NEWS: As more and more MSM news are now declaring the electric car revolution a complete no-no. As more and more medical professionals and school officials are speaking out against sex changes. The media turning on Dr. Fauci saying that masks don't work and yet still advocating them for a future plan. It seems their programs are all coming to a grinding halt. Which is pleasing on many levels, as it means more and more people are turning against the old and withering system. No longer blinded by MSM drivel it seems, as the implode of the old system continues at a pace. At some point it will get real ugly here and here is a possible scenario.

The clowns are getting more and more desperate now, their desperation showing with bizarre policies they are currently promoting. The first is Biden and crew are reducing the safe limits of alcohol drinks to two a week, previously at 7 per week. On the face of it, it seems a bizarre request, but this is mere datamining as a test to see the public reaction. Predictably the public reaction has not been good, if only those people were as vociferous when they banned smoking. This is not about whether you smoke or drink at all, it is about eroding your own choice. It is the slow totalitarian creep again, first stage recommend drink consumption to two per week, next stage is to prevent you purchasing more than two a week. How can they do that? By registering all alcohol is purchased by a card, the AI database will do the rest. This is what this AI invasion is all about, every purchase is registered onto your file or database. They Know your lifestyle and how you live based on your purchases made on their AI database cards. It is total surveillance based upon that word again, convenience. Personally there is a role for the card, but the database behind it should never exist. Those databases are then sold to marketeers or advertisers, who are grubby little shekel makers by convincing you to buy their shit. You think this is all the future? Wrong, look to Amazon for the now and the past. Then when you have got used to that, next stage ban it altogether. Not possible many will cry, look at smoking is the reply. They got away with that due to a complicit public and people only caring about themselves. I ask you all, the non-smokers and those who quit smoking under pressure, did your health exponentially improve upon quitting? Did you then jump into another program of their making the fake health industry, along with its fake food industry? If cigarettes were so damaging, why did the same people who have banned it, allow the dangerous chemicals to be added to the natural plant? The next bizarre policy is to introduce full on mandate Covid measures again this year. Why? Because they are frightened of the uprising unfolding in the country. Right on cue Jill Biden and Whoopie Goldberg declare they have Covid, two pathetic little puppets who should be boycotted in my opinion. They possibly will wish to declare martial law again as the control of us is slipping through their grubby grasp. Personally but hopefully not until October, as it allows people to prepare, I hope they launch it. Have you gone mad Thomas? No, let me explain. People have said to me things are not moving quick enough for their liking. I explained we are in a holding pattern currently awaiting the next advance. If there is one thing that will speed things up, it will be jabs, mask, lockdowns and social distancing again. The uproar will be enormous, it will flood people into demanding change, erode trust of all government and medical services and they will be baying for blood. Politicians will be the sacrificial lambs and if they all crash and burn, there is a void to be filled. To fill it will be the Blueprint. But, this is a big but, it will get very ugly quickly here in this country. I expect major towns and cities to be riotous and lockdowns maybe beneficial at that point. The public revulsion will rise very quickly and will turn against the system for the final time. There will be no coming back from that event, and so for me at least, bring it on. Avoid major towns and cities if they launch it, have plenty of spare cash, stock moderately on food to avoid going out into towns and cities. This will get very ugly and turn into a civil war type scenario, but it will bring things to a head much quicker. These are desperate times for the old system and that requires desperate acts. The other benefit will be if politicians are no longer trusted is, no more of their fake elections next year. Whilst the blueprint appears on the face of it to not be having an effect, which is wrong by the way, the seeds planted now will begin to grow exponentially in this scenario.

The world of Iran and the Israelite skullduggery. When Iran was regime changed into its current shape two lists were sent to Iran. One list from the finance center London about 2,000 persons living in Iran that had financed democracy and the people of Iran. The other list from Langley CIA in the US about 2,000 persons living in Iran that was military and had their loyalty to democracy and the people of Iran. Allegedly, 4,000 persons should have been going to prison the first month after regime change. Instead 16,000 people were killed in just two weeks.

This is outrageous and is in my opinion against human rights and the right for free speech. But it comes as no surprise in the Israeli backed and controlled country of Saudi Arabia. A Saudi court has sentenced a man to death over his posts on X, formerly known as Twitter, and his activity on YouTube, the latest in a widening crackdown on dissent in the kingdom that has drawn international criticism. The judgement against Mohammed bin Nasser al-Ghamdi recently, comes against the backdrop of doctoral student Salma al-Shehab and others facing decades long prison sentences over their comments online. The sentences appear part of Crown Prince Mohammed bin Salman's wider effort to stamp out any defiance in the kingdom, as he pursues massive building projects and other diplomatic deals to raise his profile globally. Al-Ghamdi's death sentence over tweets is extremely horrific but stands in line with the Saudi authorities' escalating crackdown, said Lina Alhathloul, the head of monitoring and advocacy at the London-based advocacy group ALQST. Lengthy prison sentences issued for free speech, such as 27 years against Salma al-Shehab, have not received sufficient outcry and the authorities have taken this as a green light to double down on their repression. Therein lies the problem, people not standing up for others, in the banal belief it doesn't affect them. The more you let things slide the worse the authoritarian rule becomes. The Saudis are sending a clear and sinister message, that nobody is safe and even a tweet can get you killed. The sentence handed down by Saudi Arabia's Specialized Criminal Court, which was established to hear terror cases but now also weighs charges against activists. So, people who disagree with the official narrative in Saudi, are now classed like Americans where, as domestic terrorists. Not enough complained in America either. According to court documents, the charges levied against al-Ghamdi include betraying his religion, proving religion is a forced mandate, not a free will choice. But again, that applies to all children, as all are forced to accept a religion whilst not being competent enough to choose for themselves, courtesy of parents not acting in the child's best interest. How is it you have to wait to 18 to vote or drink, 21 in some places, yet you are branded with a religious label before getting out of diapers? Disturbing the security of society, what type of society is that? Fascist? Conspiring against the government, so questioning government policies is now a crime of conspiring? Seriously, where are the brain cells of these people?

Why doesn't it work both ways? Funny that governments can send surveys and census and make you answer their questions, why is that not reciprocated? Impugning the kingdom and the crown prince, all for his activity online that involved re-sharing critics' posts. They are seriously frightened of any sort of backlash and have begun issuing draconian measures to counteract their own fear.

The religious divide and fall off gets wider by the day, signifying the beginning of the end for this program. That has brought much pain, suffering and death. A new Pew Research poll in America found that Evangelicals have a +39-favorability rating towards Jews but Jews have a -40-favorability rating of Evangelicals. It will be better when those same Christians quit following a Jewish cult. Anti-Christian attitudes are even worse in Israel. In 2019, the pro-Israel Christian TV broadcasting network Daystar had their headquarters burned to the ground by suspected Jewish extremists who were never caught. The Greek Orthodox Patriarch of Jerusalem warned last year that our presence in Jerusalem is under threat. Our churches are threatened by Israeli radical fringe groups, Patriarch Theofilos III said. At the hands of these Zionist extremists the Christian community in Jerusalem is suffering greatly. Our brothers and sisters are the victims of hate crimes. Our churches are regularly desecrated and vandalized, our clergy are subject to frequent intimidation. Just last month, a Jewish extremist from America desecrated a statue of Jesus inside a Jerusalem church. We cannot have idols in Jerusalem, the Jewish-American vandal said. This is a very serious matter, we cannot worship stones of false gods in Jerusalem. Beyond ridiculous the behavior of the vandals, all of which was taught to them by rabid Rabbis. Whose sole role it appears is, to stoke division amongst the people, push racist ideologies and advocate for violence.

A poll from Gallup released last week found that Israel is losing support among American Democrats, though support among Republicans, especially Evangelicals remains strong. Except the previous report says they Jews do not like Evangelicals. For the first time ever, Democrats said; their sympathies in the Middle East now lie more with the Palestinians than the Israelis, 49% versus 38%. Today's attitudes reflect an 11-percentage-point increase over the past year in Democrats' sympathy with the Palestinians. At the same time, the percentages sympathizing more with the Israelis (38%) and those not favoring a side (13%) have dipped to new lows. Sympathy toward the Palestinians is also at a new high among political independents, up six points to 32%. However, more independents still lean toward the Israelis (49%). Republicans' views are unchanged, with nearly eight in 10 (78%) continuing to sympathize more with the Israelis while 11% side with the Palestinians. Encouraging news, that many people are now beginning to question the valid of that country, but they need to question the validity of following a Jewish cult operating as a religion as well. If only all the churches read out the Talmud in full at their masses, the whole charade would fall apart. It would also save many people their lives as well.

Just how has this country allowed foreign companies or interests to have use of our precious water, even in one of the most driest states in the country? A rancher of 40 years says he's running out of water because of Saudi Arabia. But he isn't blaming the company that moved next door to him; he's blaming the state of Arizona for allowing the Saudis to use the precious resource unchecked. It's not going to help America much if other nations have the right to our natural resources, said rancher Boyce Andersen. Residents of Arizona's rural La Paz County, like Andersen, know all too well their water is a finite resource, especially during the state's drought. Some residents see water flowing freely and unchecked in most parts of the state, while some communities are sitting on dry, empty wells. At least two foreign-owned companies are using the land for a crop that needs a lot of water to survive: Al Dahra, which is based in the United Arab Emirates, and Fondomonte, the Saudi-owned company. The crop uses so much water that Saudi Arabia banned it from being grown there, which is why Fondomonte is growing the crop on acquired land in Arizona. And our government allows them to do that? For nearly a decade, Fondomonte Arizona, a subsidiary of Saudi Arabia-based Almarai Co., has been growing alfalfa, one of the most water-intensive crops for livestock in the Gulf kingdom on land it purchased in La Paz County. The company is estimated to use enough water for more than 50,000 homes on the state-owned land. The Saudis are another fake country like Belgium, set up to serve the fake state of Israel with Jewish based royals and princes. I say Jewish, but the original so-called royal has to be questioned as to whether he was human at all? Ibn Saud fathered 146 children it is told, I am not sure even the most virile human could accomplish that. What's more, who were the women involved in that program?

If there was ever an incident that further shows we the people have to come together, this is it. Ignorance and division are hampering us all and it won't change until patterns of our behavior, thinking and actions change. A man who shot dead three people in what is described as a racially motivated attack in Florida, wrote of his hatred of Black people, police have said. Whether that jackass was ignorant, a Manchurian or Mk Ultra candidate is irrelevant, 3 people are dead because of people keeping the program of division going, in both communities. Predictably the clown based media who cause the division directly, jumped on it to target whites again, when these unnecessary killings are on both sides. All based upon false his story and peoples unwillingness to learn from repeat programs. Predictably also, the authorities found manuscripts to justify the agenda, amazing how many times that happens. What is also amazing is how virtually every time these events unfold now, ends with the alleged gunman dead. Because dead people can't talk you see and it is case closed, and roll out the latest agenda of division. All too predictable, isn't it time the people stopped it?

SOCIETY NEWS: With the last piece reporting on the deaths of 3 black people by a complete idiot of the highest caliber, perhaps this piece fits in nicely as to how they have misshapen our story into his story. Here is the reminder of the piece by a Jewish person named Israel Cohen said back in 1912, that confirms everything that is playing out now and since 1912. We must realize that our party's most powerful weapon is racial tensions. By propounding into the consciousness of the dark races, that for centuries they have been oppressed by whites, we can mold them into the program of The Communist party. We will invest to instill in the whites, a guilt complex over their exploitation of the negroes. We will aid the negroes to rise in prominence in every walk of life, in the professions and in the world of sports and entertainment. With this prestige, the negro will be able to intermarry with the whites, and begin a process which will deliver America to our cause. This piece goes back to my birth city and highlights the slavery system ran out of that port. At one point it was the largest port in the world and pretty much everything that came to America, came from the port of Liverpool. But, this is a piece written by a black member of the community, that highlights more of a balance in the slavery abuse, than what is portrayed by his story revisionists and MSM. An insidious trade regardless of the color, that was clearly not as one sided as their story makes out. Thousands of Irish, European and Slavic peoples were also on those Jewish based ships bound for America. But with agendas playing out, courtesy of the likes of Israel Cohen, his story failed to record such barbaric practices. His story has not revealed our story and this piece goes some way to re-dressing the balance. The word slave comes from the word Slav, enslaving them. Enslaving the Aryans again is what it reveals. As a black member of the Liverpool community, Slavery Remembrance Day is very important. Liverpool at one point was the capital of the transatlantic slave trade. The city was key in the growth of the slave trade and a lot of merchants saw Liverpool as the ideal port for the expansion of their businesses, whether they were slave traders or transporters of slave goods. One of the most vexing questions in African American history is whether free African Americans themselves owned slaves? The short answer to this question, as you might suspect, is yes. Some free black people in this country bought and sold other black people, and did so at least since 1654, continuing to do so right through the Civil War. For the author, the really fascinating questions about black slave-owning are how many black masters were involved, how many slaves did they own and why did they own slaves? The answers to these questions are complex, and historians have been arguing for some time over whether free blacks purchased family members as slaves in order to protect them. Motivated, on the one hand, by benevolence and philanthropy, as historian Carter G. Woodson put it, or whether, on the other hand, they purchased other black people as an act of exploitation, primarily to exploit their free labor for profit, just as white slave owners did. The evidence shows that, unfortunately, both things are true. In a fascinating essay reviewing this controversy, R. Halliburton shows that free black people have owned slaves, in each of the thirteen original states and later in every state that countenanced slavery, at least since Anthony Johnson and his wife Mary went to court in Virginia in 1654 to obtain the services of their indentured servant, a black man, John Castor, for life. And for a time, free black people could even own the services of white indentured servants in Virginia as well. Oh my that will disturb the history revisionists, those white slaves were Irish and Slavic. Free blacks owned slaves in Boston by 1724 and in Connecticut by 1783; by 1790, 48 black people in Maryland owned 143 slaves. One particularly notorious black Maryland farmer named Nat Butler, regularly purchased and sold Negroes for the Southern trade, Halliburton wrote. Perhaps the most insidious or desperate attempt to defend the right of black people to own slaves, was the statement made on the eve of the Civil War by a group of free people of color in New Orleans, offering their services to the Confederacy, in part because they were fearful for their own enslavement. That is what fear will do to you, makes you make poor choices, time to turn the fear back onto them. To do that, we all have to come together. The free colored population native of Louisiana, own slaves and they are dearly attached to their native land, they are ready to shed their blood for her defense. They have no sympathy for abolitionism; no love for the North, but they have plenty for Louisiana. They will fight for her in 1861 as they fought to defend New Orleans from the British in 1814-1815. These guys were, to put it bluntly, opportunists par excellence: As Noah Andre Trudeau and James G. Hollandsworth Jr. explain, once the war broke out, some of these same black men formed 14 companies of a militia composed of 440 men and were organized by the governor in May 1861 into the Native Guards, Louisiana, swearing to fight to defend the Confederacy. Although given no combat role, the Guards reaching a peak of 1,000 volunteers, became the first Civil War unit to appoint black officers. When New Orleans fell in late April 1862 to the Union, about 10 percent of these men, not missing a beat then formed the Native Guard/Corps d'Afrique to defend the Union. His story will not tell you that today, as the pro pagan da'ists have turned the Confederacy into some racist White supremacist group. Many members of the Black Lives Matter cults, actually campaigned to remove Confederacy statues and flags, in essence you are tearing down your own stories and people's history. This is what happens when unintelligent people follow scripts of the system, and they then replete with the massive chips on their shoulders, tear down themselves and divided everyone else. So, what do the actual numbers of black slave owners and their slaves tell us? In 1830, the year most carefully studied by Carter G. Woodson, about 13.7 percent (319,599) of the black population was free. Of these, 3,776 free Negroes owned 12,907 slaves, so each free black person at the time owned 4 slaves. But the numbers of slaves owned by black people over all was quite small by comparison. with the number owned by white people. Just 13k out of a total of 2,009,043 slaves owned in the entire United States. So why did these free black people own these slaves? It is reasonable to assume that the 42 percent of the free black slave owners who owned just one slave probably owned a family member to protect that person, as did many of the other black slave owners who owned only slightly larger numbers of slaves. Halliburton concludes, after examining the evidence, that it would be a serious mistake to automatically assume that free blacks owned their spouse or children only for benevolent purposes. In other words, most black slave owners probably owned family members to protect them, but far too many turned to slavery to exploit the labor of other black people for profit. Which reveals the greed is played out by all races if the opportunity arises. A seducement into the dark practices that has plagued us all. The only way it can be fixed is, if we all come together and focus on improving the future, not re-creating the past. Because the past is an embarrassment to us all. If we were compiling a Rogues Gallery of Black History, the following free black slaveholders would be in it: John Carruthers Stanly born a slave in Craven County, N.C., the son of an Igbo mother and her master, John Wright Stanly, became an extraordinarily successful barber and speculator in real estate in New Bern. As Loren Schweningen points out in Black Property Owners in the South, 1790-1915, by the early 1820s, Stanly owned three plantations and 163 slaves, and even hired three white overseers to manage his property! He fathered six children with a slave woman named Kitty and he eventually freed them. Stanly lost his estate when a loan for $14,962 he had co-signed with his white half-brother, John, came due. After his brother's stroke, the loan was Stanly's sole responsibility and he was unable to pay it. A case of what goes around comes around then. It matters not what color Stanly was, what matters is, he was born a slave, got free and then enslaved others. Where is the sense of moral duty in that? This proves the two sides of the same coin, new boss same as the old boss and even the lesser of two evils script. Lesser of evil is still evil, it became a dog eat dog world, harvest or be harvested, kill or be killed, all of which are duality choices, not triality. Which means you have a choice, will you repeat it or change the pattern? Antoine Dubuclet and his wife Claire Pollard owned more than 70 slaves in Iberville Parish when they married. According to Thomas Clarkin, by 1864, in the midst of the Civil War, they owned 100 slaves, worth $94,700. During Reconstruction, he became the state's first black treasurer, serving between 1868 and 1878. Andrew Durnford was a sugar planter and a physician who owned the St. Rosalie plantation, 33 miles south of New Orleans. In the late 1820s, David O. Whitten tells us, he paid $7,000 for seven male slaves, five females and two children. He traveled all the way to Virginia in the 1830s and purchased 24 more. Eventually, he would own 77 slaves. When a fellow Creole slave owner liberated 85 of his slaves and shipped them off to Liberia, Durnford commented that he couldn't do that, because self-interest is too strongly rooted in the bosom of all that breathes the American atmosphere. That is the problem with not just America, the greed and desire for the shekels takes on the most hideous forms. It creates service to self-individuals and zero community and sharing. Most of us will find the news that some black people bought and sold other black people for profit quite distressing, as well we should. But given the long history of class divisions in the black community, which Martin R. Delany as early as the 1850s described as a nation within a nation. Given the role of African elites in the long history of the Trans-Atlantic slave trade, perhaps we should not be surprised that we can find examples throughout black history of just about every sort of human behavior, from the most noble to the most heinous, that we find in any other people's history. The good news, scholars agree, is that by 1860 the number of free blacks owning slaves had markedly decreased from 1830. In fact, Loren Schweninger concludes that by the eve of the Civil War, the phenomenon of free blacks owning slaves had nearly disappeared in the Upper South, even if it had not in places such as Louisiana in the Lower South. The slave trade goes back way before America was "found" by European travelers. It was unfolding in East Africa hundreds of years before, in fact thousands of years, mainly to Egypt. What this piece reveals is, you can forget color when slavery is mentioned, because all dabbled and enslaved each other. All except one race, the Jewish, I wonder how they managed to never become slaves? Remember how they arrived in Egypt following their forced exit from the Garden of Eden? They complained they were slaves, no they were asked to work and support the community and would not do so, which led to them being thrown out of there as well. Why do they have no slaves? what is their reluctance to do any menial or manual labor? Because they think it is beneath them and only all the other races should and must serve them. That is the gist of all the slavery programs, they just made us all feel guilty about it. Israel Cohen stated it back in 1912. Whilst they harvested the people and collected the shekels. At some point people of all colors needs to wake up and smell the coffee, we were all used and abused and we were all slaves. None is worse or better than the other, as all sides played that devilish game.

EXPOSE: It is interesting this is coming out now and can be viewed as faction wars for them, disclosure for us. We covered this in FHSTOS and another example of exposure leads to more exposure. As newly declassified British files shed disturbing light on the origins and internal workings of Operation Gladio, a covert NATO plot deploying fascist terror militias across Italy. Have spies in London applied these lessons in Ukraine? Newly declassified British Foreign Office files have added disturbing details to the history of Operation Gladio. The covert operation was uncovered in 1990, when the public learned that the CIA, MI6 and NATO trained and directed an underground army of fascist paramilitary units across Europe, deploying its assets to undermine political opponents, including through false flag terror attacks. Among them was a young Silvio Berlusconi, the media oligarch who served as Italian Prime Minister in four separate governments between 1994 and 2011. Listed as a member of the P2, the secret Cold War-era cabal of political elites devoted to Gladio's aims, Berlusconi undoubtedly took some weighty secrets to the grave when he died this June 12th. What they fail to mention is, the P2 Lodge is also connected to the Vatican. It is almost impossible to believe that inconvenient truths were not weeded from Britain's documentary record on Operation Gladio prior to declassification. Nonetheless, the recently released material is highly illuminating. Covering a fraught twelve month period after the first public disclosure of Gladio's existence, the papers illustrate how London's foreign intelligence apparatus kept a keen eye on the continent as events unfolded. The papers not only shed fresh light on the conspiracy, they underline Gladio's relevance as British intelligence joins its America counterparts in contemporary plots, involving secret partisan forces from Syria to Ukraine. Except American counterparts are part of the British or Bnai B'rithish intelligences. Various passages dotted across the tranche, strongly suggest the British knew much more than they publicly admitted about egregious criminal deeds, including the attempted overthrow of an allied Italian government and the kidnap and murder of its leader. The British knew more than they publicly admitted? Bizarre statement that, because the B'Nai B'rithish where the instigators behind many of the plots. OSS before SS and CIA started in Britain remember, Five Eyes also and not to mention most of the American agencies are sister sites to British intelligence also, as our book revealed. Not to mention that Mossad is based and modeled entirely on the British SAS. A clandestine resistance network goes to work: Gladio consisted of a constellation of stay behind anti-communist partisan armies, whose ostensible mission was to fend off the Red Army in the event of Soviet invasion. All of which is a complete illusion as they were working with the KGB. These five eyes group all work for the EL-ites and most of which are or were Jewish. And at this point of Gladio, the Soviet Union was under the control by the same Jewish EL-ites. In reality, these forces committed countless violent and criminal acts, as part of a strategy of tension designed to discredit the left and justify a security state clampdown. Discredit the left? They are left and right, the hidden hand program again. As Vincenzo Vinciguerra, a Gladio operative jailed for life in 1984 for a car bombing in Italy that killed three police officers and injured two, explained: You were supposed to attack civilians, women, children, innocent people from outside the political arena. The reason was simple, force the public to turn to the state and ask for greater security. People would willingly trade their freedom for the security of being able to walk the streets, go on trains or enter a bank. This was the political logic behind the bombings. They remain unpunished because the state cannot condemn itself. Yes because the State operates under Talmudic Law, a permanent day of atonement and the complicity of those within those departments to remain silent. The scandal triggered in Western capitals by the exposure of Gladio dominated mainstream headlines for months. The European parliament responded by passing a resolution condemning the existence of a clandestine parallel intelligence and armed operations organization, which escaped all democratic controls. That may have interfered illegally in the internal political affairs of member states and have at their disposal independent arsenals and military resources, thereby jeopardizing the democratic structures of the countries in which they are operating. That was 30 odd years ago, if the European Parliament was oblivious to it, what exactly were they doing or not doing? The fact that 30 years later these types of operations are still ongoing, means the EU Parliament is complicit in it. The resolution called for independent judicial and parliamentary investigations into Gladio in every European state. But aside from inquiries in Belgium, Italy and Switzerland, nothing of substance materialized. What's more, investigators heavily redacted their findings while avoiding having them translated into English. This may help explain why the historic scandal has been largely forgotten. The role of journalists and media in that has also been overlooked, but then both are owned by the same Jewish mafia. In this context, the newly declassified documents may be one of the most valuable primary sources to date, offering new insights into the origins and internal workings of NATO's secret terror militias in Italy. Take for example an aide-mémoire prepared by Francesco Fulci, Italy's permanent representative to the UN, which was shared at a super-restricted November 6th 1990 meeting of the North Atlantic Council, NATO's principal political decision-making body, then forwarded to senior British officials at home and abroad. North Atlantic Council are a clown think tank group. Based on a note provided by Rome's then-premier Giulio Andreotti to the Head of the Italian Parliamentary Commission investigating terrorist incidents. The aide-mémoire begins by noting that following World War II, Western intelligence agencies devised unconventional means of defense, by creating in their territories a hidden network of resistance aimed at operating, in case of enemy occupation, through information gathering, sabotage, propaganda and guerrilla warfare. According to the aide-mémoire, authorities in Rome began laying the foundations of such an organization in 1951. Four years later, Italian Military Intelligence (SIFAR) and a corresponding allied service, which is a reference to the CIA, then formally agreed on the organization and the activities of a post-occupation clandestine network. The problem for the people was, it was they who were the occupier, a boogeyman unto themselves. Someone is coming to get us their intel told you, it was them all along. Ramp up the fear, get the public to react and then provide their solution they wanted at the beginning. A bloodless coup in essence, although millions have died because of their actions and lies. Gladio was formed by agents active in the territory who, by virtue of their age, sex and activities, could reasonably avoid eventual deportation and imprisonment by the foreign occupiers. Easy to manage even from a command structure outside the occupied territory at a top-secret level and hence subdivided into cells, so as to minimize any possible damage caused by defections, accidents or network penetration. The clandestine resistance network was subdivided into separate branches, covering information operations, sabotage, propaganda, radio communications, cypher, reception and evacuation of people and equipment. Each of these structures was to operate autonomously, with liaison and coordination ensured by an external base. SIFAR established a dedicated, secret section to recruit and train Gladio operatives. Meanwhile, it maintained five ready deployment guerrilla units in areas of special interest across Italy, which awaited activation on a continuous basis. Operational materials, including a wide variety of explosives and weapons, such as mortars, hand grenades, guns and knives, the ammunition were stashed in 139 secret underground caches across the country. All paid for by the oblivious public with the knowledge of the Catholic church. In April 1972, to improve security, these arsenals were exhumed and moved to offices of the Carabinieri, Rome's military police, near the original sites. Only 127 of the weapons storehouses were officially recovered. The aide-mémoire states that at least two were very likely taken away by unknown persons at the time they were buried, in October 1964. Who these operatives were and what they did with their stolen arms is left to the imagination. I think our members know exactly who those operatives were, we covered it extensively in Part 7 of FHSTOS. British involvement in the coup effort: Fulci was eventually quizzed by attendees of the North Atlantic Council summit, as to whether Gladio had deviated from its proper objectives. In other words, beyond operating strictly as a stay behind force, to be activated in the event of Soviet invasion. The Soviet invasion was the fear program that justified these private paramilitaries on foreign soil. They are mercenary groups designed to strike at the heart of all countries, with zero oversight or accountability. While he could not add to what was in the aide-mémoire, Fulci confirmed, weapons used in some terrorist incidents had come from stores established by Gladio. This reflects the fact that political violence was one of Gladio's proper objectives. A June 1959 SIFAR report unearthed by historian Daniele Ganser, confirms guerrilla action against domestic threats was hardwired into the operation from its inception. In the Italian context, this entailed systematically terrorizing the left. As the Italian Communist party surged in polls ahead of the country's 1948 election, the CIA pumped money into the coffers of the Christian Democrats and an attendant anti-communist propaganda campaign. Ah the deliverers of fake scripted news the CIA, who accuse every other country of election interference, whilst it is they who actually do it. The cloak-and-dagger effort was so successful in preventing the outbreak of a left-wing government in Rome, that Langley secretly intervened in every one of Rome's elections for at least the next 24 years. Yet the covert CIA operations were insufficient to prevent Italians from occasionally electing the wrong governments. That only applies to faction fighting, not the public changing the outcome. The 1963 general election saw the Christian Democrats prevail again, this time under the leadership of left-leaning politician Aldo Moro, who sought to construct a coalition with the Socialists and Democratic Socialists. Christian or Socialist Democrats were the SS, just saying. Over the next year, protracted disputes erupted between these parties over what form their administration would take. In the meantime, SIFAR and CIA black ops specialists such as William Harvey, known as America's James Bond, cooked up a plot to prevent that government from taking office. Known as Piano Solo, it dispatched Gladio operatives for a false flag assassination attempt on Moro that would deliberately fail. According to the plan, the kidnapper was expected to claim they were ordered to kill Moro by communists, thereby justifying the violent seizure of multiple political party and newspaper headquarters, along with the imprisonment of troublesome leftists at the Gladio chapter's secret headquarters in Sardinia. The plan was ultimately aborted, though it remained on the table throughout 1964. Moro became Prime Minister without incident and governed until June 1968. What a waste of public money these operations and organizations have created and to what purpose? Greed, control and weakness, operating like cockroaches in the dark and harvesting the people and the country.

Piano Solo fell under official investigation four years later, yet the results were not published until the public first learned of Gladio's existence. Though the findings omitted any reference to Britain's role in the planned coup, the newly released documents strongly suggest London's involvement. Italy's then-President Francesco Cossiga requested the ministry hand over details of UK stay-behind measures in 1964, according to a detailed February 1991 Foreign Office memo on recent developments in the scandal. Cossiga apparently made this enquiry as a result of a judge, whose investigations into unsolved terrorist attacks first brought Operation Gladio to light. He took the unprecedented step of demanding the president testify about the conspiracy under oath. By this point, Cossiga had admitted learning of the stay behind force while serving as a junior Defense Minister in 1966. His Foreign Office query strongly suggests British intelligence played a role in Piano Solo, and that the Italian President was well-aware of the plot. On March 16th 1978, a unit of the leftist militant Red Brigades kidnapped Moro. He was on his way to a high-level meeting where he planned to give his blessing there to a new coalition government that relied on communist support, when the kidnappers violently extracted him from his convoy. Five of Moro's bodyguards were murdered in the process. Of all the great conspiracies these think tank clowns created, perhaps one of the greatest was, the communist plot. An illusionary program along with Socialism, Democracy, Fascism and Republics all of which came under the one banner of Zionism. The false boogeyman trick, they were the boogeyman and usurpers all along. After almost two months in captivity, when it became clear the government would neither negotiate with the Red Brigades, nor release any of its jailed members in return for Moro, the kidnappers executed the former Italian Prime Minister. His bullet-riddled corpse was left in a car trunk to rot and for authorities to find. More illusion, the Red Brigade was created by them as well. Moro's murder has inspired widespread and well-founded suspicions that, Gladio operatives infiltrated the Red Brigades to push the group to commit excessively violent acts, in order to foment popular demand for a right-wing law-and-order regime. More than perhaps any other incident, his killing fulfilled the objectives of the security state's strategy of tension. Whether or not Moro was a casualty of Gladio, a declassified November 5th 1990 Foreign Office memo authored by Britain's then-ambassador to Rome, John Ashton, makes it clear that London knew much more about the case than has ever been disclosed publicly by any official source. There is circumstantial evidence one or more of Moro's kidnappers was secretly in touch with the security apparatus at the time; and that the latter deliberately neglected to follow up leads, which might have led to the kidnappers and saved Moro's life, Ashton declared. What's more, according to the British diplomat, the presidential crisis committee responsible for attempting to rescue Moro was part of the notorious P2, the subversive Masonic lodge composed of political elites loyal to Gladio. They are not elites loyal to Gladio, they are all part of the one system, the names in differing countries just provides the illusion of they are separate, they are not. How do we know that? Because their actions and plans all cross reference and they all share the same frequency. Like I have said, countries do not matter in their world, countries are pawns to play their dark games with. Countries are their playgrounds to rape, pillage, subvert and murder. These agencies are a giant harvesting mechanism, that operate under Talmudic law and permanent days of atonement. Why does no one ask, why these agencies are never accountable? Never mind to their own fake governments, but more importantly the people who have to pay for these goons? The P2 is just one of many mysterious right-wing forces striving by terrorism and street violence to provoke a repressive backlash against Italy's democratic institutions under the strategy of tension. And President Cossiga was completely unaware it had infiltrated his crisis committee. In April 1981, magistrates in Milan raided the villa of Licio Gelli, an Italian financier and self-identified fascist who founded P2. There, they uncovered a list of 2,500 members which read like a who's who of Italian politicians, bankers, spooks, financiers, industrialists and senior law enforcement and military officials. Among the cabal's most prominent members was Silvio Berlusconi. Most if not all of those people are leverage due to previous crimes, staged crimes, dodgy deals or direct blackmail. This is how that system operates a cloak of secrecy, as many are frightened of implicating themselves or taking a bullet in the head. That is why the Blueprint will take time, those in power will need to feel that the people support them and then they will come forward. These goons operate on our own fear, we keep the country safe from boogeymen, if only the people stopped believing that fairy tale and realized the security are the boogeymen. Moro's historic compromise, under which the communists made possible Andreotti's government, would be the party's final step before their own entry into government. Ashton stated that this development was anathema to P2, which was then in virtual control of Italy's security apparatus and also to many non-P2 establishment politicians, and also to the US, and sought to eliminate once and for all any possibility that the Communist Party might achieve national power. Yet more illusion these researchers need to understand, there is no Communism, it is all Zionism. The EL-ite Jews have told us that fact themselves. But the word Communism supported by a fear program ran by the same Jewish mafia, creates shekels you see and divides countries and peoples. So, the P2 run the fake security, just like the CIA in America, just like MI5 and 6 in the UK, just like the IRA in Ireland, just like the KGB in Russia, just like the Pine Gap and ASIO in Australia, just like the BND in Germany and just like Mossad in Israel. Are you seeing the pattern now? They are all one and the same. Supported by the Freemason cult with their fake knights and orders. Ashton acknowledged circumstantial evidence of US support for P2. (M) circumstantial? In reality, P2 founder Gelli was so well-connected to Washington's national security and intelligence apparatus, the CIA's Rome station had explicitly charged him with establishing an anti-communist parallel government in Rome. Again more illusion. Subsequent investigations showed how Henry Kissinger helped oversee the recruitment of 400 high-ranking Italian and NATO officers as P2 operatives in 1969. Of course he did, he is the head of Jewish Mafia. The US was so grateful for Gelli's anti-communist purge, that it made him a guest of honor at the inauguration ceremonies of US Presidents Gerald Ford, Jimmy Carter and Ronald Reagan. The US is either as dumb as a box of rocks or complicit in it, neither are good for the people. Ashton concluded his revealing note, by noting the truth about Washington's involvement in Rome's blood spattered Years of Lead would probably never be known. The full extent of Britain's involvement in terrorist attacks, government overthrows, destabilization campaigns and other heinous skullduggery under the aegis of Operation Gladio, not merely in Italy but throughout Europe, will almost certainly remain a secret as well, and by design. Not quite Mr. Ashton, it is all being exposed now and leading to their erosion, a heavy erosion at that when you understand more exposure reduces their impact. It was not until 1993 that the public learned how the US and British gifted munitions to Gladio operatives to foment bloody acts of terror across Italy. As Francesco Fulci told his NATO friends at the super-restricted meeting, Washington and London supplied the perpetrators of mass casualty attacks including the 1980 bombing of Bologna Centrale railway station, which killed 85 people and wounded over 200. Those responsible for these hideous crimes have eluded justice in almost every case. Talmudic law again is why, plus fear, which is the glue that keeps these goons operating. The solution is, we all come together and route them out, providing safe platforms for those in it to walk away and redirect the funds these mass looters have harvested, back in the public fund to improve their lives. Several of the Bologna massacre's chief suspects, including committed fascist and confirmed MI6 asset Robert Fiore, escaped to London. Britain refused to extradite him and his co-conspirators despite their convictions in absentia for violent crimes. The extensive experience British intelligence obtained in Operation Gladio raises questions, about the lessons the MI6 has applied to current covert operations in theaters of conflict. As The Grayzone revealed in November 2022, British military and intelligence veterans have trained and sponsored a secret partisan terror army in eastern Ukraine, to carry out acts of sabotage in Crimea and other majority-Russian areas. The plan called for the training of cells of ideologically dedicated Ukrainians to shoot, move, communicate, survive. Yes, Ukraine is the same script different country, against the so-called illusionary boogeyman Russia. Because in their tiny minds they are Communists (M) (J) (D) and so called intelligent people fall for it every time. I challenge every agency person in America to come and speak to us and show us actual and factual evidence of Russia being a threat. We will listen, but expect that you will listen to the other side of the narrative and come to a fair conclusion. This repeat bs has ran its course, its doomed and all those within those organizations too. They will replace you with machines eventually, and generally when agents have reached their use, you know what happens next. Don't be so arrogant to think it will not happen to you, speak up now before it is too late for you.

MYSTERY SECTION: This was a short piece that plays into some of the FHSTOS Plus 21 show and is describing those who were all connected at some point along the way with the URS and much further back into Lyra. I have extended it into a much longer and deeper piece, that will require much pondering for you all in these crucial times. This will be the last show for 3 weeks, due myself and others needing time to bond, recoup and spreading the message. The next show will be September 28th. I would suggest to take the time to listen again to the shows mentioned in this piece, plus find the related transcripts to connect them all together. Following the fall of the Founder races and the descent into the dark by the Feline and Lizard races, the white race of Lyra was scattered all over the Universe. Many different constellations housed what we know as the White Race today, with its many varying genetics gained along the way, due to tampering of the highest order. The Koshey's war against the White Race we have documented for the last 105K years within the FHSTOS series. But the reality is, it goes back much further than this, as we covered in the Cosmic Genetics series. We spoke about the Asgard's in the Santies and how there were several of them dotted around mainly the Northern Hemisphere, in particular the Irian one. This piece taps into more of the World of Prav and the homes of the gods. Having studied this a lot and also being familiar with many of the names, then and now. It should be pointed out that the Cat holic church and the Draco overlaid the Greek Gods with their saints program. And so the story of the Greek gods, like the Norse gods and the URS gods all became a distortion. Now some of the names mentioned in this piece did not actually cover themselves in glory too much either and I will point out somethings that I am aware of within this piece.

Living on the extradimensional world called Gladsheim, an alternate Earth with a different rule, was the home to all Earth's gods. That is describing the World of Prav. Their kingdom is Panhellas at Olympus. Zeus has evolved into Jupiter and has become a higher functionary, along with his wife Hera who has become Juno. My issue with that is, males are not supposed to become planetary beings, and so Zeus turning into Jupiter in the cosmic order, upset the balance. Now my personal opinion and I am aware this is being looked at on a higher level is, the old system is flawed and needs a correction. In every solar system there resides one male being as the solar Logos with no female solar counterpart. The females became the planetary mother for each planet within a solar system. The planetary mother never had a counterpart either, except the main planet in each solar system. This creates major imbalance in my opinion, it also creates envy amongst the males as there is only one male role. That is a flaw and not conducive to harmony and balance. It looks and feels like a hierarchical system and that has never worked well. In overview the male has what resembles a harem of women, 1 man to 7-12 females as the planetary mother. Becoming a solar being or planetary mother is the ultimate in the next stage after having overcome the planetary soul development level and cosmic soul development level, at which point you become a god. Not the god as some mistreated that position and began to play Source itself, which is why so many of them fell. Midgard our own planet was the planetary mother who became in union with the solar Logos. But many females fell or abandoned their planet due to the wars and the hostile takeover of solar systems by the dark forces. Abandoning a planet as it's mother is considered the worst crime as a planetary being, because you abandoned the children. The children are all the inhabitants of that world. The plan put forward is, we need a male and female Solar Logos and a male and female planetary beings on each planet, within the solar system. That way everything is in balance, there are more roles for everyone, less competition and seducement from the dark. Plus an end to the illusionary system of patriarchy and matriarchy, because I can tell you now, both when ruling were as bad as each other. It is the duality nonsense again. And they like us forgot the wisdom teachings and fell spectacularly.

With Zeus moved on Athena now rules in his place, to my understanding of this, Athena no longer rules due to her own fall from grace. She became dictatorial and was dancing in the dark with her abilities of destroy first ask questions later. A light ruler cannot play by those rules, defend only is the motto and way. Her council is said to be her siblings Apollo, Artemis, Hercules, Mercury, Venus, Triton, her nephews Eros and Thanatos and her uncles Hades and Vulcan. Her cousin Persephone sits on the council as well, Ares is chained in Tartarus and his role has been taken by Zeus' ascended last son Megas Alexandros, now known as Mars. Ares was one of the light angelics but he also fell and was part of a catastrophic Johns Hopkins level of math calculation that split and destroyed a whole planet and its people. The story matches Tiamat, Dea, Selene as well as the moons destroyed here twice, where light forces overused weaponry to destroy hostile moons here, but ultimately ended up destroying Midgard twice. This brought the end for Da Arya and the original Atlantis or Antlantis as we have found from the Santies. Poseidon is still around but in a largely advisory role, having given his seat to his son Triton. The other deities, Calypso, Pan, Dimeter, Thetis and ascended new gods like Achilles act as lieutenants and seconds. In Norse mythology, Gláðsheimr meaning in Old Norse a bright home is a realm in Asgard where Odin's hall of Valhalla is located according to Grímnismál. Snorri states in Gylfaginning that Gláðsheimr is a meeting hall containing thirteen high seats, where the male Æsir hold council, located in Iðavöllr in Asgard, near the hall of Vingólf where the Ásynjur goddesses gathered. That is another example of the twelve plus one. In Norse mythology, the great hall of the gods in the heavenly realm of Asgard. It was erected soon after the building of Asgard was completed. At that time the chief of the gods, Odin, established rulers to decide the destinies of men. In the center of Asgard was a place called Idavoll. The first act of the rulers was to build a temple at that spot for all their thrones to stand in: twelve thrones in addition to the throne of Odin. Twelve plus one again, now you know why the wordsmiths created fear around the number 13, saying it is a curse and bad luck. It was never our curse or bad luck, but theirs. They called this structure Gladsheim. According to the Prose or younger Edda, remember Edda stemmed from the word Veda, both of which means knowledge. This building is the best that was built on Earth and the biggest, it was made of gold, both inside and out. The Draco copied their temples in that manner as well, they tend to build the ziggurat versions of pyramid in either gold or liquid gold covering the stone. The Draco homeworld's main temple is or rather was a pure gold ziggurat, except it was destroyed sometime in the last decade after being attacked and they are still rebuilding it. A separate hall called Vingolf was built for the sanctuary of the goddesses. Ysgard: The name of this layer was also the name of the confederation of godly domains known as Asgard, home of the Norse pantheon or Ysgard in the Norse tongue. Each realm was the size of a Prime plane empire and they were drawn together by the proximity of Yggdrasil the World Ash. By world Ash they mean the tree not the burnt remains, although many trees, planets and beings were turned to ash by the dark forces. Perhaps that is why they called their ultimate destruction weapon Fash, or F Ash? Like Mount Olympus, Yggdrasil was a multiplanar conduit connecting Gladsheim directly to Niflheim in Hades and Alternate Prime Material Planes without passing through the Astral Plane, much like the World Tree in the World Tree cosmology. Without passing through the Astral realm will pique much interest. Think of it in terms of an elevator not connected to the main building. No astral dancing and harvesting games, this is what soul development brings you. The usual color pools connecting Asgard to the Astral Plane existed but were little used. Portals in the guise of wells connected this layer to the neighboring planes of Arborea, Limbo and Concordant Opposition. In addition to Yggdrasil, the Norse gods controlled and carefully guarded a portal directly to the Prime plane where they were the strongest, called the Bifrost or the rainbow bridge. Other known realms adjacent to Asgard were Vanaheim home of the vanir, Alfheim or fairyland, known for its chaotic elven spirits, indeed and Jotenheim home of the giants. The Prime Material plane was the plane in which Toril and the surrounding cosmos existed. The phrase "Prime Material plane," or simply the "Prime," was generally used by beings from other planes in the multiverse most notably Sigil, and "prime" was used by the same beings to refer to the inhabitants of the Material Plane. The Prime is boundless worlds of that plane have an infinite variety, as do the planes. Suffice it to say they are the birth of the Outer Planes, the children of the Inner, and they hold limitless potential within their boundaries. Hence the reference in the series Foundation of the Outer Worlds. The spirit Asonje: In the Great Wheel cosmology, the Prime Material plane consisted of an infinite expanse filled with a fluid known as phlogiston, within which floated immense crystal spheres, each enclosing an entire system of one or more worlds. Specific conditions varied greatly from one crystal sphere to another, but they were all considered to be part of the same plane. That is describing another prime or primary matter, which are the components for life or specific life forms. The mostly empty space contained inside the crystal spheres, known as wildspace, as well as all the worlds that existed within each sphere, were connected to the border of the Ethereal plane. It was unclear whether the phlogiston was also connected. Phlogiston is a fire-like element and was a Greek name phlogistón meaning burning up, from phlóx meaning flame. Phlogiston in essence then is like the keeper of the flame. The Ethereal plane served as a conduit between the Prime and the Inner Planes. The Prime Material plane was also connected to the Astral Plane, which served as a conduit to the Outer Planes. There was no known direct way to travel between the Inner and the Outer Planes, or between the Astral and the Ethereal, that did not pass through the Material Plane first. Similarly, the Prime was the only plane in which spells that required a connection to the Ethereal or the Astral both worked. Being the only plane that intersected both the Ethereal and the Astral, the Prime Material plane occupied an important position as a crossroads of the multiverse and all other planes were defined in relation to the Prime. A few early versions of the Great Wheel cosmology, as well as the World Tree cosmology, considered that there was an infinite number of material planes, among them Toril's Material Plane, Oerth's material plane, Krynn's material plane and the universe in which Earth was located. The names don't matter, the frequency of those planes will be recognized by the soul/spirit upon dream time travels. In the World Tree cosmology, Toril's Material Plane was the main hub that connected all the planes of the cosmology. For that reason, travel between planes was almost exclusively done via passing through the Material Plane first. Portals were rumored to exist that connected Toril to other material planes, using conduits that passed through the Plane of Shadow. In the World Axis cosmology, the Material Plane, more usually called the mortal world, existed between the two opposing fundamental planes: the Astral Plane, commonly called the Astral Sea and the Elemental Chaos. So much can be learned from Sci-Fi games, people think they are all manufactured within someone's computer coding skills. But when you realize who runs the computer coding games, then more clarity is then revealed. Reading or listening to that statement with the caveat, you cannot imagine something that doesn't exist, then reveals deeper layers to it. So, is it direct memory, uploaded consciousness, transferred or collective consciousness or simply past life recalls? Once that is decoded then a restoration event unfolds to restore the balance, nature and the original with improvements. Prime means the first, the original or first in order of time. The replacement prime became prime facie, the first sight, the first appearance in other words an image, prime means first facie means face. But an image is but a copy and was not the prime or primary. Prime later on became the first hour of the day 6am or the dawn. Prime the sense of the beginning of a period or course of events. Prime that which is best in quality, highest or most perfect state of anything. Prime then attached itself to numbers and became the prime numbers. Prime or the prime radiant dictates the future via numbers, particularly excluding 1's and 0's as the only base numbers. That is the metatronic coding, binary and duality choices, adding numbers to the system of 2 through 9 brings in the organic components again. With the 9 playing a key role, the open spiral of progression, not the closed loops of the 8. Why is the prime radiant? It shines the light which is code and stimulates genetic memory. I will repeat each line of a passage of this piece and add some more understanding and clarity. The Prime Material plane was also connected to the Astral Plane, which served as a conduit to the Outer Planes. That was due to the Astral plane becoming in essence a holographic trap, to serve dark forces and their minions. There was no known direct way to travel between the Inner and the Outer Planes, or between the Astral and the Ethereal, that did not pass through the Material Plane first. There was a direct way before they installed their Time Matrix Merkaba. But there was a path on the Material plane between the Astral and Etheric, but only for our type of human. Our spirit goes out through both and must return through both, causing many who got trapped between Astral, Etheric and Material planes to die in their sleep. It means the spirit was trapped and being chomped on by the contracted dark forces Astral beings, once it didn't make it back into the vessel, the vessel dies. Similarly, the Prime was the only plane in which spells that required a connection to the Ethereal or the Astral both worked. Not true, the spells were the dark forces incantations and word magic tricks again, the fact it required spells means it was overlaid by the dark forces. Our type of human once developed has an elevator as such to sail through the planes and back to the vessel. That "elevator" was outside of time, but those trapped on the Astral level are stuck in time and so it became ti(e) me to time. Being the only plane that intersected both the Ethereal and the Astral, the Prime Material plane occupied an important position as a crossroads of the multiverse and all other planes were defined in relation to the Prime. Because the Prime is the Universal tree, like a honeycomb station to enter in and out of each universe, unless you have the skillsets to go through the membrane barrier to each Universe. The original black holes were gateways into the next Universe, the other side of it is the white hole. Why is it a white hole, because it radiates with light coming out of the darkness. If only scientists understood that. The body, the planet and the sun all contain the torus or the egg timer shape I spoke of many years back. The egg timer is a subtle reminder we were playing in the sands of time, once it reaches the bottom they reverse it and it all starts again, just like a loop or the new age miscreation symbol, the mobius. The technology versions of black holes are cheat gateways that devour everything, a giant harvesting machine. Thankfully the main one in this sector was deleted in 2019. In the World Tree cosmology, Toril's Material Plane was the main hub that connected all the planes of the cosmology. For that reason, travel between planes was almost exclusively done via passing through the Material Plane first. As above so below, perhaps as a reminder of what you were and how to sustain oneself in the higher realms. Portals were rumored to exist that connected Toril to other material planes, using conduits that passed through the Plane of Shadow. That is an interesting line, but not sure whether those portals were intelligent design or technology based. You do realize in relation to portals it is as above so below, as within so without? You are the portal; you are the star gate it is encoded within you. Star gate or gate of the star? Stating the sun is the gate and the portal. Why is it called a portal? It is connected to water again is it not, the port or the station between the water worlds, the firmament and the Time River, al means god. So, it is the gateway of those who reach higher soul development and become the gods. Not the god, that is ego and many fell to that dark forces trick, a god with maximum personal responsibility in service to others. The plane of the Shadow I suspect is the void, but can also be a reflection of you as a person or being, integrate your shadow and your light shines in the void and then returns to the light. The portal of the sun will contain a brief plane of shadow as well, it is the void or the singularity. For those that can safely look at the sun at dusk or dawn, you may see the black dot in the middle, that is it. That is the Arago we covered in a show related to the Da Vinci code piece and also trip. In the World Axis cosmology, the Material Plane, more usually called the mortal world, existed between the two opposing fundamental planes: the Astral Plane, commonly called the Astral Sea and the Elemental Chaos. That supports the statement put out in earlier shows, the two Astral's, the real and the created one like an overlay for the harvesting entities. The Astral Sea is interesting in many aspects, the firmament springs to mind, but also recently mentioned of the Time River. I mentioned in the last Blueprint show about us being mainly water and we can make within us, angry oceans or calm rivers that flow. The Astral Sea is the calm waters and the Elemental chaos the choppy waters. Now do you understand the terms of the flow, plus the riding or skimming the waves? Elemental Chaos also describes as above so below, Elemental weather plays a part in changing the landscape here, particularly in America. Why does America have the worst weather patterns? yes we can refer to interference, but also due to the elemental chaos of the minds and actions of the people. The two are connected and related, I bet some of you never thought that you could influence the weather did you? So, with that understanding, how about pondering of how you can not only change the weather for the better, but also many other things as well? The Astral is where most people reside on this planet, awaiting the gifts of the mental planes, but stuck there because they won't change or take responsibility for themselves. Step outside of the 3D thinking limitation mode and then you will not only see, but experience wonders as well. The fears of the 3D must be left behind and higher thinking memory, code and recall is attained.

ENDING PIECE: The song I have played and also covered in the show called Children of the Sea, should have a whole deeper meaning as well now. Were lost children of the sea the song says, add in the Dunkirk piece of emerging out of the sea onto the land and a deeper picture of understanding should kick in. Humanity in the ocean was an emergency, the key is to emerge and "see". What do you see? What do you not see? It has all been there and said, once you are ready to connect the dots. The river flow with no dams allows you to reach your next journey of the discovery, the next station, portal or gateway. Each journey of discovery is reconnecting parts of you, because we were placed or came here to fix the Humpty Dumpty within us all. And we, not others are responsible for fixing it, you have to fix you, you have to integrate you, you have to embrace you and you have to wonder or marvel at you. To then be able to reach for the stars, the question then becomes which ones? When the sun replaces the overlay path of the kundalini, literally and figuratively, the path to enlightenment is truly underway. But when is that some will say, thinking of the future scenario, but did you consider whether it had already unfolded? No, you always leap to the future because you didn't pay attention or define the past, present or the future. Think vertical timeline events, the rise not the fall. Maybe the events you seek on future mode, may well have unfolded in your past, you just didn't "see". Destiny awaits you, which destiny you may all ask, that is of your choosing. There is no future, unless you decide your path, deciding your path is what creates your future. You are the future, the now and the past, how will you write or create your story? Have you defined it? Oh dear, you have asked that several times Thomas, indeed, but did you listen? You ask me how your life should go, I am not your life choice maker or the authority on you, that is just laziness on your part, think different. A lazy mind is a dagger to your heart/soul package. It cuts like a knife and death by a thousand cuts awaits you. Have you asked yourself, why you would self-harm yourself to and on that level? Why would you cut your own soul? Denying love and embracing fear is cutting your own soul. Who needs enemies or harvesting Astral critters when you do much so damage the self? If only there was an app for karma, soul development and self-harming, oh how things would change then? But would they? With people running Stockholm Syndromes and victimhood programs on themselves. I said some time back those who have done their shadow and inner work will stand out, that is becoming crystal clear now. What it says is, you have not understood what is life? Or what is love? Or what is value and what is Human. Funny that, as I seem to remember stating it all 4 years ago, but I ask again, did you listen? The ending lines to the song Children of the Sea contains these words, all of which defines you and where you are at. Oh, they say that it's over, yeah and it just had to be Oh, they say that it's over, poor lost children of the sea, yeah. That is the dark forces persuasion games, based solely upon fear. Those with inner strength will see through the illusion of it all. Look out, the sky is falling down Look out, the world is spinning 'round and 'round and 'round Look out, the sun is going black, black Look out, it's never, never, never coming back Look out. To the 3D thinker and fear-based person that is a warning of dire consequences those last few lines. Because you have immersed yourself into the scene, essentially you have left yourself behind because you never went on your own journey of discovery. You sat like the fake AI god inside the cloud immersing yourself into the dark forces 2D creation laid out for you. You forgot that you were not the computer, you are the programmer of it and essentially the god of that computer. You forgot to program into it, the you, the light and the progress. You wouldn't change because of fear and the fear-based scenario you craved in your head, has now played out at that point. You created for yourself a world of pain, suffering, fear and illusion, no one else is to blame, because you had the choice to change that landscape. You are the programmer of your own reality. Oh, they say that it's over, yeah and it just had to be, you accepted your own fate provided to you by the dark forces, you, yes you! Thinking outside of the box, outside of 3D and the Time Matrix and then you will see a completely different scenario and future of your own making. The sky will have the appearance of falling down for those who immerse, the sky is not falling down for the observer on a journey of discovery. Perhaps you didn't define which sky? The world is spinning round and round, you are spinning around the black hole, to the observer who is traveling you will see the same but it is not happening to you, only those that failed to chart their own path. The sun is going black, all of which suits the disciples of the Black Sun, but wait until they find out they were duped as well. To the observer the sun still shines because you are riding with it, because you and the sun are one. The sun is never coming back for the immersed people, they will get a new sun of their own making, one that has reduced light, until they learn to increase the light of themselves. They themselves dimmed their and that light only, they have to learn and to learn requires deep change from within and without. Yes, that sun, the Yarila Sun is not returning to that time/space, it is not conducive to it and our development. It has departed upon its own journey of discovery, enlightenment and wonder. Carrying with it the powers of the light, the disciples of the light and the will and desire to progress back to the higher realms. Where new wonders awaits, new challenges, new learning, new discoveries, all of which is encoded within your own vessel/spirit package. What will you create? What will you manifest now has or should have a whole deeper meaning now as well. A spark of the creator being creative or a spark of the black sun dying on the inside all the while. Now do you understand when I say, everything you ever wanted is on the other side of fear? With fear you bring illusion, stagnation and the kundalini serpent path. With love you have everything, the light, the sun and all the stars in the sky. When you have all picked your brains off of the floor with these ending pieces, please choose wisely your next chartered path, because in many ways the journey has already begun. At which station will you jump on board? Because those left standing have to witness the horror and turn out the light. They threw away the key and locked the door. To welcome and say, hello darkness my old friend. Or you can beam your light brighter within its prime radiance, creating a new foundation, path and journey. Unless you stop believing.
