

THI-SHOW TRANSCRIPT 2023-08-24

NEWS: Former President Donald Trump released a message to Americans that warns them about the power and corruption inside the US government. Oh really, no shit Sherlock. I am now going to Washington, D.C., to be arrested for having challenged a corrupt, rigged, & stolen election. It is a great honor, because I am being arrested for you. (M) seriously Mr. Trump or whoever is operating as your double, we know your ego is off the charts but that is almost a Jesus level of savior programming. He now faces 78 felony charges in total. He mentioned the filth and decay of the city in which he was once commander-in-chief, he added: this is not the place that I left. Oh but it is Mr. Trump. This is the same guy that pushed the Jewish based Black Rock into orbit, who then went onto extracting more American's wealth. I am being arrested for your benefit? Turn it in, you should have been arrested for jabbing every American with fake vaccines, never mind the shady deals you and Kushner got up to.

Amongst the several stories on the MSM that I find not as interesting these days, as the levels of theater has gone through the roof. Fires everywhere, hurricanes in California, perhaps it should be noted where the fires are taking place? Is there a connection like the volcanoes and earthquakes? But this story pretty much reveals all about what THI has said. As the Trump entourage approach the social media platform Gab about joining. His team gave conditions to the platform before agreeing to joining. They were stop the criticizing of Israel and Jews and censor it on their platform. Gab refused and Rumble agreed. The outcry in the alt media was, that Rumble was somehow better than Youtube, less censorship etc. The reality is, money talks and until we get our own platforms and operate in a better way, then can any platform on their networks be truly beneficial to us? Including Mewe. Dropping Facebook has symbolic meaning, but I was under no illusion that Mewe was entirely different. Mewe has worked for us in what was required at the time, but ultimately we need to move away from rich guys platforms. Part of the problem is, mind memery and advertising and how quickly the sheep go from the frying pan into the fire. All under the illusion the new one will be better, time tells you they are not. As for the Trump revelation, that is no surprise to our members. His financial sidekick during his presidency asked me a number of times to stop criticizing or labeling Jews or Israel, the answer was – no. I told her the answer is for them to stop harming the people, then I would have no stories or opinions to write on. Remember, Trump did Jewish rituals in the White House.

Here is what Trump and the Trustee created during office. This is another exposure all in their own words again. An employee of the asset management giant was filmed running from Project Veritas founder James O'Keefe, after certain details were revealed about Ukraine. BlackRock wants the conflict in Ukraine to continue as long as possible because it is good for business, a recruiter for the asset management giant told an undercover reporter with Project Veritas successor, O'Keefe Media Group. War is really f****ing good for business, said Serge Varlay, whose since has deleted his LinkedIn profile that described him as a technology recruiter at BlackRock, told the reporter. He outlined a scenario in which an investor could profit off a surge in wheat prices triggered by the bombing of Ukrainian wheat silos, explaining volatility creates opportunity to make profit before editorializing, it's exciting when s**** goes wrong, right? We don't want the conflict to end, as a country, the longer this goes on, the weaker Russia is. Varlay also boasted about his employer's control of the political system. It's not who the president is, it's who's controlling the wallet of the president, he declared, clarifying that it was the hedge funds, BlackRock, the banks who run the world. All these financial institutions buy politicians. You can take this big f***ton of money and then you can start to buy people, he said, explaining that senators were f***ing cheap, you got 10 grand you can buy a senator. The US government also needs BlackRock to run its financial simulations, he said. Admitting BlackRock does not want to be on the radar, Varlay suggested that; It's easier to do things when people aren't thinking about it. He appeared briefly suspicious of the reporter's motives: you're like an undercover reporter, he said, arguing normal people were uninterested in her lines of questioning, but continued to boast about his role in deciding people's fates. After he was confronted in a New York Cafe by Project Veritas founder James O'Keefe himself, Varley abruptly headed for the nearest police station. He can be seen in a video motioning for O'Keefe to follow him in. With over $10 trillion in assets under management, BlackRock controls sizable shares of most large American corporations and pension funds, including Microsoft, Apple, Amazon, Nvidia, Alphabet, Pfizer, Tesla, Merck, Visa and Mastercard. The company was tapped to assist the US government in the 2008 financial crisis and the Covid-19 response, making it the only private corporation aside from the Federal Reserve itself to exert direct control on the levers of the US financial system and raising questions about insider trading and other conflicts of interest. Several BlackRock alumni serve in the Biden administration, including Brian Deese, the head of the National Economic Council. Black Rock of course, courtesy of the Trustee and Trump took over the Federal Reserve. This is something we and many others have revealed much in the past, that banks create wars and false flag situations to generate more money for themselves. A sickening heartless group who need to be shut down entirely and start again with a People's bank, that operates only on behalf of the people, not greed based harvesting shareholders.

Trump is bad and so is Biden and yet these two corrupt officials are still running for 2024? More fool the American people. Biden and his bribes from foreign nations. The $10 million bribe split between Joe and Hunter Biden from Ukrainian energy company Burisma. The 10% for the Big Guy bribe from Chinese energy company CEFC. But now other kickbacks have emerged, as Joe and Hunter Biden took bribes from Russia and Kazakhstan as well. In fact, the House Oversight Committee, which gained access to Hunter Biden's bank records as part of the bribery investigation, identifies $20 million in payments to the Biden family made between Russia, Ukraine, and Kazakhstan.

Biden is requesting Congress spend six times more on supporting Ukraine in its war against Russia than on the border and fentanyl crises plaguing the nation, according to a new emergency spending request submitted Thursday. In the request sent to House Speaker Kevin McCarthy, Biden specifically called for $24 billion in aid to Ukraine, split between $13 billion for defense related spending, and $11 billion in economic and humanitarian assistance. But Biden only requested $4 billion in spending on the border and immigration, as well as combating fentanyl flowing into the United States from foreign origins. The total combined amount of the request reached roughly $40 billion. The additional spending request comes after Congress approved $48 billion in funding for Ukraine in December. Be interesting to see how much funding is approved for the disaster in Maui, where tragically most of the island has been reduced to ashes. And just like the issue in California and their fires, the Maui electricity company have come under fire for allegedly starting the fires. Part of the problem is, the Government and worse the people themselves have forgotten that money belongs to the people.

A pair of Republican senators are demanding that federal officials account for how they reportedly lost track of 85,000 migrant children over the past two years. Sens. Marsha Blackburn and Josh Hawley comes on the heels of a February New York Times report, that the Department of Health and Human Services had been unable to contact thousands of unaccompanied minors, who were placed with sponsors after crossing the border, raising fears that they have been trafficked for cheap labor. The FBI must mount a full-scale effort to locate these missing children and to bring to justice the criminals who are holding them in modern-day slavery, Hawley wrote to bureau Director Christopher Wray. There is their first mistake, as some rogue elements of the FBI and the Trustee supported group GIA are involved in it. That was relayed to me by a few Lifeforce assemblies, one of whom was threatened and intimidated at his door by the FBI. The Trustee ignored their pleas. Calling the Biden administration morally responsible for the situation, Hawley demanded the FBI investigate both HHS and the Department of Homeland Security for allegedly turning a blind eye to whistleblowers, writing, The FBI must also investigate HHS and the Department of Homeland Security for their role in facilitating the exploitation of these children, in violation of the law. What if he finds out some elements of the HHS and DHS being involved in it as well? Who investigates who then? Why would we have a department name called Human Services? If we are all human, why label it that way? What that reveals is, we are not all human here. Plus asking a Democrat led government to deal with child exploitation, is like asking the wolf to look after the hen house.

Russian President Vladimir Putin signed a law imposing a 10% tax on excess profits for large companies. The document was published on the official website of legal information. The bill will go into effect on January 1, 2024 and the tax must be paid by January 28, 2024. It will be allocated to the federal budget and will be one-time. The tax is expected to generate 300 bln rubles ($3.12 bln) in revenue. The law imposes an excess profit tax on enterprises with arithmetic average profits above 1 bln rubles ($10.43 mln) in 2021 and 2022. The tax base will be determined as the difference between the arithmetic average of profit for 2021-2022 and 2018-2019, with a 10% tax rate. It also specifies several companies that are exempt from the list of excess earnings taxpayers. For example, companies in the oil and gas industry, as well as coal mining, are excluded from the list of payers, as well as small and medium-sized businesses, organizations paying the unified agricultural tax. Nice to know one country is keen to address taxation imbalance. Although it falls short of our Blueprint taxation as this was stated as a one off, perhaps for testing purposes. The concern is the exemptions, with the obvious gas and oil industry exclusions. That is wrong, as they reap major profits based upon market values, plus the ecological issues they cause and create.

THE ISRAEL SECTION: The incident in Sweden in relation to burning holy book reared its head again, all designed to create division. Indignation followed as you can expect. But is or was this all just another ploy to roll out the pity party tactics again, of how everyone blames the Jews. Have not the Israelis themselves been burning Quran and other countries flags? Was it stopped? No. Maybe we should burn all the religious books in overview, as those books have caused so much angst globally for hundreds of years, are they worth it? Those same books have led to untold death and suffering, again in overview is or should a book wield that much power over our lives, so much that they have killed 100's of millions of people. Think of it terms of the books that have been banned, due to what they say would cause so much offense, why doesn't it apply to these books as well? The whole thing smells of a set up to me, probably led by the Wallenberg's who run that whole country, as our expose of Deep State Sweden revealed. And yes the Wallenberg's are Jewish EL-ites.

Here is another example of it. Jerusalem city council meeting erupted into a shouting match, after a member of the Hitorerut party on the council, called for the council to condemn recent attacks by Haredim and far-right Jews against Christians in the Old City. They're spitting on and cursing at Christian tourists and worshippers, said Hitorerut councilman Adir Schwartz during the meeting. The Hitorerut party also called for additional security cameras and further cooperation with the police in order to protect the Christian community. We support tourism but not seminaries, said far-right Jerusalem deputy mayor Aryeh King. Councilman Yonatan Yosef also belittled the call for a condemnation, stating: I would like to add a condemnation of the Christians who conducted the crusades, the pogroms, the Inquisition, all the things that the Christians did to the Jews throughout the ages. Does anybody ask why modern day peoples should carry the burden, guilt or shame of what people did hundreds or over a thousand years ago? It is false sentiment and victimhood is it not, because it did not happen in the current times, a bit like the reparations act for black slavery 1-200 years ago. Why should we pay for something done that far back? What did the pope do during the Holocaust? I'm still waiting for the pope's condemnation of the Holocaust. The Vatican in some parts took part in the killings of WW2, remember they were being briefed by the OSS which merged into the CIA. The Pope is also the front for the Jewish religion, Cat-holicism is the Jewish religion. This type of rhetoric is only designed to make them look separate, they are not, as FHSTOS revealed. Recently, a conference was held on the matter of attacks against Christians in Jerusalem under the title: Why do certain Jews spit on Gentiles, in which various researchers and lecturers from the city's universities participated. So, who are the Lehava, listen to this description in light of those who were triggered by the story of the Aryans show. Lehava meaning flame, purpose; prevention of assimilation in the Holy Land. This is a far-right and Jewish supremacist organization based in Israel that strictly opposes Jewish assimilation, objecting to most personal relationships between Jews and non-Jews. It is opposed to the Christian presence in Israel. It has an anti-miscegenation focus, denouncing marriages between Jews and non-Jews forbidden by Orthodox Jewish law. My question is: do you still think the Rus/Aryans were racist and only one race are supremacy driven after listening to the last section? Things are getting real ugly in Israel right now and the people are rebelling against their junta. But people are also fighting each other based upon caste, which is an apartheid system of division.

MEDICAL SECTION: The proof, the truth and the inevitable fallout surrounding the Covid vaccines is now coming out in bucketloads. Predictably the non-personal responsibility crew and the people who refuse to admit they are ever wrong, do much to stifle and delay the information. A Lancet review of 325 autopsies after Covid vaccination found that 74% of the deaths were caused by the vaccine, but the study was removed within 24 hours. The paper, a pre-print that was awaiting peer-review, is written by leading cardiologist Dr. Peter McCullough, Yale epidemiologist Dr. Harvey Risch and their colleagues at the Wellness Company and was published online on recently on the pre-print site of the prestigious medical journal. However, less than 24 hours later, the study was removed and a note appeared stating: This preprint has been removed by Preprints with the Lancet, because the study's conclusions are not supported by the study methodology. While the study had not undergone any part of the peer-review process, the note implies it fell foul of screening criteria. No it fell foul of let's all shit our pants again because we were wrong. The great question is; who are the peer review people? What makes them the authority? What are their credentials? The meaning of the word Peer, an equal in rank, character, or status, so if everyone is equal, why would it need to be reviewed? Peer review, evaluation of a scientific project by experts in the relevant field, but I thought peer meant everyone was equal rank, why the hierarchy? Perhaps it is another form called peer pressure, another hierarchical group forcing opinions on others. Having mentioned hierarchy twice now, perhaps another peer word is significant, that of peerage which is a title of nobility. Or perhaps it means they are all incontinent and have to visit the toilet a lot! Findings: The most implicated organ system in Covid-19 vaccine-associated death was the cardiovascular system (53%), followed by the hematological system (17%), the respiratory system (8%) and multiple organ systems (7%). Three or more organ systems were affected in 21 cases. The mean time from vaccination to death was 14.3 days. Which is why in the early days the reporting system would not allow reporting after vaccines for a period of 2-4 weeks. Most deaths occurred within a week from last vaccine administration. A total of 240 deaths (73.9%) were independently adjudicated as directly due to or significantly contributed to by Covid-19 vaccination. A 99% chance of not suffering overly bad outside of some common cold symptoms, yet many took the risk and lowered their immunity to take jobs? You cannot help people that stupidly compliant.

A major study into the impact of the pandemic on Amish communities has found that Covid death rates among the traditionalist groups of citizens are 90 times lower than for the rest of America. The main difference, the study revealed, is that Amish communities completely ignored the guidelines from the U.S. CDC. Amish families did not get vaccinated or wear masks, nor did they engage in lockdowns, social distancing or any other type of restrictions. But the separated communities didn't avoid catching the virus, however, as roughly 90% of the Amish have been infected with Covid. Later, Kirsch also noted that researchers were unable find an autistic kid who was unvaccinated in Amish communities. He added that diseases like ADD, autoimmune disease, PANDAS PANS, or epilepsy basically don't exist among Amish children. Kirsch also said the federal government has studied Amish communities for decades without releasing a public report. He alleged that publishing such information would be devastating to the CDC and expose their recommendations as harmful to Americans. Interesting stuff, yet deeper questions and opinions must be put forward and asked. It proves the vaccines are the harming devices many around the world have stated. Why was the Amish community allowed to not be jabbed, masked or the aptly named term, social distancing? What makes them different to the rest of us? I don't mean that in a negative way, because no one should have been jabbed, masked or social distanced. The question is, why were they left out? Is it the fact they are closely related to the Jews? Again not a slight, because it is not their fault who they are related to. But, it does pose deeper questions for those who are not Jews does it not? The claim in FHSTOS of how the Jewish race were immune to most viruses and plagues. Which then begs the logical question of, was it they who launched the viruses, plagues and vaccines upon us? Social meaning; relating to society or its organization or needing companionship and therefore best suited to living in communities. Distancing means separating. Goes back to the lord separating the people and then scattering them to the four corners, does it not. But do those words provide clues of how to counteract these dividers of everything? A society or organization needing companionship and is best suited living in communities. Which means no distancing. Here is a pondering: A pharma company only exists because we offered and indeed volunteered to become their lab rats. Don't be a lab rat, be a highly developed personal responsibility being.

SOCIETY NEWS: A former New Hampshire state representative and the nation's first transgender-identifying state lawmaker was arrested by police recently and charged for allegedly distributing child pornography. Stacie Marie Laughton, a Democrat who previously resigned twice from the New Hampshire state house, is now facing four counts of distributing sexually explicit images of children. Laughton was born Barry Charles Laughton, Jr. This again does not augur well for that community, perhaps some due diligence is required before promoting these people? Same applied in the Black Lives Matter leaders did it not? although not sexual allegations, but fraud and corruption. It just re-enforces certain stereotypes does it not? Same happened recently in the Planned Parenthood group, someone found with child images and he committed suicide. All three of those institutions were designed for division based agendas, hence why so many at the top of it were corrupt or misaligned. Manchurian style candidates applies here, agency based stooges sent out to do dirty work for penance. Those people are providing a double hit upon the people, having committed crimes against the people and then working for the clowns to harm people more.

Another of their programs is about to go down, starting in Russia. As Vladimir Putin has banned 5G towers in the Russian Federation, amid concerns the technology is medically unsafe and has caused the deaths of school children near St. Petersburg. Discussions over the adverse effects of 5G are not new. For over a decade, alternative media have linked technology to myriad health issues, including immunosuppressive diseases and virus replication. However, Putin's pledge to dismantle existing 5G super towers shows the hazards of electromagnetic radiation are rooted more in fact than conspiracy. Unlike the U.S. and the West, Russia did not start erecting towers overnight when the technology, developed by Qualcomm and the mobile ecosystem, became available in 2015. Since then, the telecom companies in the U.S. have built 150,000 towers; by comparison, Russia had only 22, primarily in Moscow. During the Pandemic, with schools shuttered, mobile providers in the U.S. accelerated construction of towers within a stone's throw of elementary schools nationwide. When schools reopened, students suddenly saw sprawling 5G dishes on the horizon and atop school roofs. Among the four major mobile operators in Russia, only MTS started limited deployment of 5G in 2021, placing towers in Moscow, St. Petersburg, and Novosibirsk, with a single tower 15 meters from an elementary school playground in the outskirts of St. Petersburg. In April 2023, 16 students experienced severe side effects of electromagnetic poisoning. Early symptoms included spontaneous vomiting, dizziness, tinnitus, intolerable headaches and abdominal inflammation. Later symptoms were gastrointestinal bleeding, cerebral hemorrhaging and blindness due to the decay of ocular nerves. The affected children were ages 8-12 and had attended school the same semester. Moreover, the sick kids were unvaccinated, so health officials at Russia's Ministry of Health ruled out Covid-19 vaccine side effects. Comprehensive bloodwork and radiological imaging tests ruled out preexisting maladies, foodborne ailments, medications and biological and chemical agents. By June 6, 2023, 11 of the 16 students had died. Health Minister Mikhail Murashko, with the aid of the Ministry of Defense, ordered an inspection team to evaluate transmission frequencies emanating from the cell tower, which, they deduced, pulsed electromagnetic waves in the 24-50 gigahertz range near the bottom of the millimeter wave scale. Regulatory bodies and telecommunication firms worldwide have declared that range safe to humans, with former president Obama's FCC Director Tom Wheeler having said in 2016, 5G poses no threat whatsoever to people, wildlife, or pets. Anyone questioning its safety is promoting baseless conspiracies. However, Putin attributed the 2023 fatalities to a common denominator, the encroachment of 5G on Russian soil. In mid-July, the Russian president met with many telecom executives and health experts to discuss the dangers inherent in the proliferation of 5G tech. His mandate wasn't well-received by the Telecom executives. He showed them images of dead children; one's brain had liquified. He informed them he intended to enforce a moratorium on 5G research and demolish all towers in the Russian Federation. MTS Vice President of 5G Infrastructure Borya Vlasov said the absence of 5G would put Russia at a technological disadvantage. Yet again with these technology companies, all about the shekels. Putin asked what about these children? What has your 5G done to them? Vlasov said, we can't blame 5G for this, our comrades in the West agree that 5G is safe. Who made the "west" the authority on anything? Surely that blind following should have worn thin now with all other countries. Putin ordered the security agent beside him to shoot Vlasov squarely between the eyes, which he did. Whilst I don't condone violence, consequences of actions is unfolding. These so called experts having killed millions in the last three years alone, something had to be done to give a warning to these people who play games with people's lives in pursuit of agendas and shekels. A week later, the Engineer Troops of the Russian Federation, a military administrative corps of the Ground Forces of the Russian Federation designed to perform military engineering operations, began decommissioning 5G cellular towers in Moscow. Pedestrians cheered as the monolithic towers came crashing down. As of this writing, Russia has eliminated all its 5G towers. The information in this article comes thanks to FSB Agent Andrei Zakharov, who in 2022 supplied the real reasons behind Vladimir Putin's Special Operation in Ukraine, to rid Eastern Europe of foreign Biolabs, pedophile rings and Adrenochrome laboratories. Those battles are still being fought.

Finally, they decide to research into wokeness and another sign their programs are breaking down. Wokeness is a mental health crisis says the headline. A new survey concluded that liberals are literally crazier than conservatives. Conservatives are less likely to be classified with a mental health disorder and suffer mental illnesses, a Pew poll concluded. Why do we need liberal and conservatives, when lunacy or common sense are the only descriptions required? WIBC reported that the study included men and women who were liberals, moderates or conservatives. Conservatives are less likely to suffer from mental health illnesses than liberals or the so-called woke crowd. White women, ages 18 to 29, who identified as liberal, were given a mental health diagnosis by medical professionals in 56.3% of cases, 28.4% of moderates and 27.3% of conservatives were among those with a diagnosis. A Twitter account called End Wokeness, shared the data and said: wokeness is a mental health crisis. Among comments, many argued that there is more to the story, though some were happy to proclaim, I've said it many times, but it bears repeating. Woke white women are the worst! Liberals trust science more. After three years of the Covid scam, should we ever trust science again? Or rewrite science completely with adult and common sense-based narratives? All delivered by the powers of observation, not driven by agendas and shekels. Some of the comments are highly encouraging, except one. All of them are too prevalent in using the labels which box us all. One Twitter user replied, this might actually be a representation of how much big pharma pushes the healthcare industry to sell their products. In reply, a person shared, people on the left tend to trust science more and buy into pharma products which are recommended by their doctors. Pills for kids are their goldmine, suddenly every other child has ADHD and needs pills! Another Twitter poster wrote, young liberal women see claiming a mental health condition as a justification for their emotionalism and their failures in life. One Twitter user said, the environment created by our forefathers created a mental health crisis which allowed new avenues to be opened. Why is critical race theory considered woke? Oh, because it makes whites feel terrible for learning the truth about their ancestors. Take the races out of it and two questions come from that statement. Why should modern day humans take responsibility for their ancestors' crimes? Does making people feel guilty for crimes they haven't done, is that a valid exercise to be doing? Isn't that gaslighting on a mass scale? In the offended by everything culture, how is that level of harassment allowed? Several people said, that's because conservatives don't go to doctors. Another elaborated, this is likely more attributable to more acceptance of mental health and psychology and therefore more mental healthcare seeking behaviors by liberals compared to conservatives. It also doesn't say what the condition is/if they were actually diagnosed with it, could just be a general anxiety disorder. Some defended the woke culture. This person wrote, what are the anti-woke policies? Banning books? Banning classes? Banning education? Lmao – woke means knowledge. Knowledge depends on the author who wrote the script does it not? You so woke about that topic and woke was coined by the black community. You've effectively banned you and your kid's own knowledge to denigrate woke. Personally we need to ban most literature in school these days, as most of it is utter rubbish. The overview of woke is, the person is set with a given agenda supplied to them by the system, to not only denigrate the target of it, but also the deliverer of the woke message. We will use the blacks to bring down the whites and Israel Cohen springs to mind. But it is really designed to bring down us all. Woke became the joke to make us all fight each other and look more stupid than we actually are. Woke makes people feel they are intelligent, except the average IQ of Americans is 89, which in the old terminology meant retard. According to data, white conservative males are mentally strongest. One person responding to that said, conservatives really need to open up about their mental health. It might help prevent all the delusions and gun fetishization. Getting the help you need is not a sign of weakness, people. Others, however, shared, this explains why conservative men are attacked as the main enemy of the agenda. What happens when it has run its course and the woke people find out they were being played for jackasses? It should be noted that, a lot of wokeness is in the alt media, what does that tell you? They are not as awake or awoke as they think. Remember these were the same people promoting the red pill, which is the MK Ultra training via LSD. Which funny enough has led to major mental health issues.

A recent marketing marvel has reared its head and labeled as a superfood. Containing it says 85 superfoods and nutrients. One has to ask is, why are those "superfoods or nutrients" not just added to the normal food? All in the labeling you see, super food, but to a person starving, isn't all food super? This type of labeling appeals to the new age, women dieting and women being super healthy fad, thrown in over flowery adjectives like super and it becomes a magnet for people living in fear. That somehow how the normal foods are tainted and so we have to pay exorbitant prices for the same foods. If all the other foods were as tainted as the super foods marketers make out, why hasn't every died who is eating it all the time? Oops there goes the common sense statement again. Well it is not GMO, agreed, but GMO has been around a while and again we have not all died have we? Let's look at what the manufacturers say; Ka'Chava is produced in world-class facilities certified by the FDA, GMP, NSF, TGA, and others, and is USDA-certified organic. USDA certified organic? Oh dear. The USDA certify meat labeled organic, yes it may have been organic when delivered, but then the USDA adds the non-organic chemicals to the meat before packaging. So, in essence there is no organic food. Stop convincing yourself otherwise, it is mind memory playing on your fears that you will not be healthy. Ka Chava when it is produced has all the consistency and look of a giant elephant turd. Yet people will eat anything if some marketeer tells them this is healthy for you. The greatest health benefactor is, no fear. It is at best a placebo, where you convince yourself that this product is making you better and that can work. But if your vessel operates in fear, then that vibration will negate that effect. Here is a simple method, take a glass of water and think it healthy and ask it to go into regions of concern or ill health, all whilst believing in yourself which the internal and the water which is the external. You know what? It will have the same effect, except a glass of water will be infinitely cheaper than the marketing fear-based ploy.

Following on from our piece in last week's Blueprint show called What is life? We highlighted the role and time factor of the working schedule upon our lives. We of course in our Blueprint put forward the idea of a 4 day week. Which will not only help with burn out, it will also spread out employment for other people, spend more time for themselves, children, play and family. This reports highlights the issues we face today, as the work slavery program takes its toll. Almost half of American workers say they feel burned out at work in a recent poll. An overwhelming majority of companies say they see an increase in worker burnout. Employers, academics and journalists are looking for the root causes of this phenomenon. Are jobs harder now? Are workers softer? Are employers less supportive? Experts believe that the burnout boom is rooted in things like too much work and not enough resources, lack of acknowledgment for a job well done and incommensurate pay. Those factors can certainly make burnout less or more likely, but what's lacking here is an explanation of why the workplace would have changed in these ways over recent years. Indeed, the burnout is the effect, but what is the cause? Have employers become more demanding or less solicitous? But generally, people are less happy and have been getting less happy for a decade. So, what's been happening for a decade that would make people more stressed, less happy and more burnt out? Obviously, social phenomena cannot be pinned to a single cause, but I would put the root cause of worker burnout not primarily on bosses' expectations from work, but on workers' expectations from work. It is not that workers are upset work isn't cushy and easy, it's that workers end up seeking more meaning from a job than a job can provide. Which is an interesting phenomena to observe. Are the younger people deciding that the system they are offered is not providing them with life sustainability? The search for shekels not being the primary motive? Are they potentially beginning to understand what is life? The adults will not help them as most fall into the category of doing anything to make ends meet, climbing illusionary class and social ladders or just happy being slaves. In overview, unless you work for yourself, you are one of their slaves. If you work for yourself and not doing anything to just make ends meet or climbing the class scales, then you are more free than you can imagine. You are happier in your work, can then be able to balance between work and money with play and family. Plus, there is nothing more soul destroying than being in a job you don't like. The last 3 decades or so, has seen a rise in people living off the grid as it is called. That plays into this as well and it seems more and more people are rejecting the old slavery and control way of the system. Subconsciously, millennials and Generation Z have tried to find meaning in work. Millennials and Gen Z are far less likely to belong to an organized religion. Millennials and Gen Z are far less likely to be married or have children. Faith and family are where most people in world history have found meaning, purpose and belonging. So where do millennials and Gen Z find it? Increasingly, at work. Derek Thompson at the Atlantic said, for the college-educated elite, work has morphed into a religious identity, promising transcendence and community, but failing to deliver. Workism is among the most potent of the new religions competing for congregants. Workism is the belief that work is not only necessary to economic production, but also the centerpiece of one's identity and life's purpose; and the belief that any policy to promote human welfare must always encourage more work. Why would workism be on the rise? Because people need to find purpose and meaning somewhere, they believe they are secularizing by eschewing organized religion, they predictably find meaning in the one part of life they don't consider optional. The problem with workism is that it drives you to keep working until you get ultimate meaning from work, which you never will. So the root of millennial and Gen Z burnout isn't our economy or their bosses. It's their bad religion. Spoken like a typical weak clown who wants the slavery and shekel industry to keep running at maximum pace, creating burnout. Except, we are in the beginning of the changes of how life should be, not how they created it to be. The slaves at the bottom of the Tower of Babel are watching as The Wizard tries to fly and falls to the ground. That is the perfect analogy of going from the old world slavery system to the new world based on life sustaining creativity, cooperation and community based plans.

EXPOSE: Another example of the US Military not being in American's best interests, only part of the war and shekel machine. Convenient puppets for the NWO, the banks and the Jewish EL-ites. A machine that has stripped America of its wealth, reputation and killed many of its own people, never mind the millions around the world all under false pretenses. Aligned with the other NWO puppet the CIA, they between them have done so much damage to this planet during the whole of our lifetime. Yet, curiously it is barely questioned? On the 78th anniversary of the atomic bombings of Japan, we should remember that deploying the bomb wasn't necessary to win the war. US policymakers were aware of this fact, yet they pressed on, thereby authoring the atrocity that launched the nuclear age. This is noteworthy considering the historical evidence now clearly indicates that, Japan was on the brink of surrender when those weapons were employed. The decision to initiate an instant holocaust against potentially as many as 210,000 Japanese civilians was complex and multifaceted. The principal argument mounted to justify the use of atomic bombs, that they would quickly end the war and avoid an invasion that could result in as many as one million casualties, doesn't hold much weight. The classic often repeated meme of we did it for your benefit, safety or health. Instead, historical evidence more strongly indicates America's desire to circumvent the need for negotiations with the Soviet Union over the future of East Asia. The Potsdam Conference, held by Allied leadership in the summer of 1945, aimed to determine the postwar settlement in Europe. The United States did not want to be forced into similar negotiations with the Soviets at the table, for the postwar settlement of the Pacific. Yet again the Russia child level petulance is pushed forward but remember Russia at this point was under the control of the Jews, proving it was all theater again. Since the mid-1990s, the ongoing dispute over the deployment of the bombs has been a front in the larger culture war. The conflict emerged when the Smithsonian Institution, in a bid to appease prevailing sentiments, forfeited its scholarly autonomy and halted a critical examination of the decision to use the bombs. The study was meant to complement the unveiling of the fully restored bomber Enola Gay. Their existence underscores the need to reevaluate the key arguments, that demonstrate the fundamentally needless nature of employing atomic weapons against Japan. The Smithsonian is a creator of false history, hiding all kinds of material that would reveal the full truth of THI and many other researchers. They are another group that continues to go under the radar outside of THI. Keeping the Soviets Out: Why would you need to keep the Soviets out, when they at this point, they had killed 70M Rus? What are they keeping out? The bombing and the use of nuclear weapons was intended to force Japan's immediate and unconditional surrender. This ended the war before millions of battle-hardened Soviet troops could pour into Eastern Asia. The strategy was the prevention of potential Soviet liberation of the continent from Japanese rule and the hindrance of Western European colonial powers' attempts, to exploit labor and resources for postwar economic reconstruction. It is worth considering the following key points: The United States stands alone as the only nation to employ nuclear weapons with hostile intent. It is the only nation to use them deliberately against civilians. The United States also considered using nuclear weapons to bring about the end of both the Korean and Vietnam Wars, both of which they started, again after lying to the American people as to why. Yet, neither the Soviet Union nor Russia, has ever considered employing nuclear weapons offensively in a conflict in a manner like how the United States employed its nuclear weapons against Japan. Finally, the United States has upheld a nuclear first use doctrine, exited arms control treaties and advocated for novel technologies to disrupt the nuclear balance. The decision to use atomic weapons against Japan was swiftly met with dissent within the ranks of senior American military and political figures. The decision to use atomic weapons against Japan in the closing stages of World War II was swiftly met with controversy. Although much of the public greeted news of the bombings with exultation, interpreting the event as signaling the immediate end of the conflict, this sentiment wasn't unanimous. An editorial published in a September 1946 edition of Saturday Review questioned the bombings' necessity and suggested that they were done deliberately to intimidate the Soviet Union. Complaining after the event is no use, where was the questioning before those types of weapons were built? This idea was explored in Gar Alperovitz's 1965 book Atomic Diplomacy: Hiroshima and Potsdam — The use of the Atomic Bomb and the American Confrontation With Soviet power. Alperovitz was the first to mention that the bombs were dropped to both bring about an immediate end to the war and to avoid large-scale Soviet involvement that could potentially replicate in the Far East, what had already occurred in Eastern and Central Europe. The Atomic-Diplomatic Exchange That Never Happened: While the Yalta agreement of February 1945 was ambiguously defined and open to varying interpretations, Alperovitz asserts that President Roosevelt's understanding was that Poland and much of Eastern Europe liberated by the Red Army would fall under Soviet influence. However, Harry S. Truman, who assumed the presidency in April of 1945, diverged from Roosevelt's cooperative stance, choosing instead to adopt a more confrontational approach to curtail and confine Soviet power in Europe. Encouraged by his top advisors, Truman pursued a confrontational stance with Joseph Stalin over Eastern Europe, partly driven by their perception of atomic weapons as a potent diplomatic tool. This hardline approach with the Soviet Union had been previously avoided for three key reasons: Roosevelt was committed to cooperating with Stalin; the United States wanted to avoid Germany and the Soviet Union signing a separate peace; and because a hardline approach could result in losing Soviet support against Japan. Except as we have revealed in previous shows, Roosevelt and others were dividing up the lands between them with their not Russian counterpart, but Jewish. It was initially thought that Soviet forces would be necessary to hold down the Kwantung Army in Manchuria to prevent the reinforcement of the Japanese Home Islands. However, by April of 1945, Allied forces had secured control of the sea lines around Japan, precluding this possibility. By April of 1945, a Soviet entry into the Pacific Theater was no longer considered necessary for the Americans to complete a successful invasion of Japan. Although the bombs could have been seen as valuable bargaining tools in the ongoing negotiations with the Soviet Union regarding the conclusion of World War II, their use didn't necessarily hinge on their military deployment. Alperovitz suggests that Secretary of War Henry L. Stimson, who possessed extensive knowledge of the bomb program within Truman's cabinet, leaned toward sharing information about nuclear energy and the bomb, along with proposing Soviet participation in an international atomic energy control commission. This concept of an atomic-diplomatic exchange was already being discussed as early as December 1944. To encourage Japanese surrender and favorable terms in future Soviet negotiations, the notion of a nonmilitary atomic bomb demonstration, such as a detonation in Tokyo Harbor, was seriously considered. Stimson born in New York, parentage unknown. He went to Harvard, was a lawyer, a part of the Manhattan project most of which was ran by leading Jews. Attended Yale, he became a member of Skull and Bones quite a telling list. Japan's Impending Surrender at the Time of the Bombings: A central and enduring argument is that the use of atomic bombs ended the war early. But there is considerable evidence to suggest that Japan was already defeated before the atomic bombs were dropped. The Japanese navy, as an example, had for the most part been sunk by the spring of 1945, allowing for near-total Allied control of the seas around Japan. Moreover, the Japanese air force had been so thoroughly obliterated that American bombers attacked with near impunity. The routine firebombing raids over Tokyo, including the devastating attacks on March 9 and 10, 1945, that claimed 100,000 lives, exemplify this. During the period between March 9 and June 15, 1945, out of around 7,000 bombing missions, only 135 American planes were lost, underscoring the extent of American air supremacy over Japan. There is considerable evidence to suggest that Japan was already defeated before the atomic bombs were dropped. Indeed they were, but this was an event for psychological purposes, all designed to create maximum fear on many levels. It also set the stage for the proxy US Military to become the official Military arm of the NWO. A term used much later by the same war machine clowns fits the bill to describe this event, shock and awe. It then set the stage for the pro pagan da and fear of nuclear elimination, created streams of shekels for the banksters and Jewish EL-ites with other countries borrowing heavily to have their own threat or protection. It then set up committees, where the evil clowns decided upon which country could have these weapons and who couldn't. Set up further committees to prevent others having them as protection, all to appease the playground bully that the US Military was to become. But it is one thing being a school playground bully to a handful of other kids, it is another to do that to a whole planet's population. Remember US and U.S. are not American, they are the UN or the British Israelite Territorial group. The Japanese had initiated peace envoy missions as early as September 1944, reaching out to figures like Chinese Nationalist leader Chiang Kai-shek by December 1944 and engaging with the USSR in April 1945. That the Japanese were interested in negotiating a peace was well known. Moreover, the Americans knew that there was a potential for a surrender without necessitating an invasion as early as April 1945, provided there was clarity in the surrender terms. The argument that the bombings prevented the necessity of an invasion is undermined by the very cities that were chosen to be bombed. It is now known that as many as nine atomic bombs were proposed to be used tactically against Japanese military targets as part of a planned, though never authorized invasion. That two of those bombs were ultimately used against cities of no military value, is evidence that plans for an invasion had already been abandoned by August of 1945. The potential for a massive confrontation between the Red Army and the Kwantung Army in Manchuria introduced the prospect of the Soviets seeking equal participation in subsequent conflict-ending talks. This would have positioned them to assert a stronger claim over the region, resulting in gains that could far exceed their initial claims to territories lost in the Russo-Japanese War of 1904. Consequently, the atomic bomb, instead of being used tactically, evolved into a strategic weapon of terror intended to jolt Japan into immediate surrender. Notably, American policymakers had concluded that Soviet involvement in the war was comparable, both psychologically and militarily, to the impact of atomic weapons. The decision to drop the bombs was not driven by a military necessity to conclude the war but was deliberately undertaken to end the war on American terms and to put the United States in the best possible negotiating position. The argument of military necessity is further undermined by the stance taken by three of the most prominent American military figures of World War II: Generals Douglas MacArthur and Dwight D. Eisenhower, along with Admiral William Leahy. These leaders opposed the use of the atomic bomb against Japan because they felt it was completely unnecessary. Which proves there is a junta led group above and beyond government and military. The fact that they have been allowed to continue their murderous strategies, is an indictment of all the people, not just politicians. The problem is too many observed the sound of silence.

Bloodshed for Sunken Costs: Ronald Takaki's 1995 book Hiroshima: Why America Dropped the Atomic Bomb concludes that some of the motivation to use the weapons was simply, a consequence of the immense cost in developing them, foreshadowing Eisenhower's later warning of the military-industrial complex. Yes that is the junta. By 1945, the Manhattan Project had taken on a life of its own, employing 120,000 people and with an associated cost of about $2 billion, which is roughly $34 billion, as adjusted for inflation. Isn't it funny that, whilst Americans were going through the great depression, the government and military chooses to spend like it is confetti, our money on weapons? That continues to this day, one trillion a year on a fake military machine. Takaki proposes a comparison to the contemporary US auto industry of the era. To borrow a term from modern times, the atomic bomb had become too big to fail. If only these psychopaths that pass off as experts and leaders applied the term too big to fail, to the supporting of the people and the planet, then we would have a world to be proud of. How sick is society that lets it people fail, whilst keeping afloat, war machines and banksters? Takaki reveals that, as the war and the development of atomic weapons progressed, the bomb's use in combat wasn't guaranteed. Roosevelt's last known thought on the matter was that the bomb could be used against Germany or Japan, if necessary, yet he proposed a preliminary demonstration in order to give the Japanese the opportunity to reconsider American terms for surrender. This approach was the option preferred by 46 percent of 150 Manhattan Project physicists polled in the summer of 1945. Showing that 54% were utter psychopaths and should never have been in that position. Takaki's findings also reveal that both Truman and General George Marshall were aware, well before the decision to deploy the bombs, that the frequently cited casualty estimate of up to a million for a Japanese Home Islands invasion was inaccurate. Contrary to the purported concern for minimizing avoidable loss of life, it was widely acknowledged among the highest ranks of the Allied command that bombing operations, whether in Germany or Japan, were becoming increasingly lethal and predominantly impacting civilian populations. A 1946 Bombing Survey confirmed the remarkable success of the bombing campaign, supporting the assessment that Japan would have surrendered prior to November 1 1945 the date of a proposed invasion of Kyushu, without the need for atomic weapons or Soviet entry into the conflict. It was known at the time that both Stalin and Nikita Khrushchev wanted to ensure the Soviet Union a place at the bargaining table and were concerned the war would end before Soviet forces could play their role. Consequently, 1.5 million Soviet troops crossed into Manchuria on August 9, 1945, the day Nagasaki was bombed. The American strategy to use atomic weapons to force greater cooperation thus failed, as Stalin responded to the bombings by ordering his own scientists to redouble their efforts to catch up to the United States in the development of atomic weapons. Truman's advisors thought the United States would enjoy a decade-long atomic monopoly, that would provide them with a diplomatic master card for the immediate postwar era. Typical of the psychopaths posing as leaders in America, re-enforcing the playground bully stated earlier. However, this decision inadvertently paved the way for the atomic arms race, as the Soviets successfully detonated their own nuclear weapon only four years after the war's end. Indeed, because that was the intended purpose of the bankers you see. Like what Finkelstein and Rosenthal said, we fund both sides and collect the shekels. From Tactical Weapons to Global Game Changers: The atomic bombings stand as a strategic misstep and a moral catastrophe. Historians claim that, at the time, there was a near consensus on two points: first, that the atomic bombs were unnecessary both for hastening the war's end and avoiding a Japanese invasion; and second, that Truman and his advisors were well aware of viable alternatives to targeting civilian populations with the bombs. Despite this understanding, some historians have argued that had Truman refrained from using the weapons, he might have faced impeachment due to the exorbitant project costs incurred. What an indictment that is, again about savings one's own skin at the expense of millions of others. That indictment is the effect, the cause was of building them at much expense to the American people again. This country from day one lacked oversight in everything, a chilling and disturbing indictment of a country ran by psychopaths with the complicity of an apathetic population. The figure of one million casualties has long been used as a prominent justification for the atomic bombings, but its repeated invocation lacks verifiable grounding. Nobile notes that Barton J. Bernstein, the eminent Stanford historian and Cold War specialist, discovered files from the Joint War Plans Committee. These files indicated that various invasion scenarios would have resulted in as few as forty-six thousand casualties, casting further doubt on the widely cited one million casualties claim. Amazed they didn't use the 6 million figure that was prominent back then, given it was used 138 times prior to 1943. Princeton historian Michael D. Gordin argues that the atomic bombs not only transformed warfare, but that they themselves transformed in the moment of detonation. Initially conceived of as tactical weapons that were simply more destructive firebombs, they emerged from the terrible blast as strategic weapons that had the power to end conflicts and alter the course of geopolitics. In Gordin's view, the atomic bomb was as much a surprise to the Japanese as it was to the Americans. He argues that US military commanders failed to properly appreciate the bomb's profound strategic significance. Has his story ever shown the US Military is capable of competence, common sense, honorability or virtue? If this was the case, it seems unlikely that the foreknowledge existed about the bomb's capability to swiftly and unconditionally force surrender. Gordin argues that a sizable group of American decision-makers did not believe that the bomb had the power to end the war immediately, because they weren't certain the bomb would work. Initially, atomic bombs were simply seen as more potent versions of conventional bombs, intended for tactical use in Japan's invasion or as a display of advanced American military prowess. No one could foresee that these weapons would possess the power to not only end the conflict swiftly, but also alter the global geopolitical landscape. Geopolitical is one thing, environmental damage is another. Ironic the same type of clowns who advocated for this weapon, are the same type of clowns today asking the public to pay for environmental damage, not to mention the lasting genetic damages to the people of Japan. Gordin also points out that it was impossible to know, in August of 1945, that the atomic attacks on Japan would be the first and hopefully the last offensive use of nuclear weapons, making the weapons unlike any other weapon ever used. The Shift from Firebombing to World-Ending: Because atomic bombs were considered nothing more than more powerful versions of existing weaponry, that we then must reconsider the Anglo-American firebombing campaigns that characterize the end of World War II. These campaigns were specifically and deliberately aimed at the destruction of cities and their civilian populations. The use of nuclear weapons against Japan in 1945 constituted a war crime by any objective measure. Remarkably, the vast majority of Japanese casualties were a result of the American-led firebombing campaign. It's notable that the Anglo-American allies specifically excluded area bombing from being deemed a prosecutable war crime, formalizing this agreement on August 8, 1945, just two days after the bombing of Hiroshima and a day ahead of the bombing of Nagasaki. That is the Talmudic law in full effect, a law unto themselves. We've all been living ethical and moral consequences ever since, consequences that have contributed significantly to the complex phenomenon of American exceptionalism. While the United States currently acts all sanctimonious and warns against the potential use of nuclear arms by others, only the United States that has employed them and without justifiable cause. Contrary to the notion of achieving a nuclear peace and resolving conflicts, the aftermath has led the world into a prolonged state of precarious uncertainty spanning almost eight decades. Redressing this imbalance and establishing a lasting peace in a world without nuclear weapons, will only come about with the eradication of the deceitful narratives employed to rationalize American war crimes. As the brief era of a unipolar world fades away and the threat of nuclear conflict resurfaces, the importance of disarmament matters more than ever. The responsibility to lead this charge falls squarely on the shoulders of the United States, author of the horror that inaugurated the nuclear age. The Military Blueprint solution goes some way to correcting those ills. No more fake country militaries, just a global military to protect the planet from above and below. An equal collection of people from all countries showing unity and an end to the arrogance and child level stupidity of the US Military. We were told they were the world's police (M) in essence they go down in our story as the world pariahs. This whole piece ties into the What is life piece and our collective inability to ignore the plight of others. To stand with no personal or collective responsibility for the plight of others, always comes back to bite you eventually, it is just a matter of time. It is like a child scraping his knee on gravel, left untouched, it festers and becomes infected. Again it is all based in fear, as the see nothing, hear nothing and say nothing crew bring about their own demise eventually. This is what is unfolding in this country now, it is coming apart at the seams and descending into another bubble world of despair, delusion and depression. All of which was caused by not taking responsibility for anything. Perpetuating the decline further with drugs and alcohol, newsflash; neither of those items fixed anything either, just exacerbated things. People can lie to themselves all they like on those addictions, but essentially they are both the city of light pills of the AI machine in the 100 series. It is my understanding that no nuclear weapons are currently operable and haven't been for a number of decades, possibly since the late 1960's and the Malstrom Air Force base event. As more and more of his story is unraveled, the sooner we go forward with a better plan for the all.

MYSTERY SECTION: NASA have gone from the Greek gods to Orion and now another other species name to re-affirm who they are engaged with or connected to. They have built a new spacecraft and is a project being led by NASA and the US Defense Advanced Research Projects Agency (DARPA). Have DARPA ever done anything useful for the public? Does anyone ask what is their whole purpose of operations? The spacecraft, known as DRACO (Demonstration Rocket for Agile Cislunar Operations). How witty of them, the one race who have done much damage to us all here. It will be built by aerospace and defense company Lockheed Martin, another clown operation group. A nuclear thermal rocket (NTR) offers a high thrust-to-weight ratio of around 10,000 times greater than electric propulsion and two-to-five times greater efficiency than in-space chemical propulsion. The space agency has studied the concept of nuclear thermal propulsion for decades. Given most of NASA's rockets have a high tendency to fail, one hopes they do not launch that from Kennedy Space Center in Florida, because if it fails, Florida is doomed as an attraction for many years. But then Florida's lead attraction Disney, is failing rapidly now due to exposure and greed. Another example of science now catching up and questioning the official narrative. This augurs well for the future as we learn and develop more. The sun is more surprising than we knew, said Mehr Un Nisa, a postdoctoral research associate at Michigan State University. We thought we had this star figured out, but that's not the case. Nisa, is the corresponding author of a new paper in the journal Physical Review Letters that details the discovery of the highest-energy light ever observed from the sun. The international team behind the discovery also found that this type of light, known as gamma rays, is surprisingly bright. There's more of it than scientists had previously anticipated. They are not gamma rays in my opinion, but a differing form of light. Although the high-energy light doesn't reach the Earth's surface, these gamma rays create telltale signatures that were detected by Nisa and her colleagues, working with the High-Altitude Water Cherenkov Observatory, or HAWC. HAWC is an important part of the story. Unlike other observatories, it works around the clock. In addition to working differently from conventional telescopes, HAWC looks a lot different from the typical telescope. Rather than a tube outfitted with glass lenses, HAWC uses a network of 300 large water tanks, each filled with about 200 metric tons of water. The network is nestled between two dormant volcano peaks in Mexico, more than 13,000 feet above sea level. From this vantage point, it can observe the aftermath of gamma rays striking air in the atmosphere. Such collisions create what are called air showers, which are a bit like particle explosions that are imperceptible to the naked eye. The energy of the original gamma ray is liberated and redistributed among new fragments consisting of lower energy particles and light. It's these particles and the new particles they create on their way down, that HAWC can "see." When the shower particles interact with water in HAWC's tanks, they create what's known as Cherenkov radiation that can be detected with the observatory's instruments. Nisa and her colleagues began collecting data in 2015, which is interesting timing, as that is just after the sun changed. In 2021, the team had accrued enough data to start examining the sun's gamma rays with sufficient scrutiny. After looking at six years' worth of data, out popped this excess of gamma rays. When we first saw it, we were like, we definitely messed this up. The sun cannot be this bright at these energies. The sun gives off a lot of light spanning a range of energies, but some energies are more abundant than others. For example, through its nuclear reactions, the sun provides a ton of visible light, that is, the light we see. But if we develop ourselves we can “see” in what are called non-visible ranges. This form of light carries an energy of about 1 electron volt, which is a handy unit of measure in physics. The gamma rays that Nisa and her colleagues observed had about 1 trillion electron volts, or 1 tera electron volt, abbreviated 1 TeV. Not only was this energy level surprising, but so was the fact that they were seeing so much of it. In the 1990s, scientists predicted that the sun could produce gamma rays when high-energy cosmic rays, particles accelerated by a cosmic powerhouse like a black hole or supernova, smash into protons in the sun. But, based on what was known about cosmic rays and the sun, the researchers also hypothesized it would be rare to see these gamma rays reach Earth. But what if it isn't a black hole or supernova? What is the thinking then? The above is the scientist always thinking of an external effect, but what if it is an internal effect? What if the sun is a portal? With portals things can come in and go out. What if it is an upgrade of our sun, on a cosmological, galactic or Universal scale? At the time, though, there wasn't an instrument capable of detecting such high-energy gamma rays and there wouldn't be for a while. The first observation of gamma rays with energies of more than a billion electron volts came from NASA's Fermi Gamma-ray Space Telescope in 2011. Over the next several years, the Fermi mission showed that not only could these rays be very energetic, but also that there were about seven times more of them than scientists had originally expected. And it looked like there were gamma rays left to discover at even higher energies. Now, for the first time, the team has shown that the energies of the sun's rays extend into the TeV range, up to nearly 10 TeV, which does appear to be the maximum, Nisa said. Currently, the discovery creates more questions than answers. What if it is not the maximum? Have they considered that? Why is science thinking so limited? Yes we know of the restrictions place upon non-conformist discoveries, but why can they not just apply as above, so below, as within and so without. Plus the cause not the effect and things may become a whole heap simpler to work out. Solar scientists will now scratch their heads over, how exactly these gamma rays achieve such high energies and what role the sun's magnetic fields play in this phenomenon, Nisa said. When it comes to the cosmos, though, that's part of the excitement. It tells us that there was something wrong, missing or perhaps both when it comes to how we understand our nearest and dearest star. This shows that HAWC is adding to our knowledge of our galaxy at the highest energies, and it's opening up questions about our very own sun. It's making us see things in a different light, literally. Indeed, because that is what it is, different forms of light. That one should think of in terms of an upgrade. The fact it is an upgrade is revealed in stark clarity by the clowns wishing to block out it's light. Why? because the non-humans here cannot sustain that level of light. Maybe the 90% of what is deemed useless eaters, is actually them. Now ponder on that for a while.

This is another piece written by a female member that bears deep consideration from male and female alike. The womb is the fertile soil of creation and life. The womb is not a place to store fear and pain, it is a place to create and birth new life. The Earth is the fertile soil of creation and life. The Earth is not a place to store fear and pain, it is a place to create and birth new life. They are one and the same, as within so without. Fear in the womb of the women can create undesired outcomes for what she is creating. The root chakra, the base, the foundations of women, are of the masculine energy. Trust, safety, protection, provisions, truth, strength and surrender. The opposite for the men their base root chakra is feminine energy. If she is birthing children, fear in the womb can cause a whole range of issues for her offspring including physical, developmental, social and emotional challenges often labeled as special needs children, miscarriage and infant death. As I know from personal experience. If she is creating/building/growing, fear in the womb can have undesired outcomes with all of her work. It is especially important in this time of new humanity's creation, to have women and men in a state of deep love, trust, support and safety. Treat every woman as if she is carrying and protecting your offspring, your seeds, your future. She is, and we are together. The masculine and the feminine in divine union are creating The New Blueprint for Humanity. In Spirit and in our physical reality. It needs both energies, the masculine energy is vitally important but it will come through the womb. The women need to be open to receive the penetration of the masculine energy and supported gently while conceiving, holding and birthing the new earth. Physical with the Earth, the womb, the feminine and the love. Spiritual with the Universal, the rod, the masculine and the trust. Dark with the shadows, Light with the gifts, we need it all.

Recently we have mentioned about Da Arya, we have mentioned about the poles, we have mentioned about the energy grids and we have mentioned about the spirals forming. How interesting and or significant is the reporting and recording of spirals forming in the Northern Lights this past week? Is it all connected and what is it changing? Or what has changed?

Did the collective consciousness of the Blueprint cause Putin to announce the banning and dismantling of all 5G towers in Russia last week also?

Earlier we mentioned Ka Chava as a supposed health superfood, let's dig into that wording a little more and see if it follows a pattern shall we. Oh dear he is going to ruin something else! Who me?? I haven't ruined anything; I just shattered your own illusions. Ka in ancient Egypt the supposed spiritual part of an individual human being or god, which survived with the soul after death and could reside in a statue of the person. So Ka means an egregore or possibly even a digital twin or a clone or synthetic double. Not a good start is it? Let's look at the other part of it, Chava. Chava as a girls' name is of Hebrew origin, well I never, so now we have Egypt and Hebrew into the mix. The meaning of Chava is life and can also mean living being. Which on the face of it can sound great, but what is life? As last week's piece proved, we have not defined it too well. So chava is life and living being, but which types of life and living being is not asked is it? It is that word again, assumption. But assumptions is all most people have, all of which was given to them by the wordsmiths of control. Funny word that, word-smiths, connect the latter part to the Matrix and perhaps then you have a deeper meaning of word magic and spellings being cast. Assumption is not fact or truth, it is a statistical analysis of probability. Logic is based on the same dynamic and again is not truth. So, what type of life or living being are we talking about here, given this is likely a Hebrew or Kosher type food? Following the McDonalds revelation and their kiddies meals, one seriously has to contemplate here, just what is in it? The next question then is; is it containing some sort of DNA code to change the body of the consumer? That question would never have been received prior to 2020, but following what took place with the jabs, it is not as farfetched as it appears. The other query people must ask themselves is, have they noticed most of these so called health foods are targeted at the white race? Because it is they who consume these products more than any other race. The reality is, most other races cannot afford it. It is for your health, should have made you suspicious for a start, since when have they ever given us anything healthy? But it doesn't end there as there is another meaning to chava that plays into more assumptions and genetic skullduggery, the word Eve. Eve is an English given name for a female, just like all the English names for the disciples, none of which sound Middle Eastern, the worst of which is Bartholemew. Eve is derived from the Latin name Eva, in turn originating with the Hebrew Chavah or Havah. Chavah, to breathe, and chayah, to live or to give life. It can also mean full of life and mother of life. The traditional meaning of Eve is life or living, but which life or living being, is the great question is it not? The problem on this planet is, most people think or assume we are all human, but what is human? Did you know that the name Eve only appeared first in the 12th century, around the rise of the Templars, funny that. I wonder what she was called in the previous 4800 years, given the Cat-holic church who have a Johns Hopkins level math department and they say life here started 6K years ago! The question then is, whose life was birthed or created 6k years ago, because it wasn't us. Perhaps they need to listen to the piece last week of, what is life? Perhaps the name before the 12th century was Lilith, not Eve. Coincidentally the name Ava pre-dates the name Eve and was one of the saints. Ava and Eve, now where have we heard those names before. All of which sets us up nicely for next week's Blueprint show. But it also sets us up for FHSTOS Plus 21 as well, this coming Tuesday. That will be a humdinger and long.

Final piece tonight, The separation of the two worlds is gathering pace now, our concern is our world and our wellbeing, because the old world and its inhabitants have never helped us or themselves, only the system. Our Blueprint in essence can be seen as the defining motion between the old and new world. In essence the Blueprint was a final attempt to pull as many people out of the pit of the old world as possible. An olive branch to the tree of life, olive or o live, compared to dying on the inside all the while. O live is a change from o evil. The celestial harmonic spiral dance and melody is now sustaining it's motion and tune, can you feel it? A spiral dance rippling through everything including their new towers of Babel to create their web. Ionic radiation that went from EG to VG, Enola Gay to 5G that has done much to harm our world, yet we survived their onslaught and now have our own tools and methods to fight back. A force so powerful that echoes in the wind, a pleasant echo in the wind and away from dust in the wind. A force that permeates with the light the sandstone and granite caverns and cleanses the soul with powerful reminders of the past. Oh, let the sun beat down upon my face, with stars to fill my dreams. I am a traveler of both time and space, to be where I have been. Sit with elders of the gentle race, this world has seldom seen. Talk of days for which they sit and wait, when all will be revealed. The next 12-24 months will reveal much, not too much to THI members and our role is to observe. The revealing will be revealing on all levels, as the walls of illusion come tumbling down. But where are you now? What are you feeling? What is your focus? What are your shadows revealing now? Why are they still there, isn't multi-dimensionality enough, without the Galactic hitchhikers? Let us not be dillettantes and stand idly by, consumed with just knowledge, let us be the fore-bearers of a new dynasty of enlightenment. Bring forth and restore faith with reasoning and behold the jewels that awaits us. A return to love and risk it all the song says, but why should love be a risk? A risk to what exactly, sadness? Loneliness? misery? Fear? Eroding them is not a risk, it is a divine duty. Standing in your own power is also not a risk, it is your own personal divine mission, whether masculine or feminine. The greatest risk in life is stagnating, doing nothing to change things, learning nothing, creating nothing, because all that does is, risk a slow death. What is life? Life is what you choose to make it, easy or hard, slow or fast, sad or happy, fear or love, divine or bot. No one can take or make those choices away from you, only you. Are you riding the wave within the flow or damming or damning your life with barriers and limitations? So, which is it to be or not to be, that is the question, but only you are the answer. Life is never perfect, that is not possible, why strive to be that? when you could just learn to enjoy the journey.
