CG updates: Law Update: Facilitated Intro to Law Series Part 12 on Fraud & Debt. Preparing to present Part 13 on Volition, Remedy and Law. This brings to a close the Intro to Law series, which has been well received and led to healthy discussion. Our hope is this series has helped expand minds and created a desire to learn more about truth and what law is, so we can see through the deceptions that have been created over the last 400 years. The system survives because it needs people to think the rule of law exists, when nothing could be further from the truth. Ultimately it exists because we consent to it through lack of knowledge. The knowledge is available for all to learn now, ignorance has become a choice. This is something all common law people need to learn. They are wasting their time on a law that means servitude. This series when completed will be added to the website along with the Gardening growing database when the web team has some time.

April 21, 2021 is the date of the first post on the TPC Gardening & Non GMO Food Communal Gathering. With 68 topics and 613 posts, there is now a vast amount of information on the TPC Forum, including a gardening photo journal with examples of the work that the members are experimenting with. We had our first zoom in August of 2021. We have been meeting at 9 am Mountain time on Saturdays ever since. Gardeners are not capable of getting together without being social, but it's not just a social gathering. We have shared our success stories and inspired each other to forge ahead in our goals to learn as much as possible, to become the teachers, to show the way to healthy living for anyone who wishes to learn. So, what makes the TPC Gardening zooms so special? It's amazing to be able to talk with several people at once who are all in completely different climate zones in the world, comparing notes about food production. One can be sitting in deep winter, discussing the challenges of keeping chickens alive in forty below weather while talking with someone in a hot sunny place, proudly showing the fresh turmeric they picked from the garden that morning. There are many ways to learn about growing food, but there's something very different about the TPC Gardening zooms. Where else can you find people who are willing to consider such radical ideas as how plants communicate using bacteria as messengers, or whether the growth of plants is improved by the numerology of the garden layout? It's like we're all working on a research project together even though we're miles apart, in spite of the distance we've all become close friends. We managed to put down our shovels (and stop chatting) long enough to research and compile a gardening guide, we also produced a section for the TPC promotional video and we worked on the Blueprint for Humanity. It's a small group and it may not seem like we've accomplished much in two years, I disagree. But when you're planting seeds, there's a lot that happens under the ground. Unseen but still growing.

The People's Colors CG have pretty much turned our attention to providing input and ideas for the New Blueprint for Humanity. Our ideas, memes, tech skills and songwriting efforts are all geared towards gaining traction for our Blueprint. We believe that the content in the Blueprint encompasses a framework to address the racially divisive efforts of the corrupt officials in the world's systems. We are posting invitations to have a look see on postings, that point out racially unfair situations and issues. We are using the wonderful memes created by our own THI members. This provides an alternative to discontent and finger pointing. Those who are ready, will hopefully look further into what we're offering.

Media team report for April 2023 We are pleased to announce the opening of a second twitter account for the Blueprint for Humanity which now has over 300 followers. The Twitter handle is newblueprintforhumanity or @newblueprint111 The THI_SHOW_COM twitter account now has 43 followers. The Telegram Channel blew up during the week much to our delight and now has over fourteen hundred subscribers. We are also working behind the scenes with the Blueprint Team to come together with the aim of pushing out the Blueprint. The media team is continuing to push out memes, videos, book links, show links and website links. These creations are made with love and intention to reach those that need to hear the message and feel that frequency. We ask that you play a part in pushing that frequency out to the general public by retweeting, sharing posts, memes and links. We would love anyone that wants to be involved in creating content, videos or simply sending us a time stamp of the shows, we can create content from those so please do so. With over 3 thousand THI subscribers in the main page that would amass to over 3 thousand posts hitting main stream social media every week. In the words of Thomas; Now is the time to get off of our collective backsides and do something that has never been done on this planet before. You are the frequency that is needed now, share it.

The Book Team is still working on translations of Volume 1. Several members have shifted focus to translating the Blueprint, and a proofreader has volunteered to double-check the Spanish translation when it is completed.

The Blueprint Research Team has had its first meeting and each member has been assigned two months' worth of transcripts to look for influencers that may be candidates to receive the Blueprint or a summary. Mailers have been prepared and will soon be finalized. Postage costing is in progress. A method of tracking the copies sent out and the response from those has been devised.

Blue Print Action Group update: The Blue Print CG has moved over to the Positive Action Group MeWe page and renamed it the Blue Print Action Group. The reason for this is the PA Group actions have become focused on the Blue Print. The group has set up a Research Team to start identifying key influencers to reach out to in America. The idea is to compile a list and track response and contact details for follow up conversations if and when we get a response. The BP Action group continues to meet twice a month on Thursdays, zoom details are in the BP Action Group Main MeWe page. We continue to look for more action-oriented volunteers to work with the BP Action team. There is no shortage of ideas, we need more hands-on deck to help with actions as we move forward. Please reach out to Roger Isaacs via personal message on MeWe if you want to help and we will invite you into the group.

TPC Building Community: In April we had a meeting where we discussed some topics from the book: Tara, Covenant of the Celts and Jeremiah, from the 6th century BCE. The 5 books of Tara, were written and brought to the Celts by Jeremiah, a prophet from the middle east, they were written for the Celts 3000 years ago to help save Humanity, as society had collapsed. It gave rise to the culture and civilisation of the Celts, by awakening the Celts to their ancient heritage: Divine law. In order to apply this knowledge for building a community of wholeness, where everybody works together and for each other, the Divine Rules were discussed: The Divine rule of Intention: Ignore no evil, the Divine rule of Vocation: Speak no evil and the Divine rule of Action: Do no evil, with 18 commandments. All as a foundation to build a community of Trust together. We also spoke about Leadership and conditions for the Right to rule, The Rights of Action and the 7 Attributes of the Divine Mind: Respect, Integrity, Commitment, Enthusiasm, Compassion, Cheerfulness and Discernment.

Recently the Telegram subscribers jumped over night from 166 to 369, 369 eh? A telling and confirmative number. I'm sure over time we can increase that. There is now over 1.4k subscribers of our thi-show.com Whilst these numbers appear low, remember up until recently we had not advertised who we are. We are not an alt media show, we were not set up for big audiences per se, no advertisement of THI or TPC, we just let people find us. The YT channel was flying and we were adding 500 a month at one point, but then the YT National Zionists kicked in and started pulling our shows. Which is why we created the THI-show.com platform. Personally I have never tracked the numbers of our differing platforms, as it didn't mean that much to me. It is more important that some within the group got our messages and memes than about the numbers. There are many groups of tens of thousands of followers, but how many actually understand how things actually work or don't, very few, as you have all found out. But, with our many members now doing promotional efforts things are about to change. With the blueprint we have to expand into the alt media, which loses the coziness of THI/TPC per se. It means we are dancing in their world, but if it brings in people from other groups, we have to be open to that. Is it a risk? you bet, but a risk we have to take. Asking all members to be more patient with new members, as they will not know as much as you all. It is not important they follow THI, the Blueprint supersedes THI in many ways. It is important we can all get along and support a common cause, the blueprint was designed to bring us all together and learn to work again in harmony, just like the Communal Gatherings.

These are extraordinary times on many levels now, as within and so without our group. Our first show after a two-week hiatus, that was planned but I could not reveal for safety issues. The details of the trip either or who I was meeting, for safety and protection purposes. The trip was a working one similar to last year with the members, with an added twist of epic proportions. Much more was achieved than the original thoughts and ideas before the trip and we go forward now with a much clearer path and line. Feminine energies will rise in the coming days and weeks, embrace and integrate them. Covet your gender and protect it, not fight or compete with it. Get out of your own heads and way and learn to flow with love, learn to flow with grace and demurely, learn to flow in compassion and caring. If you can all be in and of that, you do realize that being, changes the world? Ask yourself these questions; do I care enough? Do I love enough? Will I allow myself to be loved? I am committed to change enough? Will I embrace my and our change? What is for the greater good? Another trip is planned shortly and there will be another break in shows, due to the now heavy workload I carry on the other parts of my and our work. I may later in the year do a presentation on Zoom on events of this year, should it be safe to do so and also feel right. It is not about keeping you all out of the information per se, but certain things are not for public consumption at certain times. There are safety issues for myself and others, and these things are of big importance to us all. I take and carry that responsibility with me every day, and know that everything I do is for the benefit of the all.

NEWS: Good news coming out of Eastern Europe as the tide begins to turn against the West and their army of clowns. As Bulgaria suspends the import of agricultural, poultry and meat products from Ukraine to support local farmers. The ban will be in force from April 24 to June 30 and will include 20 goods including wheat, wheat flour, honey, milk egg, poultry, goat and sheep meat, plus walnut and hazelnut. Bulgaria is the fourth EU country that has taken such decisions after Poland, Hungary and Slovakia. The European Commission President Ursula von der Leyen sent letters to the leaders of these four countries stating that: Unilateral measures can only play into the hands of the adversaries of Ukraine and should not erode our unwavering support for Ukraine. Yet, none of the unwavering support has been beneficial for the people. President of a nobility family von Der Leyen needs to shut up and honor the sovereignty of countries and their peoples, and not perpetuate control-based agendas. Pandering to NATO clowns and Jewish EL-ites has not served Europe or anywhere else for that matter. This is another sign of their erosion and their desperation to keep everyone in line. Guess what? It's not working.

Meta Platforms, the billionaire Zuckerberg's social media empire, will reportedly cut thousands more jobs. As a result, the social-media stalwart cut 21,000 jobs from last November through mid-March. First came a wave of 11,000 cuts on Nov.9, followed in mid-March by another 10,000, which we reported on recently. But the bloodbath is not over, according to the latest reports, as Meta plans to eliminate thousands more jobs. An internal memo has been sent to managers, asking them to prepare for tough new announcements. The new job cuts, which total 4,000, are expected to affect Facebook, WhatsApp and Instagram. They would also affect Reality Labs, the division that houses the group's metaverse projects, plus the Quest virtual-reality headsets. In 2021 and 2022, Reality Labs, which is supposed to build the company's next big thing, recorded a cumulative loss of nearly $24 billion, including $13.7 billion just last year. Their metaverse and AI not going too well again, it is the wrong intention is why, plus some interference with it to ensure it doesn't work too well. Whilst it is sad the job losses, bearing in mind there are plenty of jobs available, losing them in this sector is highly beneficial.

More ridiculous woke nonsense and programs. Roman Catholic church leaders in Ontario have been mostly silent since a Canadian high school junior was suspended from his Catholic high school for opposing transgender ideology. Josh Alexander, 17, filed a human rights complaint with the Ontario Human Rights Commission earlier this month following his suspension from St. Joseph's Catholic High School in Renfrew. However, top leaders have yet to respond to inquiries about the situation. Alexander drew the ire of school leadership when he organized a student walkout in protest of the school permitting biological males in girls' bathrooms, according to his complaint. Does anyone ask if the sensitivity of transgenders is considered, why haven't they built them their own toilet? He also argued in class that God created two unchangeable genders, which reportedly offended some of his classmates and teachers. Offended because the system told them to be, proper bot behavior that. It gets worse though, as police arrested him when he attempted to return to school on Feb.6, and he has been excluded from campus for the rest of the school year. Arrested for speaking your truth? Oh dear, have these people lost all of their brain cells? As a guiding principle, the Renfrew County Catholic District School Board's top priority is the safety and well-being of our students. As part of a Catholic community, we expect that values will be expressed respectfully and in a way that is not harmful to others, Searson wrote. While all our students are entitled and encouraged to share their beliefs, it cannot be at the expense of others. But the very book these Catholic priests promotes, states to look badly upon homosexuals does it not? No one should be made to feel unsafe or marginalized. Nobody should be marginalized? Then why is there a Catholic school, is that not marginalizing people? Bullying behavior that creates an unsafe space for our students is not tolerated. Says the group who created Crusades to bully people in many countries to drop their religion and faith, then accept the Catholic version. This is the same group who murdered millions of women in the past 1000 years for the crime of being able to think for themselves. The hypocrisy is staggering.

Here is another example of offended by everything as every word gets twisted these days, due to people needing to create drama where there is none. Rep. Pramila Jayapal, D-Wash., said recently that immigrants are needed in America because they, among other things, pick the food we eat, clean our homes and rebuild our communities after climate disasters. Jayapal's comments which some GOP colleagues and others criticized as stereotyping immigrants, came during a House Judiciary Committee markup of legislation pertaining to the immigration crisis, known as the Border Security and Enforcement Act of 2023. But what she said was actually true, what it also revealed was, home born Americans will not do them jobs. The latter fact is damning in and of itself. It was stated that, the majority of workers in the construction industry are predominantly made up of foreign nationals. I witnessed it myself in Florida 2004, as three hurricanes rolled in within six weeks, the counties changed the hiring ruling and left the industry empty. This then lead to a prolonged recovery of the damaged houses and the roofing and construction companies going bust, due to having no staff. Jayapal then went onto blaming Trump's policies, which shows the lack of understanding of how politics and policies work. She argued for a path to citizenship for illegal immigrants residing in America. So, let's all take a minute to recognize the hypocrisy of every anti-immigrant debate. This country needs immigrants to survive. Immigrants pick the food we eat, rebuild our communities after climate disasters, help construct our infrastructure, power our small business economy, clean our homes and look after the most precious in our families, children and our elders. They strengthen our economy, our food supply chain, our ability to compete, and she highlighted the labor shortage in America. I agree with the principal of that piece, and our blueprint in essence enhances it. But a pondering of mine recently brought up a future problem and conundrum and I decided to draft a plan in my head that could be added as an expansion of the blueprint. With the die off due to the Covid jabs and masks issues, plus a future surge in deaths due to a lack of treatment being acquired, due to a lack of staff and an inability to get medical positions filled, we are left with a conundrum further down the line. Potential Solution? Firstly, end the passport and visa game, that is not about our safety, but their control freak games, of knowing where everyone is at a given time and place. That is all based in fear though. But what happens when the countries with the lead economies starts to collapse due to a much reduced populace? Those countries will not be able to self-sustain themselves with much less people and their economies would collapse over time. Then we have the countries who partially are self-sustaining, but rely heavily on the richer countries to buy their produce and goods. What happens to the poor countries, who are self-sustaining in some instances but not all, what happens to their economy with less people and the richer countries not able to buy as much? All three levels of countries will collapse under the current market driven economics. The solution is, move as many as people from the poorer into the countries of their choice, and it will be a choice to stay or go. This will then boost the numbers in the more richer countries. It will lead to more jobs being filled. Even with the new influx, it is expected that populations will not be back to pre-Covid levels again. Numbers of migrants could be shared amongst all countries, with preferences given to those who wish to move because of family, loved ones being in said country. This could be done on a phased in transition with those coming to be skilled in positions each country needs to fulfill. Social Security and Pension funds would be preserved for Americans. It will stop all current governments being forced to increase the age of retirement, like France did recently. For the really small countries or island nations, for instance lets use Guam as an example. Guam is only American for war purposes, but what if the people of Guam where given a free ticket to move and stay in America or any other country? The island of Guam could be stripped of anything not being used and given to countries who don't have much instead. With only the few people left they would be tasked of turning the island into a wildlife sanctuary. So, with one solution we can fix the economies, end the broken family visa system, keep the main countries' economies stable and turn large swathes of the planet into eco-centered systems that aids the environment. Not all will agree with it, but with future thinking we can head off a big mess in the near future.

Anyone noticed the female politicians are disappearing from the news altogether? Where is Pelosi, Clinton, Alexander Ocasio, Lightfoot and even Warren? Here is another prominent female going missing after we exposed her badly, Rochelle Walensky who is born to. Who played a key role in the Biden administration's response to the Covid-19 pandemic, announced she will step down as the director of the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention. The announcement came as the World Health Organization said Friday that Covid is no longer a global emergency. That marks the end of the Covid narrative as we warned in the End of year review show. It has backfired on them spectacularly or was it all planned that way? Was it evil or divine? No time will tell. The narrative of Covid will go on for many years, it will mark a turning point of sorts and hopefully lead to more people coming together. Maybe that was the silver lining?

MEDICAL NEWS: Stories are emerging now of people being paid for burials, if they admitted on the death certificate it was Covid they died of. The Kentucky Congressman Thomas Massie is taking up the plight of these people and highlighting it, seems like a good candidate for the Blueprint. A member chimed in and said; I have a friend in Colorado whose husband died of cancer and a neighbor here, whose father also died of cancer. Both told me they were told if Covid was put on the death certificate they would receive $9000 towards the burial! Guess who was making the payments? FEMA. Yet another exposure of a fake government group, FEMA like all the other agencies said to be of the government, are not. Add FDA, USDA, CDC and many others to that list.

Many of you may have heard of a new war in Africa, this time in Sudan. Many will not pay attention as to why they are fighting, as war is not at the forefront of people's minds unless it is in their neighborhood.

Many people will ignore war happening in Africa, because they are always fighting there. But lest people forget, it is the 5 eyes countries who often cause the conflicts of which the masses all ignore again. Last week a horrifying report emerged from Khartoum, where poor Sudanese civilians are being terrorized by internal conflict. Is Sudan the new Ukraine? Will it reveal similarities? Sadly yes it has. As fighters had seized a biological laboratory that houses samples of measles and cholera. It was said that power cuts may threaten the safe containment of those samples. That's a worrying enough statement at the best of times, but set against the worldwide proliferation of biological facilities, where risky pathogens are stored and studied, and after a lethal pandemic that may well have begun in a lab, it is an alarming harbinger. Since the emergence of Covid, more than a dozen high-level biosafety laboratories, more serious than the one in Khartoum have opened, or are set to open, around the world. The rush to build such labs started 20 years ago in the wake of the Sars epidemic and this has significantly increased the risk of dangerous and sometimes novel viruses or bacteria leaking accidentally. The list of serious outbreaks suspected to be caused by such leaks over the decades is a long one, involving smallpox, anthrax, influenza, Sars, Covid, foot and mouth, brucellosis and others. But then our members will recognize by now that all outbreaks are clown created for that very purpose. Yet there remains little formal international mechanism for registering, let alone policing, such labs to ensure they adhere to high safety standards. Something our show has heavily noted, and the fact they are not registered reveals A: it is underhanded and begs the deeper question B: are humans running these facilities? Unlike nuclear facilities, biological labs are subject to inconsistent global rules. As Alison Young reports in her new book, Pandora's Gamble: The governance structures around the world are a hodgepodge of biosafety and biosecurity guidance, institutional self-policing and fragmented regulatory oversight systems. Nobody is tracking how many or which labs around the world maintain collections of the most dangerous pathogens, either natural or man-made. Nor does anyone know how many labs are engaging in experiments that are making pathogens more dangerous. Hence the Wuhan incident which changed the course of history, but not in the way they had planned it. That incident over time will be seen as the catalyst for real change on this planet for the better. One has to ponder, is there a secret force going around eliminating all these bio-labs globally? Just a pondering.

SOCIETY NEWS: Now the agenda driven groups have reached a stage whereby they are turning on each other, like an ouroboros pattern we have covered so much. It is all collapsing from within on many levels. It seems that the LGBTQ+ civil war is gaining momentum as the rise of conservative Lesbians, Gays and Bisexual people are quite apparent. Furthermore, the movement seems to be popular among other conservatives in America. The leftists woke individuals have made themselves push out the very people that were with them in the beginning. Recently, a conservative congressman made statements that it is necessary for the LGB to split from the TQ+ group. According to the LGBTQ Nation, congressman George Santos, the sole openly LGBTQ+ Republican in Congress, recently shares a proposal idea for a separation within the LGBTQ+ community, calling for a divorce between the LGB and TQIA+ people,. He claims that they have different social issues. Santos, who has shown support for anti-transgender laws and ridicules trans women for their appearance, believes that such a division would benefit the trans community. He states that it is time for everyone to realize the need for this separation. It appears that the new feminist movements are joining forces with the members of the LGB community. They claim that the TQ+ community's goal is to erase women in society and for the acceptance of pedophilia. Furthermore, the popular rhetoric among many Americans is that we should not coerce children into thinking that they are another gender. Just as we forecasted, the whole thing was a full-on divide and conquer agenda, just like Black Lives Matter and that is falling apart as well. Of course it can be seen as an attack on women, but an attack on one gender is a full on attack on both. When will people see through the duality illusion game? We need each other in harmonic balance, now more than ever. Just after this report, whether connected or not, Santos was arrested on 13 fraud and corruption charges.

Just when you thought Israel couldn't do anymore to create further division, up they pop again with their divisive and maniacal thinking patterns. Two influential members of Israel's Knesset have introduced a bill to outlaw teaching the Gospel of Jesus Christ in Israel and sentence violators to prison. So, it is follow our racist law not religion or go to jail, how nice and fair of them! Israel already bans Christians from proselytizing minors, but this new bill will go even further and ban any and all efforts to tell people about Jesus. Is it possible that the Israeli government this year could pass legislation making it illegal for people to share the Gospel message in the very land where Jesus was born, raised, preached, died, buried and rose from the dead? Unfortunately, yes. The great question is, which Jesus are they referring to? The proposed legislation would outlaw all efforts by people of one faith who, in any way, want to discuss or try to persuade people of other faiths to consider changing their current religious beliefs. The punishment for doing so would be one-year imprisonment. If the conversation is with someone under the age of 18, the punishment would be two years imprisonment. This bill would apply to people having spiritual conversations with Israelis of any religion. However, in their official explanation of the bill, the two Israeli legislators specifically emphasized the warning to stop Christians, in particular. Just like they have always done in their world, in our world it is an attack on the whites again. Only now it is more in the open. It would also make it illegal for someone who solicits a person, directly, digitally, by mail or online, in order to convert his religion. Thus, producing and publishing online videos explaining the Gospel to Jewish or Muslim people in Israel, and to those of any other religious faiths, would suddenly become illegal. Publishing books, other printed literature, online articles, podcasts, or other forms of media that explains the life and ministry of Jesus and his message found in the New Testament would also become illegal. Maybe the Christians will finally see through the illusion and stupidity of celebrating and supporting the fake state and fake biblical place known as Israel.

This is a limited summary of the guidelines issued by the World Health Organization and the United Nations to educational authorities worldwide. As a shocking report reveals worldwide agenda to normalize pedophilia through kindergartens and elementary schools. It is stated in the documents that; little children are sexual beings who must have sexual partners and begin with sex as soon as possible. Having sex is a human right regardless of age. For this reason, kindergartens and elementary schools must teach children to develop lust and sexual desire, learn masturbation, build homosexual relationships, use online pornography and learn different sexual techniques such as oral sex. Meanwhile, international judicial organizations are issuing statements that sex between little children and adults should be legalized, while media outlets are calling for the acceptance of pedophilia as a normal sexual orientation. Evidence report will be revealed on May 6th at StopWorldControl dot com In the past months they have been working intensely on an in depth evidence report, that reveals how the World Health Organization and United Nations are pushing the agenda of normalizing pedophilia, through kindergartens and elementary schools in every nation of the world. Besides an overwhelming amount of evidence, including many documents of the WHO, UN, the report also includes videos of parents crying out to the world, about what is happening in their schools. As a result of these international guidelines, it is being reported that toddlers are masturbating one another in class, they're playing oral sexual games, naked transgender adults are parading in front of them, girls receive 3D clitorises to help them start with masturbation, kids are encouraged to have homosexual relationships and a whole lot more. Prominent pedophilia organizations: In order to execute this agenda worldwide, the WHO and UN have partnered with an organization that has been at the forefront of promoting pedophilia for the past decades. This organization collaborates with foundations that own vast collections of child pornography, and whose founders have been arrested for child molestation. They published magazines calling for the destruction of the natural family, while promoting the mission of pedophiles to liberate children from the prison of families. The WHO and UN handpicked the world's most prominent pedophilia clubs to create school programs for extreme sexualization of all the children of the world. All historic references, archives, publications and connections are revealed. The full report will be out on May 6th at StopWorldControl dot com I hope they deliver the report as promised and it is not some click bait program running again. More and more of these clown organizations are being exposed now, their end is unfolding rapidly.

EXPOSE: Part 1 To show the clowns are not very original with their plans and ideas, this piece exposes it and them fully, in a desperate attempt to stem the tide against them. But, guess what? It's not working, for them. Klaus Schwab, the architect of the World Economic Forum (f.1971), a leading, if not the leading, influencer and funder for what will set the course for world economic policy outside of government. That is not a new idea by any means, as all governments which are not actually governments to begin with, which are ran by EL-ite flavored CEO's and Private Contractors groups. It has been the cause of much concern and suspicion since his announcement of The Great Reset agenda at the 50th annual meeting of the WEF in June 2020. The Great Reset initiative is a somewhat vague call for the need for global stakeholders to coordinate a simultaneous management of the effects of Covid-19 on the global economy, which they have eerily named as pandenomics. Or the demonic's of Pan? The great return of Set is what they were planning, that has failed as well. This, we are told will be the new normal, the new reality that we will have to adjust ourselves to for the foreseeable future. The new normal? Normal is a control structure itself and is hardly new, is it? The new reality? That made me laugh out loud, most people haven't defined the old reality yet never mind the new. What they are looking for is, to change the boundaries of reality and call it new, but again it's not new is it? It is just rehashed bullshittery. It should be known that at nearly its inception, the World Economic Forum had aligned itself with the Club of Rome, a think tank with an elite membership, founded in 1968, to address the problems of mankind. Or, perhaps it is the Club of Rome with a fancy made up new title? It was concluded by the Club of Rome in their extremely influential Limits to Growth, published in 1972, that such problems could not be solved on their own terms and that all were interrelated. In 1991, Club of Rome co-founder Sir Alexander King stated in the The First Global Revolution, which was an assessment of the first 30 years of the Club of Rome that: In searching for a common enemy against whom we can unite, we came up with the idea that pollution, the threat of global warming, water shortages, famine and the like, would fit the bill. Clowns, think tanks, money and power EL-ites always need a common enemy, a boogeyman to create their shekel making war machines and subsidiaries thereof. It is what makes their world go round in an anti-clockwise motion, which is harvesting in overview. What they just admitted is, they created the lie of global warming and environmental change, just to keep people divided. The author said: In their totality and their interactions these phenomena do constitute a common threat which must be confronted by everyone together. But in designating these dangers as the enemy, we fall into the trap, namely mistaking symptoms for causes. All these dangers are caused by human intervention in natural processes, and it is only through changed attitudes and behavior that they can be overcome. I guess the author overlooked the fact they made it all up, just to create a new normal and reality. This is the problem with too many so called awake, they don't look deep enough, nor will they accept certain levels of evil and just dismiss it or go along with the bs'ery. Like this line that followed: The real enemy then is humanity itself. But then perhaps the author didn't define human either. It is no surprise that with such a conclusion, part of the solution prescribed was the need for population control. However, what forms of population control was Klaus Schwab in particular thinking of? In the late 1960s, Schwab attended Harvard and among his teachers was Sir Henry Kissinger, whom he has described as among the top figures who have most influenced his thinking over the course of his life. Harvard is a breeding ground for psychopaths, like Yale and Stanford. Kissinger is a Jewish snake. To get a better idea of the kinds of influences Sir Henry Kissinger had on young Klaus Schwab, a look at Kissinger's infamous NSSM-200 report: Implications of Worldwide Population Growth for US Security and Overseas Interests, otherwise known as The Kissinger Report, published in 1974. This report, declassified in 1989, was instrumental in transforming US foreign policy from pro-development/pro-industry to the promotion of under-development through totalitarian methods in support of population control. But that is the effect of the policy and people all followed it like sheep. The cause was to bring down America, and they all missed it! No development and no industry leads to the country collapsing. Population control was the forward hand, destroying America the hidden hand. Kissinger states in the report: if future numbers are to be kept within reasonable bounds, it is urgent that measures to reduce fertility be started and made effective in the 1970s and 1980s. It was made effective long before then, as our book and series reveals. This is the planned parenthood groups, they are not service to the people, they are drivers of marketing babies and various other horrific schemes, that goes back to the early 1900's and the Sanger woman. Financial assistance will be given to other countries, considering such factors as population growth. Food and agricultural assistance is vital for any population sensitive development strategy. Allocation of scarce resources should take account of what steps a country is taking in population control. There is an alternative view that mandatory programs may be needed. Again, this is nothing new, just repackaged and reconstituted programs from the past. For Kissinger, the US foreign policy orientation was mistaken on its emphasis of ending hunger by providing the means of industrial and scientific development to poor nations, according to Kissinger, such an initiative would only lead to further global disequilibrium as the new middle classes would consume more and waste strategic resources. Ouroboros programs again, less people, less money and less future growth, that is not going to work for the shekel makers is it? Hence the rival factions working against each other, all of which benefits us. Do you think the overpopulation narrative started in the last century? Try 3 centuries back with this piece. In Thomas Malthus' Essay on the Principle of Population (1799), he wrote:

We should facilitate, instead of foolishly and vainly endeavoring to impede, the operations of nature in producing this mortality; and if we dread the too frequent visitation of the horrid form of famine, we should sedulously encourage the other forms of destruction, which we compel nature to use. In our towns we should make the streets narrower, crowd more people into the houses and court the return of the plague. Court a return of the plague? All of which reveals they initiated to begin with, like I have said, there is nothing new about anything they are doing. It's repeat and loop programs over and over again, because the masses ignore it or miss it completely. They openly speak about depopulating and the masses sit there like cattle at an abattoir. It defies belief, but that only happens to someone else they think, what happens when there is no someone else's left? As a staunch Malthusian, Kissinger believed that nature had provided the means to cull the herd, and by using economic policies that utilized the courting of the plague, famine and so forth, they were simply enforcing a natural hierarchy which was required for global stability. How very godlike they were being, talking of deleting people and countries, just like an Abraxan. The arrogance of these Jewish EL-ites never ceases to amaze me, acting like not only they own the planet and its people, but Source as well. In addition to this extremely worrisome ideology that is only a stone's throw away from eugenics, said the author who missed the point, it is eugenics, not close to, it is. How can people not see it? There has also been a great deal of disturbance over the 2016 World Economic Forum video that goes through their 8 predictions, for how the world will change by 2030, with the slogan You'll own nothing, and you'll be happy. It is this slogan in particular that has probably caused the most panic amongst the average person questioning what the outcome of the Great Reset will truly look like. But the average person doesn't own anything, as they have been priced out of homes and cars, so to them, they think well it doesn't apply to us, as we don't own anything. That's wrong thinking again, what happens when they come for the people using a new slogan; because you own nothing, you cannot be happy and so we have to delete you on our "new" euthanasia machine? Euthanasia or youth in Asia? It has also caused much confusion as to who or what is at the root in shaping this very eerie, Orwellian prediction of the future? Many have come to think that this root is the Communist Party of China. I cannot believe an awake person wrote that line, seriously and these people think they are the alternative media? However, whatever your thoughts may be on the Chinese government and the intentions of President Xi, the roots of the Great Reset agenda can very clearly be traced back to 80 years ago. When an American, former Trotskyist who later joined the OSS, followed by the CIA, and went on to become the founding father of neo-conservatism. James Burnham, wrote a book on his vision for The Managerial Revolution. In fact, it was the ideologies of Burnham's The Managerial Revolution that triggered Orwell to write his 1984. The Strange Case and Many Faces of James Burnham: It is said that James Burnham is the real intellectual founder of the neoconservative movement and the original proselytizer, in America of the theory of totalitarianism. Total it, the Aryans that means. Christopher Hitchens, For the Sake of Argument: Essay and Minority Reports. It is understandably the source of some confusion as to how a former high level Trotskyist became the founder of the neo-conservative movement; with the Trotskyists calling him a traitor to his kind, and the neo-conservatives describing it as an almost road to Damascus conversion in ideology. However, the truth of the matter is that it is neither. That is, James Burnham never changed his beliefs and convictions at any point during his journey through Trotskyism, OSS/CIA intelligence to neo-conservatism, although he may have backstabbed many along the way. Classic agency and corporate tactics that, of stabbing or trampling upon your own work colleagues. James Burnham was born in 1905 in Chicago, Illinois, raised as a Roman Catholic, later rejecting Catholicism while studying at Princeton and professing atheism for the rest of his life until shortly before his death whereby he reportedly returned to the church. I guess he had enough of playing god himself, and needed a favor from the praying god to save him and so he returned like a mercenary. He would graduate from Princeton followed by the Balliol College, Oxford University and in 1929 would become a professor in philosophy at the New York University. It was during this period that Burnham met Sidney Hook, who was also a professor in philosophy at the New York University, and who professed to have converted Burnham to Marxism in his autobiography. In 1933, along with Sidney Hook, Burnham helped to organize the socialist organization, the American Workers Party (AWP). It will come with no surprise that Sidney Hook was born in New York and born to Jewish parents. It would not be long before Burnham found Trotsky's use of dialectical materialism, to explain the interplay between the human and the historical forces in his History of the Russian Revolution to be brilliant. After mentioning China, we should have known the next boogeyman in the piece would be Russian. As founder of the Red Army, Trotsky had dedicated his life to the spread of a worldwide Communist revolution, to which Stalin opposed in the form of Trotsky's Permanent Revolution ideology. In this ideology, Trotskyists were tactically trained to be militant experts at infighting, infiltration and disruption. All of which sounds like the 5 Eyes group does it not? All of which is an overall scheme to find out which agent will go the darkest and furthest to fulfill their missions or goals. It is the dark descent of which there is no coming back for most of them. It is just leverage and blackmail to ad nauseum. Among these tactics was entryism, in which an organization encourages its members to join another, often larger organization, in an attempt to take over said organization or convert a large portion of its membership with its own ideology and directive. Just like the CIA courting the FBI, so much so they are technically one and the same now. The most well-known example of this technique was named the French Turn, when French Trotskyists in 1934 infiltrated the Section Francaise de l'Internationale Ouvriere (SFIO, French Socialist Party) with the intention of winning over the more militant elements to their side. That same year, Trotskyists in the Communist League of America (CLA) did a French turn on the American Workers Party, in a move that elevated the AWP's James Burnham into the role of a Trotsky lieutenant and chief adviser. Burnham would continue the tactics of infiltrating and subverting other leftist parties and in 1935 attempted to do a French Turn on the much larger Socialist Party (SP), however, by 1937, the Trotskyists were expelled from the Socialist Party which led to the formation of the Socialist Workers Party (SWP) at the end of the year. He would resign from the SWP in April 1940, and form the Workers Party only to resign less than two months later. As you can see, nothing is new in their world or thinking, just parroting bots repeating all and sundry. The only difference now is, A: their repeat plans are not working too well or B: not at all and C: backfiring. Part 2 of this piece in the next show.

MYSTERY SECTION: Another science piece that has crept out recently long after we exposed it on our show. But what it shows is, the news and the revealing's of it, is now becoming much more open and that can only be a good thing. We will see a lot more truthful news being reported in the near and far future as the dark clouds of lies are now falling apart everywhere. Plus the media are losing people by the week now as well. The reports says: It feels like there have been staggering science stories emerging every other day recently, all of which have blown our tiny little minds. First, there was the discovery of a terrifying black hole pointing right at us, then there was a huge hole found in the sun and a missing continent found after going missing for 375 years. Now, people are only just realizing that there's a massive ocean hidden under the Earth's crust. It turns out there's a huge supply of water 400 miles underground stored in rock known as ringwoodite. Scientists previously discovered that water is stored inside mantle rock in a sponge-like state, which isn't a liquid, solid or a gas, but instead a fourth state. The scientific paper titled Dehydration melting at the top of the lower mantle was published in 2014 and laid out the findings. The ringwoodite is like a sponge, soaking up water, there is something very special about the crystal structure of ringwoodite that allows it to attract hydrogen and trap water. This mineral can contain a lot of water under conditions of the deep mantle, added Jacobsen, who was part of the team behind the discovery. He added: I think we are finally seeing evidence for a whole-Earth water cycle, which may help explain the vast amount of liquid water on the surface of our habitable planet. Scientists have been looking for this missing deep water for decades. No they haven't and that is the point. Scientists made the findings at the time after studying earthquakes and discovering that seismometers were picking up shockwaves under the surface of the Earth. From that, they were able to establish that the water was being held in the rock known as ringwoodite. If the rock contained just 1 per cent water, it would mean that there is three times more water under the surface of the Earth than there is in the oceans on the surface. Indeed there is, as above so below applies again. This in part is part of the journey of discovery the old control system operates. Oh look what we found, yeah right, they knew about it years ago and kept it a secret. Wait until they "find" the metropolis under the Saharan desert. All the, have ET's visited here before questions will disappear. I suspect it is another crystalline city like in Antarctica.

Let's take a closer look at one or two of the chakras, shall we? Oh no he is about to ruin something else is the cry, indeed. Another of the lower chakra names is the term Sacrum. Sacrum: A triangular bone made up of five fused vertebrae and forming the posterior section of the pelvis. New Latin, from Late Latin (os)sacrum meaning sacred bone, sacrum translation of Greek hieron osteon, the sacred bone. It is called that from the use of the sacrum and coccyx of sacrificed animals in divination, neuter of Latin sacer, or sacred or holy. Oh dear, yet more sacrifice and is the sacred bone referring to the phallic symbolism again? Sacrum is a form of the Latin adjective sacer meaning holy, which is also the source of a number of other English words like sacred, sacrifice, and sacrilege. So sacred and in essence holy means to sacrifice. Well I never, that explains a whole lot now doesn't it?

The solar plexus, a curious name that, and yet we just accepted it without deeper investigation. Why use the word solar, as in related to the sun? Why would your stomach or gut region be sun related? Filled with bacteria's and many other maladies of colonic intentions. But what is plexus? What does that mean? What does it signify? A plexus is a network of nerves or vessels in the body. In neuroanatomy, a plexus comes from the Latin term for braid, which is a branching network of vessels or nerves. The vessels may be blood vessels like veins or capillaries, or lymphatic vessels. The nerves are typically axons outside the central nervous system. So, it is all about the nerves and the flow of the vessels, which is another shipping term it should be noted. Plexus means braid, but what is a braid? Braid the verb means; plait, knit, weave, twist together, c.1200. Breidan, from Old English bregdan meaning move quickly, pull, shake, swing, throw (in wrestling), draw (a sword); bend, weave, knit, join together; change color, vary; scheme, feign, pretend. Quite a varied description again and very open to interpretation. Twist together symbolizes bind again, throw and draw is violence, then there is the last three of scheme, feign or pretend, all of which has devious intentions. But perhaps braid the noun symbolizes the intentions behind the word more? c.1200, a deceit, stratagem, trick. c.1300, sudden or quick movement, in part from stem found in Old English gebrægd a craft, fraud or commotion. In Old Norse bragð a deed or trick, and in part from or influenced by related braid (v.) meaning anything plaited or entwined. Now it is beginning to take another meaning is it not? fraud, trick, deceit from a sudden movement. The sudden movement is the mistranslations and spell casting. All of which becomes very complex for us. A Plex is defined as made up of a number of parts. Is plex us saying we are made up of a number of parts? After the Cosmic Genetics series in most cases the answer is yes. A building, as a condominium or a film theater, consisting of a specified number of units or sections. It also means a figure of a given power. Who has that power and why was it given? So, the etymological meaning behind solar plexus is, the sun was a fraud, trickster, deceitful and also binding. All very Ra that and his band of off and on world cultists. Is it a case of them telling us what they have done again? All carefully hidden in words and the meanings? Of course mind memes always tells you to go with your gut, is that an affirmation of the fake solar entity? When people should not be going with their gut at all, and go with their heart, which is where the real solar is residing. What this reveals is on a wider scale, is the solar plexus from below becomes the barrier to the heart. Then you have the barrier of the two hemispheres and the throat chakra blocking you from above, which again prevents you operating from the heart. What a coincidence that is, now you know the solution, will you endeavor to change it? This plays out on the merkaba level as well, as level 3 was blocked, which is Earth. And near the crown of the merkaba with the Eye of Yahweh. All of which restricted the flow and braided the whole merkaba with deception and bindings. The merkaba is the twelve version when it should be 12+1. On the 7 based chakras level, which corresponds with the 7 soul development levels, the third level is the gut and the astral. Is that a dot connector as well? Because the 4th level is the heart and the first mental plane.

We did a piece recently on Greenwich mean time, or is it the green witch who is mean in time? This adds more to it and is connected in ways to the January common sense presentation. In geography and geodesy, a meridian is the locus connecting points of equal longitude, which is the angle in degrees or other units, east or west of a given prime meridian, currently, the IERS Reference Meridian. In other words, it is a line of longitude. The position of a point along the meridian is given by that longitude and its latitude, measured in angular degrees north or south of the Equator. On a Mercator projection or on a Gall-Peters projection, each meridian is perpendicular to all circles of latitude. A meridian is half of a great circle on Earth's surface. The first prime meridian was set by Eratosthenes in 200 BCE. This prime meridian was used to provide measurement of the earth, but had many problems because of the lack of latitude measurement. The term meridian comes from the Latin meridies, meaning midday; the subsolar point passes through a given meridian at solar noon, midway between the times of sunrise and sunset on that meridian. Likewise, the Sun crosses the celestial meridian at the same time. The same Latin stem gives rise to the terms a.m. (ante meridiem) and p.m. (post meridiem) used to disambiguate hours of the day when utilizing the 12-hour clock. Because of a growing international economy, there was a demand for a set international prime meridian to make it easier for worldwide traveling which would, in turn, enhance international trading across countries. So time and meridians were yet again all about the shekels. As a result, a Conference was held in 1884, in Washington, D.C. Twenty-six countries were present at the International Meridian Conference to vote on an international prime meridian. Ultimately the outcome was as follows: there would only be a single meridian, the meridian was to cross and pass at Greenwich (which was the  $0^\circ$ ), there would be two longitude direction up to  $180^\circ$  (east being plus and west being minus), there will be a universal day, and the day begins at the mean midnight of the initial meridian. There were two main reasons for this. The first was that the USA had already chosen Greenwich as the basis for its own national time zone system. The second was that in the late 19th century, 72% of the world's commerce depended on sea-charts which used Greenwich as the Prime Meridian. The recommendation was based on the argument that naming Greenwich as Longitude  $0^\circ$  would be of advantage to the largest number of people. Toward the ending of the 12th century there were two main locations that were acknowledged as the geographic location of the meridian, France and Britain. The French version is the Rose Line. These two locations often conflicted and a settlement was reached only after there was an International Meridian Conference held, in which Greenwich was recognized as the  $0^\circ$  location. A civil day- begins at midnight and ends at the midnight following. An astronomical day- begins at noon of civil day and continue until following noon, and nautical day- concludes at noon of civil day, starting at preceding noon. The magnetic meridian is an equivalent imaginary line, connecting the magnetic south and north poles and can be taken as the horizontal component of magnetic force lines along the surface of the earth. Therefore, a compass needle will be parallel to the magnetic meridian. However, a compass needle will not be steady in the magnetic meridian, because of the longitude from east to west being complete geodesic. A geodesic is a curve representing in some sense the shortest path or arc between two points on a surface. The angle between the magnetic and the true meridian is the magnetic declination, which is relevant for navigating with a compass. Navigators were able to use the azimuth, the horizontal angle or direction of a compass bearing of the rising and setting Sun to measure the magnetic variation, the difference between magnetic and true north. But what is true north? Isn't it dependent upon your perspective? How was north and south determined? From which vantage point? And by whom? What if south is actually north and vice versa? What if east is west and vice versa? It all depends on the viewing point and perspective. In September 2019 for the first time in 360 years, the true north and magnetic north aligned in Greenwich. The 360 figure is interesting in relation to the presentations done by Kevin. Let's look at the word compass, is it come pass? Compass (n.) c.1300, space, area, extent, circumference, from Old French compas meaning circle, radius; size, extent; to go around, measure (with a compass); divide equally. To go around is a key component. The word is in most European languages, with a mathematical sense in Romance, a nautical sense in Germanic, and both in English. In Middle English it also could mean ingenuity, subtlety, cunning. Also, an adverb in Middle English: to go compass was go in a circle, go around. Go around what? Compass (v.) c.1300, to devise, plan; early 14c.as to surround, contain, envelop, enclose; To surround, contain, envelop, enclose what we may well all ask? The True meridian: The true meridian is the chord that goes from one pole to the other, passing through the observer, and is contrasted with the magnetic meridian, which goes through the magnetic poles and the observer. Chord is spelt in a musical way with an H rather than a bind or connection. The true meridian can be found by careful astronomical observations, and the magnetic meridian is simply parallel to the compass needle. The arithmetic difference between the true and magnetic meridian is called the magnetic declination, which is important for the calibration of compasses. The question remains as to why the true and magnetic differences are different? What is the declination for? Declination (n.) late 14c., in astronomy, distance of a heavenly body from the celestial equator, measured on a great circle passing through the body and the celestial pole. Which heavenly body are they referring to? Passing through the body and the pole? Henry D. Thoreau classified this true meridian versus the magnetic meridian in order to have a more qualitative, intuitive and abstract function. Why abstract? When it is stated as the true meridian? He used the true meridian since his compass varied by a few degrees, there were some variations. When he noted the sight line for the True Meridian from his family's house to the depot, he could check the declination of his compass before and after surveying throughout the day. He noted this variation down. Why the variations? What is causing them? Is it the wobble they describe? Question is; is it the Earth wobble or the Earth spiral? Is the magnetic meridian a clue as to why there are variations? Is the magnetic variety the veil or worse in the past the LPIN and APINS we discussed in the Cosmic Genetics series. LPIN and APIN a network it said, but what network is or will be the key. The Meridian passage: The meridian passage is the moment when a celestial object passes the meridian of longitude of the observer. At this point, the celestial object is at its highest point. When the sun passes two times an altitude while rising and setting can be averaged to give the time of meridian passage. Navigators utilized the sun's declination and the sun's altitude at local meridian passage, in order to calculate their latitude with the formula.  $\text{Latitude} = (90^\circ - \text{noon altitude} + \text{declination})$  The declination of major stars are their angles north and south from the celestial equator. It is important to note that the meridian passage will not occur exactly at 12 hours because of the inclination of the earth. The meridian passage can occur within a few minutes of variation. The great question then is; with the inclination and declination plus the variations, how can time or the poles be accurate? Standard meridian: A standard meridian is a meridian used for determining standard time. For instance, the 30th meridian east (UTC+02:00) is the standard meridian for Eastern European Time. Since the adoption of time zones, as opposed to local mean time or solar time, in the late 19th century and early 20th century, most countries have adopted the standard time of one of the 24 meridians closest to their geographical position, as decided by the International Meridian Conference in 1884. Although, a few time zones are offset by an additional 30 or 45 minutes, such as in the Chatham Islands, South Australia and Nepal. Measurement of Earth rotation: Many of these instruments rely on the ability to measure the longitude and latitude of the earth. These instruments also were typically affected by local gravity, which paired well with existing technologies such as the magnetic meridian. The terms Parallels and Meridians are often found in the context of geography and science. The world map we use is marked with countries, continents, and oceans, but have you ever wondered about the different lines that run across the map? These lines, known as parallels and meridians, help us to figure out the exact dimension and direction of a location. Parallels run from east to west and never intersect with each other whereas meridians run from north to south and intersect at the north and south poles. This is the key difference between parallels and meridians. What are Parallels? The imaginary lines that run from east to west connecting all locations on a map are known as parallels or latitudes. Given we have spoken of the parallel world's or Matrices, perhaps the description of such makes things clearer? parallel (adj.) 1540s, in geometry, of lines, lying in the same plane but never meeting, however far extended; in either direction; of planes, never meeting, from para allēlois beside one another. The parallel universe or world but it says; never meeting however far extended, but also beside one another. Which means no interaction, unless they created conduits of thought to get us to manifest it into existence in our reality. Either way, that no longer applies to us.

ENDING PIECE: An interesting piece was posted by one of our members that I thought would be a useful addition to our show, with points added by me. It was about a book called Look with Both Eyes by Caitlin Johnstone. Caitlin mentioned about a philosopher named Ken Wilber is asked about the plight of our world and how the struggles of our species relate to the enlightened perspective, or big mind. I'm still not terribly familiar with Wilber's work, but in the clip, he addressed the paradoxical relationship between (A) spiritual enlightenment as a realization of perfect peace and (B) the heartbreaking compassion that expansion of consciousness brings in for the suffering of all beings in our world. He does this with a very simple phrase: he says that as you awaken, that suffering hurts more, but it bothers you less. The reason for that is, the empathic side of you is kicking into gear. He said that awakening brings in an awareness of both the absolute perspective from which the world is seen as an illusion, with no ultimate reality wherein, no imperfection could possibly exist and the relative perspective in which the suffering or happiness of others matters deeply to you. That is explaining observing and absorbing, and the ultimate in truth of the overview perspective. Wilber says of this paradox; I don't know anyone who has simply resolved that and I don't think you're supposed to. I think the people that do are just playing on one side or the other side of that street. In general, that is correct, but in overview I disagree with that statement, as in overview there are no two sides of the street. Overview brings a different perspective, there are no sides, just the all. Wilber said; We have to give ourselves plenty of room to both feel absolute perfection in everything that's arising, and yet see one person starving and you will start crying so hard it will kill you. If you're not doing both, you're doing something wrong. The sentiment I agree with, the extremes I don't. Whilst we all have empathy with people starving as stated, which is the effect, but in overview what is the cause? We have often seen homeless on our streets, too many are starving because they are feeding their addictions. I worked in social services, I watched parents not feed their children, yet light up pot joints. So, things are not as black and white as portrayed. Caitlin says; It seems likely to me that anyone who has sincerely dedicated themselves to expanding their awareness both inwardly and outwardly, will eventually find themselves resonating with these hurts more, bothers you less perspective. As your awareness of your own inner processes expands, you become liberated from the delusions which used to pull your strings and make you suffer from behind the shadows of the unconscious, as your awareness expands outwardly the profound suffering and cruelty in our world will bring you howling to your knees. This is why I think it's so important for those who are sincerely dedicated to truth to work on expanding consciousness both outwardly and inwardly. If you only expand it inwardly you wind up a masturbatory navel-gazing bliss bunny whose life is a half-truth at best, and if you only expand it outwardly, you'll be quickly overwhelmed and embittered by the misery of it all. In the spiritual circles I used to move in people were mostly in the former camp, and in the political circles I move in now people are very often in the latter. This is the classic duality choices piece, you are either doing or being one or the other, but where is the middle? The balance? The triality? Caitlyn says; The best way to live a life based in truth, absolutely, and the best way to be of use to the world, is to expand consciousness both inwardly and outwardly. But what is missed here is, expanding your consciousness inwardly, does create an outward flow. But people wish to see and feel the external, just like the religious. People often feel they have to be seen doing something, that is external gratification seeking. When people reach a certain stage of development you don't have to be seen, you just be and your frequency will do the rest. Caitlyn says; Deeply investigate your own consciousness, divest yourself of the misperceptions and erroneous assumptions around thought, perceiving and selfhood which are driving your behavior, and discover your true nature. Also, learn everything you can about what's going on in the world, how people are being subjected to needless suffering by abusive systems, how power is really structured, what the mechanics of our civilization's dysfunctions are, and where some possible solutions might lie. Do both of these things. I agree. If you can do both, if you can really open both eyes, then you've made yourself a very useful weapon against the machine, because you can see all the dysfunction and attack it effectively without being swept away in it. This is what I was getting at in the introduction to a book I published some years ago: This book is for the ones who look with both eyes. It is not for the right-eye lookers, who hide away from the pain of the world using comforting ideas and philosophical positions and spiritual concepts. Who lean back smugly knowing better while the earth screams, while men in suits with cannibal brains pave over the forests and coat everything in oil. The right-eye lookers have killed off that part of themselves which feels, which cannot look away, which brings them trembling to their knees at the wet-faced beauty of each instant, and the wailing of the ocean angels and the tears of the indigenous. They deftly slip the punches that life throws at their head as it screams, Look at me! Feel me! Why did you even come here? They have traded the aliveness of their lives to avoid the intensity of living. This book is not for the right-eye lookers. This book is for the ones who look with both eyes. It is not for the left-eye lookers, who behold the flying robots raining fire upon children, who hear the cries of the mother clutching bloody shreds of nothing. Who feel the dying gasps of the white deer dream guides and stand there transfixed by the horror of it all until they can hardly see for all the tears. In my opinion the tears are just an externalization of the internal emotions. It is ok to cry, to be upset but it is more important to focus your energy and working to correct the injustices of this world. The number one reason of why I do this role is; injustice. I will fight the dark this lifetime and beyond to correct and make people or beings see, there is a better way of living and thriving. The left-eye lookers lean into each instant, but the pain consumes them, takes them over, controls them, becomes them. They build a temple to despondency and begin worshipping strange gods. Their world has gone gray and their angels are caged, they say it's no good going on. We are headed toward doom and so much the better, for we are all made of poison. They do not avoid life and its suffering withers them. This book is not for the left-eye lookers. This book is for the ones who look with both eyes. It is for the ones who see the bombs and the bastards, and stand shaking with the breath of the beast on their skin. When you look with both eyes, you feel it all, but you don't flee or freeze, you fight. You swing your sword with both hands, tears pouring from both eyes. When they try to drive you back, you advance. That last line is how I have lived my life since the age of 29. No matter what life throws at you, wrongs, betrayals, injustice or stupidity, keep going and keep advancing you. You don't or should never fight those that harm or wrong you, that is their lessons, not yours. You advancing bothers those types of people more, than engaging them in discourse or worse violence. This book is for the ones who see what is happening, how strong the beast is, how pervasive its grasp, how merciless its mission, and say fuck it and draw their sword. Not sure how old the book is, but one beast is dying at a rapid pace, the other beast is dead. For the weeping warriors, for the savage saints, for the bleeding mothers with fire in their eyes, for the hidden mystics whose prayers keep the earth spinning. For the buddhas who'll use their teeth when their blades are broken and let their evolutionary ancestors howl through them, this one is for you, my lovelies. If enough of us can learn to look with both eyes, with both the absolute and the relative perspectives, with both inner and outer consciousness, the bastards will stand no chance. There will be nothing they can do to stop the end of their rule or thwart the creation of a healthy world. Perhaps the title of the book could be changed to, look with 3 eyes, not two. Look at life through the triality not the duality. Stop being just the one, become the two and then go onto the trinity together of, one on one with the one.

In a week where a clown was coronated they say, a far more important and major appointment was made by the people that will have far reaching effects, in particular for the females and their energies. The energies may well leave you feeling disconnected from this density, out of body for periods of extended time, feeling ultra-light headed and an inner purging. Embrace and integrate those higher energies, become them, be them and spread them. Balance is restored and all should have felt it. True balance supersedes crowns, inner knowing supersedes pageantry, inner knowing also replaces external questions. The divine masculine and feminine supersedes kings and queens, indeed all titles. Divinity, stand in it, stand of it and become it. Divine (adj.) late 14c., pertaining to, of the nature of, or proceeding from God or Source.
