NEWS:

Wishing all American's a happy thanksgiving day, please give thanks for what you have and not what you haven't. A time for reflection not deflection, a time to create the future not loop into the past, a time for the heart not the dueling mind.

More trouble on the immigrant front, as several gangs are running rampant in many of the States now. This has been a deliberate policy in America and Europe, to flood those countries with criminals who were deliberately let out of prison in their home countries to then cause mayhem in America and Europe. These "immigrants" are all Manchurian Candidates. Most of them should never have been let out of prison, serial killers, pedophiles, traffickers and human slave, sexual and organ trading amongst them.

A vicious Venezuelan prison gang Tren de Aragua has expanded its territory to at least 16 US states, an area that includes half of America's population. Homeland Security officials last week were warned in an internal department intelligence memo about TdA's growing presence across the country, most recently in Washington, DC, Virginia, Montana and Wyoming. The gang already has footholds in California, Colorado, Florida, Georgia, Illinois, Louisiana, Nevada, New Jersey, New York, North Carolina, Tennessee, Texas and Wisconsin, according to the memo and previous reporting by The Post. This is to undermine the country, create fear, create gang wars and violence, loot local businesses and generally cause mayhem. It is alright the Homeland Security stating they are a problem, when they and other agencies were involved in allowing them through our borders. It should also be remembered as a Democrat policy, as when Obama was in office, he was inviting Farq Guerrillas, MS13 and other Mexican gangs in to cause mayhem. The Farq guerrillas and MS13 were sent by Obama and the fake Hillary Clinton along with Pelosi to delete myself and the Trustee on a number of occasions. Eric Holder another Democrat supplied Mexican gangs with guns and ammunition you will remember. And let us not forget the first military style gang that killed initially white people and where a military security team for the Democrats, the Ku Klux Klan.

Britain is provoking Vladimir Putin by allowing Storm Shadow missiles to be fired into Russian sovereign territory for the first time. This was only possible with American permission, because these missiles depend on US targeting systems. The BBC said Britain is right, along with the US, to free Ukraine's hands to attack Russia on its own soil, even though it should have been done years earlier in the war and is now probably much too little, much too late. Clearly that is an MI6 report of rank stupidity.

It beggars belief, however, that on the very same day that around 12 Storm Shadows hit a Russian military headquarters in Kursk, the British Defense Secretary announced more cash-saving cuts to the UK's own Armed Forces, including critically important ships, helicopters and drones. The British Government claims that these capabilities are being retired to make room for new and improved systems. There is no new and improved systems, they gave it all to NATO and now the UK is a sitting duck. With the threat to Europe rising, the British Defense Secretary seems only to promise even more cuts to come: These will not be the last difficult decisions I will have to make, to fix the defense inheritance that we were left with. Yes courtesy of siding with NATO. What kind of message is this sending to the West's enemies and potential enemies? A lack of resolve, a lack of commitment to the UK's own defenses and an invitation to aggression.

Equally important is the message it sends to Britain's allies, particularly the United States. Since the presidential election earlier this month, European leaders have been wringing their hands over what a second Trump term might mean for their defenses. Trump is considering pulling out of NATO like we advised him in 2016-2020. We also need to pull out of the UN, WEF, WHO, Atlantic Council, WTO and the trans Pacific and Trans-Atlantic trade. In fact all global agreements, organizations and trades.

Next will be a number of reports of how Donald Trump and team are going to change the whole landscape of America. Many of them are positive, but is it for the reasons we revealed in our Blueprint? Donald Trump is expected to nominate veteran Wall Street financier Howard Lutnick to lead the Commerce Department, according to people familiar with the matter, elevating one of the financial world's most vocal supporters of the president-elect to a crucial position overseeing the incoming administration's economic agenda. Lutnick, chief executive of the financial-services firm Cantor Fitzgerald, in recent months has become a close Trump ally and had been a top contender to lead the Treasury Department. Lutnik is born in and born to.

Vivek Ramaswamy said to expect the abolishment of entire federal agencies as part of a sweeping restructure envisioned by DOGE. Ramaswamy was last week named joint leader of the Department of Government Efficiency by President-elect Donald Trump. Its other leader is Elon Musk. On Sunday morning, Ramaswamy appeared on Fox News and was asked about DOGE's plans for the future of federal agencies. He gave few specifics but was bullish on the scope of change to come.

The Trump transition team is compiling a list of senior current and former U.S. military officers who were directly involved in the withdrawal from Afghanistan and exploring whether they could be court-martialed for their involvement, according to a U.S. official and a person familiar with the plan. Officials working on the transition are considering creating a commission to investigate the 2021 withdrawal from Afghanistan, including gathering information about who was directly involved in the decision-making for the military, how it was carried out, and whether the military leaders could be eligible for charges as serious as treason, the U.S. official and person with knowledge of the plan said.

Across hours of podcast and television interviews, Army veteran and Fox News host Pete Hegseth has articulated his plan for a frontal assault to reform the Department of Defense from the top down, including by purging woke generals, limiting women from some combat roles, eliminating diversity goals and utilizing the real threat of violence to reassert the United States as a global power. As President-elect Donald Trump's nominee for the Secretary of Defense, Hegseth, could have the chance to implement that vision, commanding the country's more than a million active duty soldiers. An infantry officer in the U.S. Army National Guard, Hegseth deployed to Guantanamo Bay, Iraq and Afghanistan before leaving the service with the rank of major, according to military records. Hegseth has worked for Fox News since 2014, where he co-hosts Fox & Friends Weekend. Fox news as we have found out is an arm of the Rome church cult. Once a critic of Trump's foreign policy and military stances during Trump's 2016 campaign, Hegseth grew to become one of Trump's fiercest on-air defenders. So why did he get picked then? Because Hegseth has a tattoo called the Jerusalem cross, a tribute to the Jewish knights that raped and plundered many towns and cities under the banner of the Rome Church, Christendom and chivalry, when in essence they were pirates on the land or highway robbers along the Silk Roads.

Mike Huckabee has been appointed by Trump to be the US Ambassador to Israel. So what is Huckabee's stance? Huckabee is a strong supporter of Israel, opposing Palestinian statehood and rejecting Palestinian identity. Huckabee has also condoned West Bank settlements which are illegal under international law. In 2008, Huckabee argued that there is no such thing as a Palestinian. In 2017, at an event in the West Bank, he stated: There is no such thing as a West Bank, it's Judea and Samaria. There's no such thing as a settlement. They're communities. They're neighborhoods. They're cities. There's no such thing as an occupation.

The border was on the ballot, and it won, along with President-elect Donald Trump. Now sanctuary cities are scaling back on their migrant shelter systems as proponents of illegal immigration, brace for what Trump and his incoming border czar Tom Homan have vowed will be a mass deportation operation. New York City officials have already announced closures of multiple shelters, where they had housed hundreds of migrants, and are expected to scale back more. The influx of illegals coincided with spikes in robberies and shoplifting in the Big Apple that the NYPD called a wave of migrant crime. Like I said earlier these are not migrants, they are agent provocateurs sent in to cause trouble, damage and disruption. According to the New York Post, the city's wave of new migrant arrivals has significantly slowed and more than 170,000 migrants already in the shelter system have since moved on. City taxpayers were footing a $352 nightly bill per migrant, according to the paper, with just $130 of that going to the hotels for housing. The rest went to costs like social services, food and cleaning, and also back pockets as we revealed in an earlier show. On November 2022, Homan launched a border-focused project called Defend the Border and Save Lives in collaboration with The United West, who state this on their website.

HAMAS collaborators and Marxist Revolutionaries joined together to disrupt, disable and destroy the national security, cultural adhesion and personal safety of all Americans. These enemies of the state are initially targeting Jews and Christians, using Israel's war on Hamas as cover for political warfare against the United States of America. Which is not true, that they are targeting Jews. See how they wrap Jews and Christians together, when Jews do not like Christians at all and are attacking them in the Holy Land. Christians are a convenient tool and program to deflect from the Jewish hegemony of the planet. This is a plot to merge the Jews and Christians against the Muslims, when everyone should know by now that Jews hardly ever fight, they use white nations to do that. Also in collaboration are the Southern Poverty Law Center, designated anti-Muslim hate group. The Southern Poverty group are a Jewish front for Mossad, their goal is Israel only they are not interested in Americans or America.

The FBI should be closed down and 1.5 million government workers sacked under Donald Trump's new cost-cutting department. That is the view of Vivek Ramaswamy, who has been appointed to lead it alongside the world's richest man, Elon Musk. Mr. Ramaswamy, whose catchphrase has become shut it down! said on the campaign trail, that he also wants a crusade against big government at the Department of Education, the Internal Revenue Service (IRS) and foreign aid to Ukraine, Israel and Taiwan. His views, expressed as a loyal surrogate for Mr. Trump in the run up to the election, may be at the extreme end of what is possible at the new Department of Government Efficiency, or DOGE. Indeed, shutting down an entire federal agency would likely require congressional approval. But Mr. Ramaswamy will at least now have the power to shape the priorities of the new department, which has been built from scratch to cut red tape and bureaucracy in as little as two years. The new agency will operate outside of government and provide recommendations to the White House on how to slash regulation and cut huge chunks from the almost $7 trillion federal budget. It was the brainchild of Mr. Musk, the tech billionaire who has become one of Mr. Trump's closest advisers, who had been pitching the idea of a cost-cutting commission on the campaign trail. Brainchild of Musk? Sounds like our Blueprint to me and given both Musk and Ramaswamy received the book, one has to ponder.

Further Blueprint style reports this time from Elon Musk. He appeared to support a call to end the Federal Reserve Bank in the United States after reposting a tweet from Utah Senator Mike Lee, who called for greater executive oversight over monetary policy and abolishing the central bank. Lee argued that Federal Reserve chairman Jerome Powell's recent assertion that he would not resign from his post, even if asked to by incoming President Donald Trump, represented an out-of-control system. Lee wrote via his social media account: The Executive Branch should be under the direction of the president. That's how the Constitution was designed. The Federal Reserve is one of many examples of how we've deviated from the Constitution, in that regard. Yet another reason why we should end the Fed. Lee's call to abolish the Federal Reserve Banking System in the United States represents a growing sentiment among sound money advocates and Bitcoin (BTC) maximalists, who argue that centrally managed fiat currencies are prone to monetary inflation and currency devaluation. Yet Bitcoin has gone from low one hundreds to one hundred thousand for the same fake coin, is that not super hyperinflationary? Interesting stuff, Senator Mike Lee like Musk was sent our Blueprint.

Already issues have arisen about Trump's pick for his cabinet. As Matt Gaetz, Donald Trump's pick for attorney general, has withdrawn from consideration for the role. Gaetz is the subject of a House Ethics Committee report, which was sparked by allegations against the former congressman of sexual misconduct, including sex with a minor and illicit drug use. It doesn't end there though. A police report has revealed new details about an alleged sexual assault encounter in 2017 between a woman and Pete Hegseth, the man nominated by US President-elect Donald Trump to serve as the next defense secretary. The woman said that Hegseth, who was then a Fox News host, took her phone and blocked the door to a hotel room while at a Republican conference in California, according to the report. Appears too many politicians have their brains in their underpants.

In May, Mr. Karim Khan said there were reasonable grounds to believe that Israeli Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu and then-defense minister Yoav Gallant, and Hamas leaders Yahya Sinwar, Mohammed Deif and Ismail Haniyeh bore criminal responsibility for war crimes and crimes against humanity from the day of Hamas's attack on Israel on 7 October onwards. Sinwar, Deif and Haniyeh have all since been killed by Israel. What happened next after criticizing Israel? well someone then filed a claim against Mr. Khan. The International Criminal Court has announced an external investigation into accusations of sexual misconduct against its chief prosecutor. Karim Khan said he would engage in the process and continue in his role while the investigation was ongoing. He denies the allegations. Classic Mossad blackmailing behavior all designed to keep people in check and to not allow people to do their jobs.

Netanyahu trying to change the laws to prevent an inquiry into the events of October 7th. We have already revealed he knew in advance and is trying to delete all phone records. He is up in court on fraud and corruption charges this week also. Maybe the IDF will take him out? Given he went against their wishes for a ceasefire.

News this week came through about a ceasefire between Israel and Lebanon and people are rejoicing. My personal opinion is this is a real bad mistake. The cornered, trapped and losing snake known as Israel are on the ropes on many levels. This will allow them to restock weaponry, soldiers and assess their plans and they will come back and strike again once they have regrouped. The same applies in Ukraine, the Israeli junta, NATO and UK/US Alliance are also on the ropes on many levels, talk of ceasefire with them is again a real bad mistake should it unfold. My opinion is, the head of the snake that is Israel has to be cut off altogether to bring peace to our planet, half measures will not cut it. They are notorious for going back on their agreements, just like the Draco, funny that!. And like the reptile Draco beings, the only way to remove them totally is to cut off the head.

This is an interesting news piece and plays into the Santies and the Vedas, plus FHSTOS and the Blueprint. Vladimir Putin has signed a controversial law making it an offence to advocate for child-free lifestyles, or spreading child-free propaganda as it is known in Russia, according to a document published by the official Russian legal portal on Saturday. The legislation amended six existing laws prohibiting the promotion of pedophilia, LGBT and gender reassignment, to include a ban on the dissemination of destructive content that promotes the deliberate refusal to have children. Individuals spreading child-free propaganda in broadcast media or online will now face fines of up to 400,000 rubles ($3750), while companies can be fined as much as 5 million rubles ($48,000) for the same offence, and foreign citizens will face deportation. Some may not like those measures but I am all for it. For too long the anti-humanity crew and their various agenda programs has hampered the family and the desire for children. It is completely eroding the mother role and so this goes some way to returning to, the traditional man and woman roles. The bill, introduced to the State Duma, the lower house of parliament, in late September, was adopted by the chamber on 12 November and approved by the Federation Council, the upper house, on Wednesday.

Only one senator, Lyudmila Narusova, voted against the bill, while senator Andrey Klishas, who voted in favor of the bill, nevertheless expressed concerns about the potentially inconsistent enforcement of the legislation. It will come as no surprise that Lyudmila Narusova has Jewish parentage. Senate speaker Valentina Matviyenko admitted during the hearing on Wednesday, that concerns have been raised about the interpretation of the new norms, adding that it was necessary to ensure there was no distortion of the basic underlying meanings of the law. The law should in no way infringe on the right of every adult Russian to make a responsible decision and should in no way discriminate against a family, that cannot have children or doesn't want to have children, which Matviyenko said was their right. That is correct, but they should not be repeatedly swayed by woke anti-humanity programs telling it is a sin to have children and the we are not baby slaves rhetoric.

Nevertheless, the law does not provide clear examples of child-free propaganda, only clarifying that those living child-free lifestyles in religious communities will be exempt from prosecution. The legislation caused some online communities to close even before it was signed into law. In late October, Maternal Bliss, a VK community with nearly 150,000 subscribers where mothers anonymously spoke about the challenges of motherhood, removed all its posts to avoid being charged under the new law. Lawyer Daryana Gryaznova told independent news outlet Takiye Dela in October that the child-free propaganda law infringed on a whole host of women's rights, including freedom of speech and reproductive freedom. We will simply come to the point where it will be impossible to have an honest and open conversation about motherhood, about women's reproductive rights, she cautioned. Well touche, because you cannot have a discussion about a man and woman anymore either due to the ridiculous gender related issues and programs. These people didn't think about that, whilst they were free to promote their woke agendas. One hopes at some point, sanity will prevail.

Covid revelations in Holland revealed as last week, the Minister of Health, Welfare and Sport explained that the Corona policy was commissioned by the Dutch National Coordinator for Counterterrorism and Security (NCTV) and NATO. So it was a military operation that had nothing to do with healthcare. The exchange was between the Dutch Minister of Health, Fleur Agema and Politician Ms. Paulusma. Yet more conformation of NATO and the US and other Military's operating this fraud upon the people.

Further reports of Covid corruption now surfacing at a regular intervals and the authorities are in total panic now. It is encouraging to see so many speaking up or out and it is something all must learn if we are to end this tyranny. An anti-corruption charity says it has identified significant concerns in contracts worth over £15.3bn awarded by the Conservative government during the Covid pandemic, equivalent to one in every £3 spent. Transparency International UK found 135 high-risk contracts with at least three red flags, warning signs of a risk of corruption. Twenty-eight contracts worth £4.1bn went to firms with known political connections, while 51 worth £4bn went through a "VIP lane" for companies recommended by MPs and peers, a practice the High Court ruled was unlawful. Classic money for the boys inner club of money harvesting. A Conservative spokesperson said: Government policy was in no way influenced by the donations the party received; they are entirely separate. Yeah right. Transparency International UK analyzed 5,000 contracts for red flags. The charity said its analysis also indicated that almost two thirds of high-value contracts to supply items such as masks and protective medical equipment during the pandemic, adding up to a total of £30.7bn, were awarded without any competition. Why? Because the military was running it and the military consistently award contracts without competition. A further eight contracts worth a total of £500m went to suppliers no more than 100 days old, another red flag for corruption. Normal safeguards designed to protect the process of bidding for government contracts from corruption were suspended during the pandemic.

The government, led by Boris Johnson, justified this at the time by stressing the need to short-cut the bidding process to accelerate the supply of much-needed items such as personal protective equipment (PPE). But Transparency International UK, a core participant in the Covid-19 inquiry which begins its third module on Monday, said the suspension of normal safeguards was often unjustifiable, costing the public purse billions and eroding trust in political institutions. It is urging the authorities to investigate the high-risk contracts it has identified. The charity said it has written to the National Audit Office, the Public Accounts Committee and Chancellor Rachel Reeves with a detailed overview of the findings and the contracts involved. Chief executive Daniel Bruce said: That we find multiple red flags in more than £15bn of contracts, amounting to a third of all such spending, points to more than coincidence or incompetence. He added that the Covid procurement response was marked by various points of systemic weakness and political choices that allowed cronyism to thrive, all enabled by woefully inadequate public transparency. As far as we can ascertain, no other country used a system like the UK's VIP lane in their Covid response. The cost to the public purse has already become increasingly clear with huge sums lost to unusable PPE from ill-qualified suppliers, Mr Bruce continued. We strongly urge the Covid-19 inquiries and planned Covid corruption commissioner to ensure full accountability and for the new government to swiftly implement lessons learned." Of a total of £48.1bn of public money spent on private sector contracts related to the Covid-19 pandemic, £14.9bn was written off by the Department of Health & Social Care. Near 15B GBP just written off? You do realize that is money laundering.

Of that, approximately £1bn was spent on PPE that was deemed unfit for use, according to another NGO, Spotlight on Corruption. A National Audit Office inquiry into public procurement during the pandemic, published in November 2020, found no evidence of ministerial involvement in procurement decisions or contract management. No change there then.

SOCIETY SECTION:

The Go-ogle criminal issues we have reported on recently is now taking a more stringent turn. As earlier this week it was reported that the US Department of Justice's top antitrust officials, would likely ask a judge to enforce a significant break up of Google, in part proposing that Chrome be sold off. As of Wednesday night, the official paperwork has since been filed and we can now see that the authorities' plan is even further reaching than initially suggested. Not only will a judge be asked to enforce Google's sale of Chrome, but the filing made to a Washington federal court also outlines that, following its divestiture of Chrome [Google] may not reenter the browser market for five years. The proposal also calls for Google to be prohibited from acquiring any interests in search rivals, potential entrants and rival search or search ads-related AI products, and that it must let go of any it already holds in its clutch. Furthermore, the documents additionally call for a halt to all anticompetitive payments to distributors, including Apple, that are made to ensure Google is the default search engine on various companies' devices. Speaking of AI, the DoJ's proposal also recommends that Google offer data crawling rights to parties such as content creators, so that they can choose to opt-out of, say, Google using its work to train its Large Language Model AI. Interesting stuff and one can only surmise at this point, that this is some sort of faction games. Unless the Israelis are trying to corner the whole market.

Following last week's report on fake climate change records to fulfill an agenda, we have another report exposing the fake climate change. As a new report by Oxfam, Climate Finance Unchecked, has determined that the World Bank has $41 billion in unaccounted funds that were destined to fight climate change. This figure represents 40% of all disbursed climate funds by the World Bank. Oxfam's audit revealed that between 2017 and 2023, between $24 billion and $41 billion simply went unaccounted for and there is absolutely no record of where the money went. No one knows how the money was used as there is no paper trail revealing where the money went. Just like the Fed and the DOD then, if there is no trail, then it is money laundering and or the funds are being used to funnel into other accounts. The Bank is quick to brag about its climate finance billions, but these numbers are based on what it plans to spend, not on what it actually spends, once a project gets rolling, said Kate Donald, Head of Oxfam International's Washington D.C. Office. The World Bank is a leader in climate finance, controlling 52% of the total flow from all multilateral banks combined. World Bank President Ajay Banga announced in December that the bank achieved 35% of its financing three years ahead of schedule. He then set a new target of 45% by 2025. The bank later said in September that it achieved 44% of climate financing to the tune of $42.6 billion. We're putting our ambition in overdrive, Banga said. The bank acknowledged that it was difficult to keep track of its 800 climate financing projects but offered no insight into the missing funds. How can a bank not keep track of its funds? it's unconscionable and yet they get away with it. It is clear that no one, including the Bank has any real idea of how many billions of dollars are going to which climate actions, the Oxfam report said. Yet, climate activists are demanding $5 trillion in Annual financing for the Global South to pay toward climate debt. Where did the $41 billion go? That large of a sum simply cannot be lost in a mere paperwork or oversight error. The climate change agenda has become a slush fund for the elites, who will continue to fund this agenda without taking any responsibility for where the funds go or if they're actually altering the climate in any meaningful way.

A new program is about to be launched in the name of safety and security again, which is total nonsense. Started off in Ireland and Australia but will eventually lead to global. The Ireland directive will be rolled out for all 27 EU countries. They are implementing an online safety code which will cover platforms such as X, TikTok, Facebook and Instagram, is about protecting kids from the "harms" of social media. A full scale assault on free speech and online privacy, it bans the uploading and sharing of a wide range of content that it deems as harmful. Promoting cyberbullying, promoting self-harm or suicide, child sex abuse that's fair enough, but that is the sweetener, as then it takes a turn for the worse. Banning promoting of eating or feeding disorders, incitement to hatred or violence, terrorism, racism and xenophobia. All in general have no place in society, but the latter has sinister connotations as we all know.

Supporting Palestine or Iran is terrorism, promoting the white race is racism, disagreeing with Israel policies is hatred and tantamount to violence. Disagreeing with the migrants is xenophobia. What is typically missing is, the definitions of such words, the meanings and intentions behind them. Which are typically left open ended to suit the control system agenda. To do this, children are to be subjected to age verification which once implemented will then be introduced to adults. Providing parental controls for content which may impair the physical, mental or moral development of children under 16. They are losing the narrative and so stringent, Fascist and Zionist measures are being brought in under the guise of safety to shut us down. In Australia an official said, this is a global problem and we want young Australians essentially to have a childhood. Not worried enough about children to be subjecting them to transexual sexual performances and books about blow jobs and buggery though. We want parents to have peace of mind, he said on Thursday. The new legislation provides a framework for the ban.

But the 17-page document, which is expected to head to the Senate next week, is sparse on detail. Instead, it will be up to the nation's internet regulator, the eSafety Commissioner to hash out how to implement and enforce the rules, which will not come into effect for at least 12 months after legislation is passed. According to the bill, the ban will apply to all children under 16 and that there will be no exemptions for existing users or those with parental consent. Tech companies will face penalties of up to A$50m ($32.5m; £25.7) if they do not comply, but there will be exemptions for platforms which are able to create low-risk services deemed suitable for kids. The criteria for this threshold are yet to be set. Messaging services and gaming sites, however, will not be restricted, as will some sites that can be accessed without an account like YouTube, which has prompted questions over how regulators will determine what is and isn't a social media platform in a fast-moving landscape. A group representing the interests of tech companies such as Meta, Snapchat and X in Australia has dismissed the ban as a 20th Century response to 21st Century challenges. Such legislation could push kids into dangerous, unregulated parts of the internet, Digital Industry Group Inc says, a fear also expressed by some experts. Yes into the dark web they go, safety my ass, interested in the wellbeing of children my ass as well. All very The Future World Part 1 isn't it.

EXPOSE:

Here is another expose that yet again involves a key Jewish figure, yet many of you will have never have heard of him. He sounds like a mafia leader and has been heavily involved in skullduggery in Haiti and is likely connected to the Clinton Foundation and certain rogue elements within the US Military and agencies. Remember the removal of the children from Haiti after the use of the fake earthquake weapon in 2010, that cost $7-13B in damages? All designed to clear people out of the region to start their mining programs again and pick up land on the cheap. This is about Gilbert Bigio, who may sound Italian with that name, but is actually a Sephardic Jew.

In December 2022, Canada imposed strict sanctions on Gilbert Bigio, frequently referred to as Haiti's only billionaire and the deeply impoverished country's richest man. He, along with two other super-wealthy Haitian citizens, was accused by Ottawa of using his outsized influence and power in the country to protect and enable the illegal activities of the armed criminal gangs, that have been tearing Port-au-Prince apart for years. Since then, Bigio has remained at liberty and unpunished, meanwhile, Haiti has slid ever further into catastrophe. Markedly, no other Western country and notably the sanctions-happy U.S. followed Canada's lead. While wave upon wave of UN-mandated peacekeepers from every corner of the world have been deployed to Haiti in recent years, they have been unable to quell and often exacerbated, the violence that has left the country without a functioning state or civil society. Kenya, currently leading an international anti-gang initiative in Port-au-Prince, recently called for the effort to be transformed into a dedicated U.N. peacekeeping operation. For his part, Latin American & Caribbean Studies Professor Danny Shaw has zero doubt that Bigio and others like him are fundamentally responsible for encouraging and facilitating Haiti's collapse.

Shaw tells MintPress News: Only a tiny, well-connected clique of white warlords completely isolated from the needs and reality of the 99.9% of the Haitian population, has the necessary private airports, ports and border contacts to smuggle guns and other contraband objects into the country. Except Bigio and others are not white, they are Jewish and the black people need to distinguish this. That the arms have kept flowing all along, and no action has been taken to neutralize the international criminal networks operated by Bigio, undergirding that influx, tends to suggest the tycoon's illicit activities are actively, if quietly permitted by powerful elements within Western governments. Of course it is, as the Jewish rogue elements control most if not all of the governments. As we shall see, Israel may lie at the forefront of Bigio's international protection racket.

Comprehending how he furthers Israel's interests in Haiti and the wider region may be crucial to understanding how Tel Aviv's tendrils extend elsewhere overseas. Professor Shaw notes that Bigio is also active in the neighboring Dominican Republic, working closely with President Luis Abinader. The Dominican Republic has for many years been a hotbed of illicit agency and mafia operations. The CIA drug runner Neil Keenan was engaged with the Dominican Republic leader surrounding these operations, before he was pulled in by the DEA and given 5 years jail. Which he never undertook as the CIA flew him out with no passport to Sofia, Bulgaria to the CIA Eastern European division. For example, Pablo Daniel Portes Goris, CEO of Bigio's GB Energy company, is Abinader's financial advisor. Walkiria Caamaño and Joan Fernandez Osorio are Bigio executives working for the Dominican president. Shaw adds: Individuals like Bigio have historically been untouchable on both sides of the border. Dominican Republic elites have historically teamed up with corrupt Haitian leaders against the 99.9 percent of the island's population. The Bigio's and a handful of other multimillionaire families, along with their hired politicians, are a state within a state. Much of what occurs in Haitian politics, from political coups to targeted assassinations, can be traced back to the power struggle that occurs between them.

Admiration for Israel: In reporting on Bigio's sanctioning by Canadian authorities, the Western media universally refused to mention his lifelong dedication to Zionism or intimate, long-running ties with the Israeli state. No change there then as the media is ran by the Zionists. If Trump is serious about bringing true change to America, the media has to be the first to be deleted from American airwaves. If he does that, then we the people can learn to trust him, currently there have been too many broken promises to illicit any trust in what he is doing. This deficit is indefensible, given a February 2004 Jewish Telegraphic Agency report on the history of Jews in Haiti featured a lengthy portrait of the oligarch, offering some highly revealing, deeply suspect disclosures along the way. Bigio was described as the de facto leader of the country's ever-diminishing Jewish community, routinely convening celebrations such as Rosh Hashanah and Yom Kippur at his big, beautiful house in one of the few upscale neighborhoods in Port-au-Prince. Despite not being a religious man, Bigio was especially proud of the Torah scroll he keeps in his study, the only Torah in Haiti.

Coincidentally, Israel's founders were typically not observant Jews but predominantly atheists and evangelical Christians. They remain among Tel Aviv's most rabid supporters today. That is because the Torah and the Talmud are not religious documents, they are doctrines of control and nothing to do with a religion. Their religion is law and above law at that, they have been operating above all laws. Laws are for the fake Christians, which is a Jewish law program and the rest of the goyim. The Jewish Telegraphic Agency revealed how Bigio's grandfather and father emigrated to Haiti in the late 1800s and during World War I, respectively, part of a contemporary wave of Sephardic Jew arrivals from Egypt, Lebanon and Syria. Roughly 400 years after Columbus brought thousands of Sephardic Jews to America, with devastating consequences. Thereafter, the oligarch's forebears prospered in the export of cotton, cacao and campeche wood.

Come the present day, Bigio and his family had expanded their Haitian operations to include industry and trading, a steel mill and banking. These activities made them extremely wealthy in a country where: About 50 percent of the population is illiterate, and 76 percent of children under age five are underweight or suffer from stunted growth. That means nothing to these Jewish shekel makers, they are totally anti-humanity and the sooner the world understands that, we can then go about correcting it. Despite this, while residing in a well-guarded palatial home replete with a luxurious swimming pool and a gazebo for outdoor parties, Bigio dismissed suggestions average Haitians felt any resentment towards him or other wealthy expatriates in the country, which included a number of high-profile Israelis. That is their arrogance and zero compassion spewing through, everyone to them is a usable commodity to make shekels.

Instead, he suggested, If you know how to manage success, people admire you instead of hate you. He also laughed when asked if he'd ever experienced antisemitism in the country. Bigio countered that Haitians have a lot of respect for the Jews and a lot of admiration for Israel, noting Haiti voted in favor of the 1947 UN partition plan for Palestine, which created Israel. Therein lies the problem, rampant Stockholm Syndrome when anything is connected to Israel, Jews or the fake holy land. When will people understand, these are our oppressors and run them out of their countries? Our ancestors in the past 2000 years did it, removing Jews out of over 100 countries.

In the present day, he added, Port-au-Prince annually imports $20 million worth of Israeli goods, ranging from telecom equipment to Uzi machine guns, and the pair enjoyed good relations. As the Jewish Telegraphic Agency noted, the tycoon was well-placed to comment on this issue: Bigio is the honorary Israeli consul in Haiti, which explains the enormous Israeli flag in front of his house, as well as his bulletproof Mercedes SUV. This may mean Bigio enjoys de facto diplomatic immunity, which could partly explain how, despite the Canadian government's censure, weapons continue to flow into Port-au-Prince without hindrance and how he has not faced prosecution or penalties stateside or elsewhere. Conversely, though, a 2004 Jewish Telegraphic Agency interview concluded, with Bigio refusing to discuss politics or offer a Jewish perspective on the current revolt against Haiti's democratically elected President, Jean-Bertrand Aristide. The unrest had been raging exponentially for two years by that point. Bigio explained: Our principle, which we respect daily, is to not mix in Haitian politics. Even after three generations, we are considered foreigners. So we believe that to have good relations with the government, we have to step aside. We take care of business, and let them take care of politics. What they don't explain is, Bigio is the policy and the politics.

The Bigio Empire: Just two-and-a-half weeks later, Haiti succumbed to yet another brutal, death squad-initiated, CIA-orchestrated coup. Just how many brutal coups have the CIA been involved in, yet they have the audacity to label other countries and peoples as terrorists, it beggars belief. Who made them in charge of governments of other countries? Where are the papers, laws and regulations that allow for this death, torture and power grab? The effects reverberate throughout the country to this day. Aristide's removal from office was quickly followed by wholesale destruction of all his administration's progressive achievements for average citizens, U.S.-imposition of a savage junta in Port-au-Prince, and murderous paramilitary crackdowns on the ousted President's supporters and political base. The parlous state into which modern Haiti has been thrust directly results from these dire developments. That's indeed no accident.

The full extent of the cloak-and-dagger connivances that spurred Haiti's February 2004 coup, and the identities of influential individuals and organizations implicated in sponsoring, funding, and training insurrectionary forces responsible for expelling widely-beloved Aristide may never be known. Nonetheless, Bigio has been regarded as a key orchestrator of the insurrectionary upheaval. In the spirit of cui bono?, the oligarch, contrary to his professed commitment to non-interference in Haiti's political affairs, seems an immediately obvious candidate for supporting Aristide's downfall. Jeb Sprague, a leading academic researcher on paramilitarism in Haiti and transnational capitalism in the Caribbean, tells MintPress News, that there were earlier attempts to remove Aristide's second government from office before February 2004. In late 2000 in the lead-up to his government's inauguration, in an attempted assault on the National Palace in December of 2001, and through a low-intensity contra campaign carried out in the country's central plateau in 2002-2003: Bigio was widely suspected to have supported these abortive efforts, in conjunction with fellow industrialists and treacherous, high-ranking local police and security officials. Bigio, as well as some other oligarchs and leaders of the Haitian military, were placed on a U.S. government list of supporters of the Cédras junta, which seized power after the 1991 CIA-backed coup that ousted President Aristide. All of which reveals that the CIA is just another front for the Israeli junta. Most people know it is based in America, but it has many other bases globally but the main headquarters is in Switzerland. Switzerland the land of the Jewish oligarchs and many of the worst conglomerate companies on the planet.

Moreover, mainstream U.S. media has acknowledged Bigio's industrial-scale profiteering from the dismantling of what remained of Haiti's crumbling state institutions. All about the shekels again you see. Without minimum wages and protections for Haitian workers and state restrictions on foreign ownership and exploitation of the country's industry and resources, his family's financial interests expanded across the island encompassing both Port-au-Prince and the Dominican Republic, exponentially. Among the most lucrative components of Bigio's newly enlarged portfolio were energy, security, and shipping. The Miami Herald reported in December 2021: The conglomerate's reach extends to the entire Haitian economy, from providing construction supplies and fuel to offering household necessities like cooking oil and food. He has branched out as well into the Dominican side of Hispaniola. Much of what is bought, sold or consumed in Haiti is likely to touch some corner of the Bigio empire. Significantly, this expansion included building and overseeing Port Lafito, a significant export and import hub not far from the Haitian capital. Where there is a port the Israelis gathering around it and try to take it over, whether by stealth or war. For current evidence of that, see Yemen.

It is here that the vast majority of heavy, war-grade weapons enter the country, then reach the hands of dangerous gangs and militias, therefore ensuring a state of constant crisis locally. In April 2018, a source with knowledge of the matter informed independent journalist Corey Lynn that the Israeli government assisted in Port Lafito's construction: He can enter anything into Haiti he wants. He also has powerful lobbyists in Washington D.C. to help him keep control of his assets. He does not allow competition and will crush anyone trying to compete with everything he produces or imports. Bigio has a private army of about 80 men protecting himself, his home and establishments. He also makes full use of every military, paramilitary and police force in the country. Every chief of police is on his payroll. You can thank the US Military and the Clinton's for this hostile takeover of this country. Amazing how they have turned it into a de facto government so soon, but eventually that country will become a security threat to the United States. Yet the military in America are supporting it, another example of the US Military working against the American people.

Sprague explained to MintPress that: The families, with surnames like Bigio, Brandt, Madsen, Acra, and others, have maintained powerful positions at the heights of Hispaniola's economy. Even so, they've transitioned over the closing decades of the 20th Century and into the 21st Century from long alliances with the coercive rule of the Duvaliers and ruling military factions, to seeking out corporate inputs through the globalizing economy and working in line with U.S. soft power in the region. The Duvaliers are linked to François Duvalier also known as Papa Doc, was a Haitian politician and voodooist who served as the president of Haiti from 1957 until his death in 1971. Voodooist? As a leader? Oh my. Some maintain important linkages to security firms and paramilitary groups and the arms trade.

The Pariah State: It was further alleged Bigio has close ties to the Israeli military and uses 10 Israeli commandos for his personal security when he feels the situation is at a critical point. A particularly critical point in recent Haitian history was a catastrophic earthquake that struck the island in January 2010. It was not a natural earthquake it was caused by a weapon, who did it? Perhaps the next line gives a pointer? Almost immediately, Tel Aviv dispatched a sizable IDF "humanitarian" team to assist locals and authorities.

It was a widely reported, grand publicity stunt that regionally provided the Israeli government with enormous positive PR. Perhaps unsurprisingly, Bigio's family was centrally involved in facilitating and managing this effort. At the time, Amos Radian, Tel Aviv's ambassador to the Dominican Republic and the Caribbean, told the Jerusalem Post: they assisted in such a way that made us look so good. This included donating a football field-sized space, which served as an IDF field hospital. Was the "field hospital" for organ removals?

Gilbert's son Reuven boasted to the outlet that his family's desire to help Tel Aviv's propaganda initiative in Haiti was unconditional: People need help, we need to be there. Being in a city where there's no synagogue, prayers are done at our house, Israel to us is the motherland. It's the rock, it's how we identify ourselves. They cause a blast then come in a remove the children, set up organ harvesting, rape the land and your wealth, but celebrated as heroes. Too many people are beyond stupid. The black communities have to learn the truth of what the Jews have done to them. Just because these Jews look white, does not mean they are. Before mass violence in Gaza erupted in October 2023, such displays of international magnanimity were a routine and devastatingly effective, a soft power play for Tel Aviv. For example, following Tbilisi's routing in its five-day-long August 2008 war with Russia, Israel began repairing extensive damage inflicted on the country by Moscow's forces. In the process, Israeli investors reaped over one-third of all reconstruction contracts handed out by the Georgian government.

Fast forward to November 2012. The IDF viciously attacked Gaza, slaughtering hundreds of Palestinians and wounding thousands more. International outcry and condemnation was amply forthcoming, but by and large, not in Georgia. Their government remained silent, and scores of average citizens even took to the streets of their capital to express solidarity with Tel Aviv. Beyond stupid. In the years since, Tbilisi has signed numerous big-ticket deals to purchase weapons, missile systems, security services and police training from Israel. Georgia is just one country where Israel has pulled off such an international relations coup. Yes to go up against their arch-enemy the Rus. These activities garner Israel an enormous amount of international goodwill, in turn reliably securing silence, if not outright support, for its slow-motion erasure of the Palestinian people. The oppressive methods and tools of control and mass killing that it uses on Gaza and the West Bank are then sold to its foreign allies. This is a longstanding strategy for Tel Aviv.

In the 1980s, Israel formed close ties with governments in the Global South, including brutal Western-backed dictatorships in Argentina, El Salvador, Guatemala, the Philippines, apartheid South Africa, and Zaire, just as foreign powers were starting to distance themselves from these regimes. That was the Operation Condor group facilitated by the CIA and P2 Lodge. As a member of the Likud party, who once headed the Knesset foreign relations committee, explained in 1985: Israel is a pariah state. When people ask us for something, we cannot afford to ask questions about ideology. The only type of regime that Israel would not aid would be one that is anti-American. Also, if we can aid a country it may be inconvenient for the US to help, we would be cutting off our nose to spite our face not to. That is the true alliance of the US and Israel, they both prevent anything bad being leaked out about each other, as both are equally responsible for many crimes against humanity. America was built upon the Jews looting most countries around the world as FHSTOS revealed, so America's wealth and wellbeing is dependent upon America kissing their ass.

The Smart Fence: Anti-Zionist Israeli Jeff Halper and independent Australian journalist Antony Loewenstein have both written extensively about how what remains of Palestine is a laboratory, replete with test subjects held in controlled conditions, for Israel. It is seldom considered today that Haiti was the U.S. Empire's original testing ground for imperial connivances throughout Washington's backyard for centuries and the entire globe since 1945. While Haitians often describe their country as the CIA's laboratwa, the country is indelibly linked to resistance, its historical genesis in the rebellion against French rule producing the world's first, and to date only, independent state governed by former slaves. Yet, ever since, the U.S. has engaged in a wide variety of tactics to deny Haiti's sovereignty, hamper development, kill hope, and ensure relentless instability, just like they have done to Puerto Rico and many other islands in the region. But of course - never ending chaos means the wealthy, such as Bigio, can enrich themselves at the local population's expense untrammled, while Washington is provided with constant justifications for interference, meddling and military occupation to support that goal. In December 2019, this malign international mission was codified into U.S. law with the passing of the Global Fragility Act. The legislation effectively grants USAID, which in part functions as an intelligence cutout, the Departments of State, the DOD, and the Treasury a blank check to interfere in and take action against fragile states, supposedly prone to conflict, extremism, instability, and poverty. Haiti was explicitly cited as an initial target country for the effort. You do realize this makes America a harvesting country? Do you understand the concept and the reality of that fact? What do American's think of this? Is it something we should be supporting? Or something we should be doing to stop it?

Unsurprisingly, no reference is made in the law's text to the fact that any fragility suffered in Port-au-Prince, is explicitly caused by Washington's machinations there over many years. Trump was in power when that act was passed, it should be noted. Israel stands to profit handsomely from instability worldwide, and it is unsurprising that Tel Aviv similarly seeks to perpetuate upheaval and vulnerability internationally and take advantage of disasters, to provide a pretext for coming to the rescue via assets like Gilbert Bigio. The Dominican Republic is currently constructing a smart fence, at some expense, to prevent the violence engulfing Port-au-Prince from spilling across its borders. The structure is of Israeli design and technology, modeled directly on Gaza's apartheid walls, or separation barriers, as Israeli authorities refer to them. The Dominican Republic's fence runs 160 kilometers, comprising reinforced concrete walls and a metal structure 3.90 meters high, crowned by an accordion of barbed wire with sharp blades. All along, 170 surveillance towers, spying systems, motion detectors, high-definition CCTV cameras with night vision and infrared capacity, checkpoints and 71 controlled access gates prevent anyone from getting in or out without permission. Meanwhile, a squadron of surveillance drones patrols 24/7, every inch. You do realize that the American people are paying for that fence as well, whilst not being afforded the protection of our own borders? American's are paying for Israeli world hegemony, an insidious plan that those that put up the capital reap no rewards for it, but a harvesting nation in terms of a state and harvesting nation in terms of a race are creaming in all the profits at everyone else's expense.

The fence's mere existence ensures friction and literal division between the two countries, which could otherwise be comrades-in-arms, while justifying Israeli and U.S. presence throughout the border strip. Classic divide and conquer of the Israeli junta. That presence is likely to endure, if not expand, as long as Gilbert Bigio's ownership of Port Lafito guarantees an inevitable flow of weapons and other harmful contraband into the country. It was indeed not for nothing that Bigio's father played a pivotal role in securing Haiti's support for Israeli statehood back in 1947. Yes the Israeli ways, are to curry favor, provide a savior program and then stab you in the back with zero love, compassion or empathy. Karma is then expelled onto the very people they harvested, raped and abused, via the Day of Atonement day. The world needs to wake up to this reality real quick, as the next stage of these Israeli plotters is far worse than we have now.

SCIENCE SECTION:

Astronomers widely accept that the universe formed in the Big Bang approximately 13.8 billion years ago and it has been expanding ever since. This expansion explains how a 13.8-billion-year-old universe can be so much larger than 13.8 billion light-years across. Erm no it doesn't, it has been stated to me that Midgard is around 23B years old alone. Astronomers have widely accepted? Or is it the case they have been told that mathematical time nugget and warned to stick to it? First of all, we should explain that the light-speed limit that relativity imposes on objects within the universe, doesn't apply to the universe itself. In fact, we can't refer to an absolute expansion speed of the universe, because we can't measure it in reference to anything external. We can only gauge the "speeds" of distant galaxies that are receding from us relative to our own position. Those 3 statements right there prove their theories are just that, not confirmation of truth. In overview, light doesn't have time, as time is a construct based upon faulty math and a control mechanism. If time was a constant, how can we travel to different worlds in a blink of an eye via spirit travel?

Apart from those that are gravitationally bound such as the Milky Way and Andromeda galaxies, all galaxies appear to be moving away from each other as the space-time in which they're embedded expands. Maybe it is because to allow them all space, as the positions of each galaxy is by intelligent design? Perhaps also the central sun of each galaxy is driving the galaxy into a particular space as well. The more distant the galaxy, the faster its recession velocity, as noted by the Hubble Law. They keep saying that, and all galaxies are moving away from us, none are moving towards us, which means by observation this part of space was the beginning, if their theories are correct. As a consequence of this expansion, a galaxy's location changes considerably during the period of time that its light requires to travel to us. The light we're seeing from an object 13 billion light-years away required 13 billion years to move from it to us, but during that period, the amount of space separating us from that object has increased substantially. Calculations show that this expansion would cause the current radius of the universe to be about 46 billion light-years. Or maybe as it was attested in the Cosmic Genetics series, our universe is 950B years old.

FHSTOS SECTION:

One of the things we covered in the FHSTOS series was the Tulsa, Oklahoma event in 1921, that was passed off in his story as a race war against the blacks by white supremacists. But our story revealed it was all done by the US Military, just a few years after they created and started the so-called Spanish Flu. But here is another story that rivals Tulsa, Oklahoma and this time did not involve the white supremacist narrative designed to deflect from the real culprits. As shells fell on the Alaska Native village as winter approached, then sailors landed and burned what was left of homes, food caches and canoes. Conditions grew so dire in the following months that elders sacrificed their own lives to spare food for surviving children. It was Oct. 26, 1882, in Angoon, a Tlingit village of about 420 people in the southeastern Alaska panhandle. Now, 142 years later, the perpetrator of the bombardment, the U.S. Navy, is set to say it is sorry. Rear Adm. Mark Sucato, the commander of the Navy's northwest region, will issue the apology during a ceremony on the anniversary of the atrocity. While the rebuilt Angoon received $90,000 in a settlement with the Department of Interior in 1973, village leaders have for decades sought an apology as well, beginning each yearly remembrance by asking three times, Is there anyone here from the Navy to apologize?

You can imagine the generations of people that have died since 1882 that have wondered what had happened, why it happened, and wanted an apology of some sort, because in our minds, we didn't do anything wrong, said Daniel Johnson Jr., a tribal head in Angoon. The attack was one of a series of conflicts between the American military and Alaska Natives in the years after the U.S. bought the territory from Russia in 1867. The U.S. Navy issued an apology last month for destroying the nearby village of Kake in 1869, and the Army has indicated that it plans to apologize for shelling Wrangell, also in southeast Alaska, that year, though no date has been set. The Navy acknowledges the actions it undertook or ordered in Angoon and Kake caused deaths, a loss of resources and multigenerational trauma, Navy civilian spokesperson Julianne Leinenveber said in an email. An apology is not only warranted, but long overdue, she said. Yet again the US Military involved in atrocities, this time against their own so-called people. But in overview, the US Military cares not who it kills, injuries and what it destroys, because rarely in real time are they admonished for their poor actions against we the people.

Today, Angoon remains a quaint village of about 420 people, with colorful old homes and totem poles clustered on the west side of Admiralty Island, accessible by ferry or float plane, in the Tongass National Forest, the nation's largest. The residents are vastly outnumbered by brown bears, and the village in recent years has strived to foster its ecotourism industry. Bald eagles and humpback whales abound, and the salmon and halibut fishing is excellent. Accounts vary as to what prompted its destruction, but they generally begin with the accidental death of a Tlingit shaman, Tith Klane. Klane was killed when a harpoon gun exploded on a whaling ship owned by his employer, the North West Trading Co. The Navy's version says tribal members forced the vessel to shore, possibly took hostages and, in accordance with their customs, demanded 200 blankets in compensation. The company declined to provide the blankets and ordered the Tlingits to return to work. Instead, in sorrow, they painted their faces with coal tar and tallow, something the company's employees took as a precursor to an insurrection. The company's superintendent then sought help from Naval Cmdr. E.C. Merriman, the top U.S. official in Alaska, saying a Tlingit uprising threatened the lives and property of white residents. The Tlingit version contends the boat's crew, which included Tlingit members, likely remained with the vessel out of respect, planning to attend the funeral, and that no hostages were taken. Johnson said the tribe never would have demanded compensation so soon after the death. Merriman arrived on Oct. 25 and insisted the tribe provide 400 blankets by noon the next day as punishment for disobedience. So they were making the local populace suffer extreme cold and removing the very thing that kept them warm, the blankets. Just shocking and inhumane.

When the Tlingits turned over just 81 blankets, Merriman attacked, destroying 12 clan houses, smaller homes, canoes and the village's food stores. Six children died in the attack, and there's untold numbers of elderly and infants who died that winter of both cold, exposure and hunger, Johnson said. Billy Jones, Tith Klane's nephew, was 13 when Angoon was destroyed. Around 1950, he recorded two interviews, and his account was later included in a booklet prepared for the 100th anniversary of the bombing in 1982. They left us homeless on the beach, Jones said. Rosita Worl, the president of Sealaska Heritage Institute in Juneau, described how some elders that winter walked into the forest, meaning they died, sacrificing themselves so the younger people would have more food. Even though the Navy's written history conflicts with the Tlingit oral tradition, the Navy defers to the tribe's account out of respect for the long-lasting impacts these tragic incidents had on the affected clans, said Leinenveber, the Navy spokesperson. Tlingit leaders were so stunned when Navy officials told them, during a Zoom call in May, that the apology would finally be forthcoming that no one spoke for five minutes, Johnson said. Eunice James, of Juneau, a descendant of Tith Klane, said she hopes the apology helps her family and the entire community heal. She expects his presence at the ceremony. Not only his spirit will be there, but the spirit of many of our ancestors, because we've lost so many, she said. The behavior of the US Military over the 150 years will go down in infamy. An embarrassment and shame brought to the whole nation, picking up poor and often defenseless groups and countries. Yet nobody dares to mention it as it should be called, terrorism.

MYSTERY SECTION:

I recently took a trip and observed one young girl with holes in her jeans 18" high and about 5-6" wide. This is now considered as fashion wear, and shows how easily people are fooled. Jeans that were once considered defective is now sold as fashion. And what is worse, despite less materials in the product, they sell you the defective item at an increased cost! Just why do people fall for this shit? When I was a child people who wore clothes with holes in them, they were called tramps or scruffs. Yet not no more, I am consider an old fuddy-duddy and not up with the times, and that's fine, but it still doesn't answer the question as to why you would wish to wear severely ripped jeans out in public? I remember renovating a kitchen back in Liverpool in the early 1990's and the client had spent 12k GBP, roughly $14k for what was described as a distressed kitchen! They said it was the fashion in America. But I said it is broken, why would you want a broken kitchen? I think they thought I was being jealous, but I was serious. What a clever marketing ploy, no more damaged goods, they just repurpose them and sell them for even more money than the original. Clever on their part, stupid on our part. As smart really doesn't mean clever, it means to burn.

Earlier on this year I did a piece on how stupid too many in humanity's circle really are and asked is this planet a lunatic asylum? Many will doubt that claim, but perhaps this piece lays it all out? Maurizio Cattelan's provocative artwork of a banana duct-taped to a wall has fetched $6.2m (£4.9m) at Sotheby's in New York, four times higher than pre-sale estimates. Yes you heard that right, I man took a banana and a piece of duct-tape, stuck the duct tape to the banana and stuck to a wall and for that he received $6.2M. That is beyond insane, I wonder how many people could have had fed or housed for that type of money? The auction house says Chinese cryptocurrency entrepreneur Justin Sun outbid six other rivals to get the Comedian installation of the Italian visual artist on Wednesday. In the coming days, I will personally eat the banana as part of this unique artistic experience, Mr. Sun was quoted as saying. The taped banana, now perhaps one of the most expensive fruits ever sold was actually bought earlier in the day for a mere $0.35, according to the New York Times. Comedian was first unveiled to the public in 2019, instantly becoming a viral sensation and also provoking heated debates about what art is. The installation, which has travelled around the world, comes with instructions on how to replace the banana whenever it rots. In fact, the fruit has been eaten not once, but twice. In 2023, a South Korean art student helped himself when the installation went on display at Seoul's Leeum Museum of Art. The museum later placed a new banana in the same spot, local media reported. Four years earlier, a performance artist pulled the banana from the wall after the artwork was sold for $120,000 at Art Basel in Miami. The banana was swiftly replaced, and no further action was taken. Just when you think you have heard of all of the stupidity, this planet never ceases to amaze you.

Interesting and in some ways exciting news coming from Scandinavia as they are reporting some very strange Northern Lights this past week. They normally fluctuate, but yesterday there was a steady curve to them. The question posed was, maybe they will circum-polar all the way around the planet? With the circle centered at the north pole, not the geographical pole, but the magnetic pole. THI predicted some time back about the possibility of the Northern and Southern lights being seen all over the world.

I touched upon the numbers on the keyboard during Kevin's presentation and thought I would expand it out to all listeners. During the course of this year a team within THI has worked in the background solving science and math problems. There has been many revelations ongoing, to prove how their math is an overlay for our system and planet. I have in the past described the letter N as the pathway to soul development. Of how on a capital letter N describes the left hand path with no gate, the slide down to the right hand path and eventually rising with the open gate. The 9 digit square on your keyboard and the peripheral keys may provide a deeper pointer. The bottom left is the 0 outside the square, above is the 1, is that showing the binary code? Going up the left side of the keyboard we have 147, the left hand path is the path of Set. But 147 just happens to be the highest score in snooker, and given we have pointed out how other sports has deeper esoteric connotations, tennis and chess in particular, perhaps a look at that is needed.

There is one white ball, 15 reds, 1 yellow, 1 green, 1 brown, 1 blue, 1 pink and 1 black. The white has to interact with all the other colors to win the game, which could symbolize the energon Cosmic Genetics game. All the colors must be potted, potted originally meant of meat, preserved in a pot, again perhaps symbolizing once the colors engage with the white, they are potted, like meat. Once all the reds are gone, you are left with potting the 6 colors, the highest value is the black. Are the 6 colors representative of the differing colored humanoids we have had here? Once all the colors are potted, it leaves only the white ball on the table. Unless you go into the pocket or net, all balls rebound back around the table to stay in the game, until only the white ball is left. The white is called the cue ball, which is reminiscent of what Kevin said, is it the Q ball or Cube all? The implement used to play is called a cue, the cue or stick can only hit the white ball. The white has no value and is just used to smash into the other colors, the highest value is the black. Again that can have Cosmic Genetics connotations. Snooker is often played in a darkened room with minimal light over the table, is that symbolizing the moonlight?

Back to the 147 on the numeric keypad, this path the left hand path is where all start, from a 0 to a 1 upon creation and then 4 and 7 upon reaching that it has another button called the number lock. Which is interesting as that is where the Illuminati reside at the top of the left hand path, they think they have achieved enlightenment, they are wrong. Because as the button above states, you are number locked. To go onto the right hand path you need to descend from the 7 to the 5 and to the 3. Those three numbers are interesting the 7, 5 and 3 which I will cover soon. The descent is unlearning all the lies, integrating the shadows, releasing the traumas and developing service to others. Once that is achieved you are then ready to climb the right hand path. At this point there are two numbers left out on the middle line, the 8 and the 2. Is the eight symbolizing the loop and the 2 is the descent from 1 on 1 with the 1, into 1,1 and 0 after discarding the female and ultimately onto the path of just 1? The first number on that path is 3, next to it is the button called Enter, so you are entering the right hand path. As you ascend the right hand path of enlightenment matched by your soul development, you encounter the 6 and the 9. Is that a coincidence that the right hand path is 3, 6 and 9? No chance.

Beyond the 9 is the multiplication button, symbolized by a star. Beyond the 9 is the open gate to the star, is how you escape the numerical matrix. Back to the 7, 5 and 3 descent, that is of interest to those who took a look at Wayne Herschel's Solomon Key videos. As the 7, 5 and 3 are part of an imagined straight line in space, between the 7 sisters of the Pleiades, the 5 and Aldebaran of Taurus (it is a 5 as that constellation is shaped in a V, the Roman numeral for 5) then the 3 belt stars of Orion and finally to the one star which is Sirius. The 4 main off world players of interference to this planet, so the 7, 5 and 3 becomes of interest. Is it also a coincidence that the last two numbers are 6 and 9, which are reversible and symbolizes the male and female union. Above them is the star, which is the gateway out and has a direct connection to all Suns and Stars to Source itself. That is the positive outcome.

But the numeric keypad can also point to a negative outcome. As at the bottom of the keypad is dot and below it, it says del or delete? Next to it is the 0 having deleted the 1. Below the zero is called the insert if the number lock key is used, the insert of 0 could well signify the synths and clones and the number 1 above says end. One more facet of the keypad is back to the number lock key, as next to it is a 1 in a box. Signifying the 1 is enclosed within a box or is it a cube? Is that squaring the circle again? The number 1 also has a word below it, it says end, to end the 1, so you are only left with zeros. Zeroes are a fake number that only applies to technology, it has no life force or value connected to it. It is not a proper number and was introduced here to delete, confuse and distort the numeric life patterns in favor of the technological entities. The Maya's are believed to have introduced zero when they developed the base-20 system of mathematics in 260 B.C. To achieve the right hand path, one must learn to think outside of the box, have no limitations, trust in yourself, believe in yourself and follow the path of service to others.

ENDING PIECE:

As a reminder there is no Blueprint show next week, instead we will have Part 2 of The Future World, but we do have an extra show to look forward to courtesy of the Assignment team, as I have been invited to go on another show between the 8-14th of December.

Final piece tonight that should leave you all with a very deep pondering to take you into next week's show The Future World Part 2. The implications of your pondering of this piece should sharpen the minds and hearts of you all, as the totalitarian creep edges closer to the abyss. A little bit of word magic for you now, as you know sometimes words have two or more meanings. The question is, what meaning is relevant? What is the actual definition of what they are saying and also implying? This has been the key reason behind the fall of man and the dumbing down of us all. Over many years I have seen publications dating back 100 to 500 years and the thing that struck me was, how much more advanced they were in terms of words, wording and understanding of life and all its machinations. 1-500 years later we are scrabbling in the dark for the same knowledge and understanding.

We at THI have done much to try to change that, by highlighting the words and looking at them from a much different perspective. Why a different perspective? Because looking through the narrow lens they provided for us, has proven to be pure folly on our part. Accepting their utter drivel as intelligence has been our greatest downfall. The worst aspect of accepting their utter drivel is the interpretation of their book, the bible. Filled with misinterpretations, lies, half-truths, savior programs and how just one race on this planet is important and the rest of us are mere cattle, sheep or beasts. That book ties everyone into a program that is very difficult to escape, as proven by the amount of slaves who follow it. It is the book of shame, guilt, harvesting, debauchery, death and destruction and said to be “god’s way”, yet no one questions if those traits are what we should be following? A catastrophic mistake that has led to billions of deaths over thousands of years.

The word we are looking at is depression, something many people around the world suffer from it. Which leads to many to taking their poisons to try and correct it, when actually all you have to do is change your thinking and your landscape. Depression is born out of hopelessness, only you can create that, no matter how many times you look outside of yourself. But did you know that the original depression is nothing to with illness or people for that matter. Depression (n.) It started off in c. 1400 as a term in astronomy, the angular distance of a star below the horizon, from Old French depression (14c.) and directly from Medieval Latin depressionem (nominative depressio), noun of action from past participle stem of Latin deprimere to press down, depress. The literal sense act of pressing down, state of being pressed down is attested from 1650s. The meaning dejection, state of sadness, a sinking of the spirits is from early 15c. Which means the vessel is not in depression, but the spirit itself, which is the spirit telling you, that you are off track. That became a clinical term in psychology, from 1905.

In a meteorological sense is from 1881 (in reference to barometric pressure); meaning a lowering or reduction in economic activity was in use by 1826; given a specific application (with capital D-) by 1934 to the one that began worldwide in 1929. The Economic Depression in 1929 that refers to. For melancholy, depression an Old English word was grevousede. A melancholy leading to desperation, and known to theologians under the name of acedia, was not uncommon in monasteries, and most of the recorded instances of medieval suicides in Catholicism were by monks. [W.E.H. Lecky, "A History of European Morals," 1869] Depress (v.) late 14c., put down by force, conquer, a sense now obsolete, from Old French depresser to press down, lower, from Late Latin depressare, frequentative of Latin deprimere press down, from de meaning down and premere to press, hold fast, cover, crowd, compress (from PIE root *per- (4) to strike. Meaning push down physically, press or move downward is from early 15c.; that of deject, make gloomy, lower in feeling is from 1620s; economic sense of lower in value is from 1878. Which means the great depression was a means to put down the people by force and conquer. depressing (adj.) having the quality of lowering the spirits, dispiriting, 1789, present-participle adjective from depress (v.). depressed (adj.) c. 1600, pressed down, lowered, past-participle adjective from depress (v.). Meaning dejected, lowered in spirits is from 1620s. depressant (n.) a sedative, 1876; see depress + -ant. From 1887 as an adjective, having the quality of depressing. depressive (adj.) able or tending to depress, 1610s, from Latin depress-, past-participle stem of deprimere (see depress) + -ive. In psychology, from 1905. Related: Depressiveness.

Summing up, the star falls below the horizon, in an act of being pressed down, a sinking of the spirit, by then lowering the peoples economic activity, then onto acedia which is spiritual or mental sloth. Then depress went from a noun to a verb which meant to force and conquer, make things gloomy, dejected and lower in feeling and value. With the dejected lowering of spirits came the next phase of the lowering, the sedative. In came the medical aspect with the sedative, which also has the quality of depressing and calming, or sedating and sending to sleep, whether in the pods or not. Those who are asleep are not awake. You do realize that one word and derivatives could be explaining a control system against us?

As “depressing” as that sounds, perhaps it is depressing enough to wake more from their slumber, spiritual and mental sloth and medical malpractice. But as hope gave way to despair, ultimately it all comes down to your own choices, actions and inactions. How many warnings does humanity need before better thinking, better ways, better actions unfold? How can you have unity when so many are purely selfish? How can you have unity with service to self? How can you have unity with divide and conquer? How can you have unity when people won’t look at their own mirrors and are just content to smash the mirrors of others?

THI has brought you all much clarity, yet somehow it is never enough. With humanity staring down the barrel of a 2D gun, what does it take to get people to act right? How many have focused on the most important show of the year, do you even know or recognize which one it was? Clearly not, as the hasn’t been a single mention of it since, in case you are wondering, it was The Future World Part 1. In many ways humanity in staring into the abyss, I wonder how many will continue to stare into the abyss and not be in the abyss going forward? It is abys(s)mal, yet humanity just plods on blissfully unaware floating away without a care in the world, beyond themselves. Many too content to float in the abyss, because they think it is the womb of the mother, that’s another illusion. They deleted the mother to create the void remember, the abyss is the void. The Blueprint spoke of a tabula rasa, but to do that one has to radically change what went before. A complete rebirth of a new you, new reality and new world. A complete change of thinking, not poor thinking, traits and behavior patterns. One wonders at times that perhaps the butterfly language was just too much? And when the tears subside and shadows still remain, I guess I will just end up walking in the cold November rain.
