despite destroying many people's health, none of the CEO ended up in court, never mind prison. One has to ask, where these fines just a public money laundering exercise? In 2007, Merck paid $670 million, in 2009, Pfizer paid $2.3 billion, in 2010, AstraZeneca paid $520 million, and in 2012, Johnson and Johnson paid a fine of $1.1 billion. Since 1995, Pfizer has been assessed more than $6.5 billion in penalties for 42 instances of misconduct; 36 instances of misconduct since 1995, resulting in over $11.5 billion in penalties for Johnson and Johnson; 35 instances of misconduct since 1995 and $8.8 billion in penalties for Merck. Pfizer is singled out as having persistent criminal behavior and casual disregard for the health and well-being of patients. Pfizer is no different from other pharmaceutical companies, but it is larger and more egregious. Pfizer is a habitual offender, persistently engaging in illegal business practices, bribing physicians and suppressing unfavorable trial results. But will Pfizer ever stand trial? True to form, Pfizer is also accused of scientific fraud in its Covid-19 jab trial. Brook Jackson, who worked at one of Pfizer's trial sites, sued Pfizer in 2021 for violating the False Claims Act. U.S. District Judge Michael Truncala heard oral arguments on the motions to dismiss, March 1, 2023. On March 2, 2023, defense attorneys for Pfizer argued that whether protocol violations occurred was ultimately irrelevant, because the federal government was made aware of them but still granted emergency authorization to Pfizer's vaccine. Notice the deflection rhetoric, citing circumstantial evidence and not addressing the issues, that is an admittance of guilt right there. Jackson's lawyers countered by saying the FDA authorized the vaccine before reviewing Jackson's complaint. Judge Truncala has not issued a ruling as of this writing, and Jackson's attorney suspects it may be weeks or even months before the judge issues his opinion. Conflicts of interest shaped Covid responses: Deruelle also specifically delves into the conflicts of interest and relationships between the drug companies involved during Covid-19 and governments, international organizations and media and how they worked the Covid emergency for their own benefit. Here are some select excerpts: In 2009, the H1N1 episode should already have been enough to reveal that governments and the WHO are not autonomous. Work has shown that the 2009 H1N1 pandemic seems based on case fatality rates to have been the mildest influenza pandemic on record. Following investigations by the BMJ, it appears that this event declared by the WHO, is significantly tainted by conflicts of interest. So, H1N1 was 2009, a previous trial run, remember earlier piece it is now H5N1. Why was H1N1 a trial run? Because the following year the Rockefeller Institute no doubt buoyed by the data from H1N1 launched Project Lockstep, which laid out all the plans for a future pandemic. A report by the Parliamentary Assembly of the Council of Europe has heavily criticized the WHO, national governments and EU agencies for their handling of the swine flu pandemic. A distortion of priorities of public health services all over Europe, a waste of huge sums of public money, provocation of unjustified fear among Europeans and creation of health risks through vaccines and medications, which might not have been sufficiently tested before being authorized in fast-track procedures. According to former head of health at the Council of Europe, W.Wodarg, the swine flu outbreak was a false pandemic driven by drug companies that influenced scientists and official agencies. All of which was used to collect data for future events. During the Covid-19 period, France hired private consulting firms, mainly McKinsey and Company, which is known for working with pharmaceutical companies. The Senate Inquiry Commission reports that McKinsey contributed on all aspects of the health crisis, notably for social engineering strategies on the vaccination campaign and the extension of the health pass. McKinsey and Company are nothing to do with medical expertise, they are a consultancy firm in their name, in our name they are another of the think tank clowns orchestrating chaos. McKinsey has been the subject of significant controversy related to its business practices. Among other things, the company has been criticized for its role promoting OxyContin use during the opioid crisis in North America, its work with Enron, its work for authoritarian regimes like Saudi Arabia and Russia and for its involvement in government corruption scandals. The suppression of good science and scientists is not new, but Covid-19 unleashed state corruption on a grand scale, suppressing science for political and financial reasons. Since the beginning of Covid-19, much scientific data and expert opinion have been censored or labeled as false or misleading by many internet platforms. In June 2019, the World Economic Forum and the United Nations signed a partnership the 2030 agenda. In the field of health, this alliance is designed to combat key emerging global health threats and achieve universal health coverage. If you believe that from them two organizations, you can be classed as certifiable for mental health conditions. In October 2019, in New York City, the Johns Hopkins Center for Health Security and faulty maths, plus its partners the WEF and the Gates Foundation, hosted Event 201, a fictional coronavirus pandemic. Among the partners of the WEF, there are: Pfizer, AstraZeneca, Johnson and Johnson, Moderna, McKinsey and Facebook et Google. A few months later, a coronavirus pandemic is declared, accompanied by its highly mediatized universal solution, the vaccine. In addition to Event 201, other pandemic simulations, civil (MARS and SPARS in 2017) and military (Dark Winter in 2001, Atlantic Storm in 2003 and 2005, Global mercury in 2003, and Crimson Contagion in 2019), have taken place over the past 20 years. All these simulations correspond to fear programs induced by false media. Let's look at who was involved in these so-called simulations, but in essence our dry runs for future events. Between January and August 2019, Health and Human Services (HHS), headed by Alex Azar, runs a simulation—code-named Crimson Contagion. In this Functional Exercise, participated the National Security Council, United States Department of Health and Human Services, United States Department of Agriculture, United States Department of Commerce, United States Department of Defense, United States Department of Energy, United States Department of Homeland Security, United States Department of Housing and Urban Development, United States Department of Interior, United States Department of Justice, United States Department of Labor, United States Department of State, United States Department of Transportation, United States Department of Treasury, between others State and Local organizations, public and private. Quite a list of government organizations, notice the one group who are responsible for most of the outbreaks is left out of the picture? The CIA, always using others as fronts whilst they hide in the dark. For the general welfare of the population, all these scenarios lead to the same methods and identical to those used during Covid-19: Isolation, control of movements and liberties, censorship, propaganda and coercive vaccination of the population. There is no doubt that this is an event manipulated by governments, international agencies, pharmaceutical industries and the media. In addition to the huge profits obtained by the pharmaceutical groups involved, the primary goal of this pandemic seems to be compulsory vaccination, because the introduction of a European vaccine passport had already been planned since 2019. The objective of the WHO is to impose the Chinese model to become the norm. That is to say, a system with centralization of each person's health data and restriction of freedoms for the unvaccinated. A period such as Covid-19 represents a powerful lever for increasing the effectiveness of global governance. Which means their one world government nonsense. Conflicts of interest threaten our freedoms: In the final analysis, conflicts of interest and the collusion between government and industry does more than rob us of our hard-earned money. It now threatens our very freedom, as these monopolies are being used to further a totalitarian takeover of global proportions. As such, we can no longer turn a blind eye or accept excuses such as these relationships don't influence our decision-making. They absolutely influence the decisions being made, and the public is consistently on the losing end. Congress needs to start taking this seriously and revisit laws such as the Bayh-Dole Act, which is currently allowing private monopolies to profit while no one is looking out for our interests. I believe the Blueprint addresses all of those issues and we can go forward without the fraud, corruption, criminality and the conflicts of interest.

MYSTERY SECTION: Om is given many meanings and layers of symbolism in the Upanishads including the sacred sound, the Yes. The Vedas, the udgitha meaning the song of the universe, which is likely a reference to what we know as, the Music of the Spheres. It is also referenced as the infinite, the all-encompassing, the whole world, the truth, the ultimate reality, the finest essence, the cause of the universe, the essence of life, the Brahman, the ātman, the vehicle of deepest knowledge and self-knowledge the atma jnana. All of which runs alongside the term of, genesis.

Genesis is a Greek word that means birth or origin. The name is intended to signify the beginning of something, just like The Blueprint. Not to be mistaken with their word magic spelling, signifying the genes of Isis. There were previous words related to genesis in Latin and derived-European languages. Those words in Latin were more related to the biblical story of the off world fake gods, and in particular Isis, the genes of Isis. The Ancient Greek word is the only one that holds the meaning of birth, creation and origin. In the scriptures was the distortion of what it really means, it said in the beginning was the word. It was followed by egotistical self-entitled entities believing it was all about them, the lord and or god. They were never the beginning or indeed the end, the collective consciousness is in part the beginning and the end. The beginning of the return to people caring for each other and the end to abject evil perpetrated by entities intent on being the one. We often talk about being born and the religious scripts of being re-born. Being born starts at 0, but there are times in our lives when we are re-born or a better term, reinvent ourselves. Moments in your lives that changes everything and suddenly you are no longer the same person. Many of you have stated your lives changed upon joining THI, whether that was in terms of knowledge or in terms of the self and your relation to the world. All have learned to think different and many have learned to act different, in overview you stepped out of your illusionary world and into reality. If there is one thing THI stands for it is reality, no matter how harsh that reality is, we faced it up and took it on. Many of you have changed your whole lives since being connected to THI, and that is my greatest joy running this group. Many of you have made lasting friends and some have even connected up on a love basis. THI in essence was your own genesis, the birth or origin of a new you, a new way and new thoughts and actions. Many are also stating how much they love being a part of THI, which brings in another genesis as love is the genesis of everything. Love comes from the collective consciousness being more in harmony than chaos, embrace it, it is a part of you and us.

Some of the new age cult words have been stripped bare within our shows, but let's look at another one shall we. Oh no, he's about to ruin something else! Indeed. The word self, Old English self, sylf in West Saxon, seolf in Anglian, one's own person. Self; own, personal; same, identical, from Proto-Germanic selbaz the source also of Old Norse sjalfr. Proto-Germanic selbaz self, from PIE sel-bho-, suffixed form of root s(w)e-, pronoun of the third person and reflexive, referring back to the subject of a sentence. Also used in forms denoting the speaker's social group as, we our-selves. The self a pronoun of the third person? Oh my, remember the mirror piece of, the real you is looking at a copy of a copy in the mirror. The self is the third person is what that confirms. But where does the higher self, kick in? Higher self is a term associated with multiple belief systems, but its basic premise describes an eternal, omnipotent, conscious and intelligent being, who is one's real self. Blavatsky formally defined the higher self as Atma the inseparable ray of the Universe and one self. Atma is a Sankrit word meaning breath or essence. The breath is the first sign of life upon the exit of the mother's womb. Essence is the life force energy, something the Jupiter Ascending movie touched upon, when the off world were harvesting our life force energy or essence. It was all stored in vast tubes, and I think they stated it takes 100 children or adults to fill one tube. Here is a pondering, what happens when the masses find out that 70% of world trade was off world? What happens when they find out that much of that trade was us? Will they understand the department called Human Resource? As in human's were a resource or a commodity. But is it resource the commodity or re source of energy or does re meaning returning? And so, the human life force is a way of returning to Source? Think of that last question in terms of the Cosmic Genetics game. Atma they say is the God above, more than within, us. Well, Blavatsky is another of the Jewish elements who distorts information, because the god is within us all and never above us. Each and every individual has a Higher self. Concept: The Higher Self is generally regarded as a form of being, only to be recognized in a union with a divine source. In recent years the New Age faith has encouraged the idea of the Higher Self in contemporary culture, though the notion of the Higher Self has been interpreted throughout numerous historical spiritual faiths. Some denominations believe that the higher self is a part of an individual's metaphysical identity, while others teach that the higher self is essentially our tie to the heavens. Similar to the notion of the soul, the higher self can be defined by many different sects, while also being a topic of interest in the scientific and philosophical fields. Religious views: Christianity: In the conservative evangelical Christian interpretation, only those who are born again receive a new spirit (Ezekiel 36:26, see John 3:1-7). Born again is very open ended and open to interpretation. Born again in a religious concept or a re-incarnation trap and loop system? Neither are right or just. All those born receive a spirit/soul package upon exiting the mother's womb, unless the dark forces prevent it and a person becomes a soulless entity. In Christian interpretation this appears to be similar to the concept of the higher self yet different in many respects. Not at all in my opinion. According to this tradition, only those who are born again receive the indwelling of the Holy Spirit, or the personal presence of God. But the holy spirit as they call it has nothing to do with the soul/spirit package from Source. We have not defined what is or was the "holy spirit" have we? Remember according to the church, the holy spirit replaced the mother! Islam: In Sufism and some esoteric Shia, the Higher Self has an important role, which is connected with notion of al-Insān al-Kāmil (Muhammad the Prophet), the six organs, Al-Nafsul Mud'ma'inah and Fana. Hinduism: In Hinduism, the higher self is one and the same with the Jiva or individual self. Jiva is a living being or any entity imbued with a life force. With this perspective, the Hindu faith generally teaches that the higher self, or Atman is not an object possessed by an individual, rather the self is the subject which perceives. Really? How can the higher self not be possessed by the individual it is connected to? It is part of you, the individual, so that makes no sense, like much of Hinduism and Jainism it seems. In his book, The Higher Self, Deepak Chopra utilizes the views of the Hindi denomination to support his claims, concerning the divine force that is acquired with the awareness of the self. Hinduism teaches that through the examination of self-knowledge or atman jnana, one can attain salvation by comprehending the true self. One can attain salvation, meaning we need to be saved, rescued or purged, yet again more fear-based programming. One has to accept the true self with 100% honesty with and of the self, to be able to achieve that higher status per se. Higher self has always been with us, it is called your intuition, but sadly we all ignored it for so long. This is distinct from the conception in the Advaita Vedanta non-dual mystical tradition, which teaches that the Atman the individual soul and Brahman the Oversoul, are one and the same. New Age: Most New Age literature defines the Higher self as an extension of the self to a godlike state. This Higher Self is essentially an extension of the worldly self. With this perspective, New Age text teaches that in exercising your relationship with the higher self, you will gain the ability to manifest your desired future before you. In other words, the self creates its own reality when in union with the Higher Self. Which was always the case, except when arguing within the two hemispheres, which created the fear and self-doubts. Higher self-meditation and channeling: In numerous reports concerning the Higher Self, the practice of meditation or channeling to contact the Higher Self is highly encouraged. Not by me it is not, in light of the channeling or via meditation either. You don't need to channel to connect to higher self, that is a complete misnomer. Most of the channeling is done by the greys using AI technology to replicate us and use against us. Most of this ideology agrees with the concept that with mindful awareness of the higher self, peace, salvation or enlightenment may be procured. This is due to the idea that the Higher Self contains an advanced amount of insight into man's most taxing questions, such as the purpose of existence or death, etc. Through spiritual exposure, a person is thought to make a conscious connection with their higher self or other higher beings. In this state, the meditator may tap into this higher intelligence in order to develop a more enlightened perspective on world matters. An awful lot of contradictory evidence in that piece, and over describes something that is or was natural to us all. Like most of the New Age programs, the words and meanings became very conflated to a point of it being lost. Your higher self will guide you, providing you learn to trust the self, it never steers you wrong. Only our ignoring of it, meant things went wrong. And when your fears subside, but shadows still remain, you can carry on walking through the cold November rain, or manifest a change within and without from you. You have been through this a long long time just trying to kill the pain, but trying didn't work, doing it will. So never mind the darkness, we still can find a way, cause nothin' lasts forever, even cold November rain, as your inner light shines on. How brightly depends on you alone. The one thing that intrigues me about the term higher self is, where is the as above so below? Is there a lower self? What constitutes a lower self? Maybe there is no comparative self at all, and so no higher or lower self, it is just the self. I am that I am.

Here is another science piece that links back to our shows, and also certain presentations. Maybe some of our members are right, THI is becoming the news per se. Or maybe it is just another example of the collective consciousness rising. But, here is another deeper pondering. Given their new AI is not working too well, because it is not operating with the right intent, could it be that the AI is starting to copy those with the right intent and spitting out these pieces? The Moon, which is four and a half billion years old, had been drifting at that rate for its whole existence, it would have collided with Earth around 1.5 billion years ago. As we're still here, obviously that didn't happen. Only one problem with that is, the moon is not 4.5B years old, some of the debris or moon rocks confirms using their methods of date sequencing, revealed it was older than the Earth. All of which shatters their supposed theories. The moon was brought here around 12-13K years ago, which just happened to coincide with one of the flood events here. The reason for the moon drifting, according to experts, (M) has to do with Milankovitch cycles. The cycles describe how tiny changes in the shape of the Earth's orbit and its axis impacts the amount of sunlight we receive. What has that got to do with the moon drifting away? This they say in turn influences the kind of climate we have and can dictate periods of wet or dry weather. Milankovitch cycles have previously been responsible for a period of greening in the Sahara desert, and their forces have been known to impact the size of lakes on Earth. Or the dark forces have impacted the greening and the size of the lakes. Milankovitch cycles and their frequencies also determine the distance between the Earth and the Moon. Scientists have discovered that 2.46 billion years ago, the Moon was around 60,000km closer to Earth than it is now, meaning there would have been 17 hours of sunlight per day. It wasn't 2.46B years ago either, try 12-13K years ago. How interesting the moon was much closer they say. Pondering upon Kevin's recent presentations in relation to the bombardment of the Rus area, and how ice fell from the sky. What if that was the moon itself? It was described that an ice ball was in the sky. If the moon traveled through space, then like a comet it would gain ice. What if the moon was steered close to the planet? The heat of the planet and atmosphere would dislodge all the ice from the moon would it not? I was shown this in a vision, the moon was right next to the Earth and all the ice fell. You are talking huge volumes of ice and then potential water, could this then have caused the flood of that time? You would be talking of hundreds of feet of extra water, with the moon totally wrapped in ice. The moon being close to the planet and said to be over the Northern Hemisphere, would then have blocked out the sun for an extended period of time. This then would have caused an ice age in the Northern Hemisphere, which is exactly what unfolded around that time also. Once the moon shed its ice, it then retreated into a satellite based orbit, why? because it is a satellite not a natural moon. A natural moon does not go into orbit with only one side facing a planet. This proves the moon has a drive engine to maneuver to and from the planet. This also explains why the moon is hollow. Perhaps it is drifting away now as it was knocked out of its orbit with the fall of the Saturn/Moon matrix? Perhaps a new moon will appear in our skies to replace what is essentially an orbiting craft?.

ENDING PIECE: We have spoken before about convenience and time, yet often we hear the words convenience saves time. There are many items of convenience, whether it is something computerized or the various kitchen gadgets we have to speed up the preparation of the meals. It saves time they say, for who? For what? For when? And for why? are all the questions, they may appear to have simplified answers, but are they? What time have you saved? And what useful or beneficial things did you save time for? Is something only the few can answer and deliver upon. Most use their time saved to deal with more drama and utter drivel, too few use their saved time for personal development. What is time and where is its center? A curious question to some, but the latter answer that has been given to us is, Greenwich Mean Time. Why is it pronounced Gren-itch? when the phonetics saying Green Wich, is that hiding something? What is a green witch? Does it exist? Are witches color coded? The answer is yes. The Otherworldly Oracle defines a green witch as someone who works with the elements, the local land spirits and all things green. The green witch is able to harness the energy of the natural sources around him or her, by developing a close connection with local plants, trees and wildlife as well as with the earth itself. These witches are similar to healing ancestors such as druids and shamans. But green is a fake color and druids and shamans have been revealed to have been involved in sacrificial cults in the past. What is the difference between a green witch and a white witch? While a green witch is focused on the wonders and mysticism of the earth, a white witch is concerned with practicing white magic. White witches use practical magic focused on the greater good and green witches focus efforts on the natural energy of the flora of the earth. Except all magic is by the usage of dark forces, using djinns to carry out the so-called magic. People who develop the self, do not need magic, only their gained abilities. But has anyone asked why it is mean time? What definition of mean is it inferring to? Another example of not defining things. Is it mean in the way of average, or mean in the context of being not nice, after we were all trapped inside the Time Matrix. Their description of it makes it no clearer. Mean time can have different meanings depending on the context. It can mean the period of time between two events, especially in the phrase in the meantime. Which two events are they speaking of? It can also mean time that is based on the motion of the theoretical mean sun, which results in equal, 24-hour days throughout the year. The theoretical mean sun? why is it theoretical? is that the Black Sun? English speakers often use Greenwich Mean Time or GMT as a synonym for Coordinated Universal Time (UTC). Why is it UTC, when the words in sequence are C U T. Are they saying we are going to be mean and cut your time short here, all done by the magick of the green witch? Time will make no sense in the future, was said in a show back in early 2018. Five years later that has been borne out by our members. But apart from time making no sense, the other thing reported by many over the last 6-9 months is, the sense of calmness that pervades. An almost serene experience people say, less chaos and everything appears to be flowing and calm. The question is; is that calmness due to out of time? Have we ran out of time? Or has time been left in the past? How will life feel without the constraints of time? Many will ask, but why are you asking me? Why not ask the self. Why was daylight saving time? And who for? How will you react without operating within the clockwork, whether it is orange or not. Will convenience finally subside because there is no point in saving time? With no more time to save time, how will you operate? What will you create or manifest? Will there be firsts instead of seconds, will things be large or minute? Will the hours of Horus be extinguished? Will the days not put you in a daze? Will the week not make you weak? And will the weekend not have you weakened? What will your thoughts be out of time? How will you fill your non time? Questions, questions, questions, but there are no questions nor any answers, isn't it no time for your inner knowing to reveal that? My brain Thomas, what are you doing to it? You have ruined it. Who me? I didn't ruin anything, I just shattered the illusions, of which time was one of them. To me ruining is just a pastime, or was it past time we learned to see beyond the fake horizon and the illusions? Life can be grand they say, but what became grand was the illusion of it all.
