

A THI web team update for you all, as a part of the end of year review for THI.

A solid foundation has been put in place for the new THI Encyclopaedia.

The first launch of 2024 was the new THI Encyclopaedia which can be accessed at archive.thi-show.com.

This was a great moment for the web and indexing teams because it required a lot of diligent work over a number of months, work which required a lot of attention to detail, and which can be seen to be of a monotonous nature due to the repetitive tasks involved.

A big thank you goes out to Dave for the work on the technical side of things and to Holly, Kayoko, Brigid, David and Paul for the indexing work and indexing data, which was incorporated into the new look THI Encyclopaedia.

The new THI Encyclopaedia went live on 1st February and since then we received good feedback about its search capabilities and cool design layout.

The main purpose of this new look THI archive was to facilitate the listening to THI shows whilst at the same time being able to read the transcript.

For this there are a number of cool features which allow the listener and reader to jump seamlessly to the show and section of interest.

We know that things come into their own at the right time and space, so a few months later in October, as requested, we did a demo to our own members demonstrating the full capabilities of the search features and of the website itself.

The content on the THI Encyclopaedia is continually being added to, though it is designed to be at least 90 days behind the THI website thus catering for the THI membership tiers we have.

Another feature worth noting is that the THI Encyclopaedia does not require the user to have a registered account, meaning that all the information is publicly available on the internet.

On 29th February we went live with another project which required a lot of technical work behind the scenes, including purchasing additional web hosting capabilities to provide the needed technology.

In the past we talked about the idea of THI creating its own social media platform as we termed it initially, to allow us to move away from the likes of Facebook or MeWe.

Before we move onto the next web updates, it is worth saying thank you to two people who have helped share the load of the web team. Katrina has been helping for more than a year, with the necessary work to prepare the THI transcripts for processing as PDF files and for publication on the THI website.

I am very grateful to Katrina for her help.

Which is a perfect way to segue into saying thank you to Todd, who for quite a few months has put the THI Spreaker show live on the THI website and announced this in the MeWe THI chat; due to time zone differences his help has afforded me the luxury of going to bed early instead of staying up past midnight to put the THI show live.

In November we launched the What Is series, which is a collection of powerful pieces covered on the Blueprint shows.

They define a number of key aspects related to love, life, value, time, the self and selfishness, what is the future, real and illusion, what is human and awakening, religion and spirituality, and last, but not least what is a guardian.

A big thank you goes out to the members who contributed with image selection for this project, namely Rochelle, Allison, Kayoko, Truus and Brigid.

Once again, just like we did with the Blueprint website, we had to do justice to these powerful pieces by selecting images to convey the same frequency, vibration and message as the written word; based on people's feedback we believe we have accomplished this aim.

We thank the others who were also involved with this work, on the technical and non-technical sides, like Aris and Dave, and Kevin, Todd and Marnie.

These pages also include downloadable mp3 files for each of the What Is pieces; our "serving suggestion" is listening to these pieces when out on a slow walk in nature or in a place of quiet contemplation.

As a reminder, the What Is series can be accessed at thi-show.com/what-is; this main image gallery page has been carefully and thoughtfully put together.

Delivering the What Is series this year certainly has a cherry on top feel to it, when considering all the previous achievements of our group mentioned above.

An achievement of a technical nature this year has been utilizing the solution found previously to host Kevin's presentation videos on the THI website; and just when we thought we had all the answers, Kevin delivered part 6A of his material, where the mp4 video file for both 6A and 6B was a whopping 18 GB of data; so we had to split it in 2 mp4 files, but even so, at 10 GB of data, downloading part 6A was a test of patience for some of our members and listeners, as well as a test of their broadband download speeds.

We thank Kevin for his work over many months plus some input others from Thomas and Michael, to be able to share this knowledge with the group on the open THI Zooms.

For those not yet familiar with these videos, they can be found under the THI Special Shows category and are titled Open Zoom presentation.

NEWS:

News from the UK and that Bill Gates was chased, after a crowd calling him a murderer and chanting arrest Bill Gates. I guess it's time for the pitchforks I warned about.

Remember all the Qtards advocating for the return of John F. Kennedy? Of how somehow he never died and he was coming back to save America.

Almost like an episode of Dallas.

Yet the people lapped it up as it is a savior they want, not fix things themselves.

We at THI have exposed that nonsense and revealed the Kennedy family were Black Sun operators, which will never be accepted by the savior program people.

But a document surfaced on our Mewe from JFK to Roger D Lapham Jr of some company in California.

It was about meeting some woman, but the last paragraph revealed startling details.

Where JFK thanked Mr. Lapham for inviting him to Bohemian Grove in the summer of 1957.

JFK stated he was excited and very anxious to get out there.

Like THI has said all along, the savior is within you, not external of you.

A billionaire Rothschild is said to have died last week in a fire in the Hollywood hills.

If true this continues the deaths of the top Rothschild's over the last few years.

Events surrounding it suggests something else is in play though.

As it was the 333rd day and there was 33 days left of the year, plus the media piece that revealed it lasted 33 minutes.

All very Masonic.

Only later was it revealed it was someone who changed their name to De Rothschild, formerly known as William Alfred Kauffman.

They do love their name changes though.

What pleased me was the comments on the YT video, all slamming the Rothschild's family and how aware they were of the evil of the Rothschild's family.

Times are a changing and people are learning more pertinent knowledge.

Trump got 77M votes in the recent election, but the highest category again was those that don't vote at 90M.

So despite the lying media telling you Trump was the popular vote, the actual most popular vote was the non-voting group.

This was up from 81M who never voted in 2020.

An extra 9m decided it was a waste of time, but if only the 140M who did vote didn't bother as well, we might just have a government for and by the people.

US President-elect Donald Trump has threatened to impose 100% tariffs on a bloc of nine nations, if they were to create a rival currency to the US dollar.

All of which reveals Trump is in bed with the Fed and also the Black Sun group running the Fed.

So the tariffs are not to aid America, only the US junta controlled by bankers and the MIC.

The idea that the BRICS Countries are trying to move away from the Dollar while we stand by and watch is over, Trump wrote on social media on Saturday.

Major world powers China and Russia are part of the BRICS alliance, along with Brazil, India, South Africa, Iran, Egypt, Ethiopia and the United Arab Emirates.

During the US election, Trump campaigned on implementing widespread tariffs.

He has escalated threats of steep levies in recent days.

Leading politicians in Brazil and Russia have suggested creating a BRICS currency to reduce the US dollar's dominance in global trade.

But internal disagreement has slowed any progress.

We require a commitment from these countries that they will neither create a new BRICS currency, nor back any other currency to replace the mighty US dollar or they will face 100% tariffs and should expect to say goodbye to selling into the wonderful US economy, they can go find another sucker, he said.

Who gave the US the authority over the rest of the world, the arrogance is astounding.

No Mr. Trump there is no wonderful economy at all, stop spreading total illusion.

Companies are closing stores on a massive scale, companies are going bankrupt on a massive scale, we have no real economy, that is the reality.

The US economy is built only for the greed conglomerates and the MIC, plus their agency contractor lackeys.

Everything else is going down the toilet, except lawyer companies, largely operated by Jews.

Question and pondering that will take us into next year to be answered is: Is Trump putting up vocal opposition to dupe the Americans into thinking he is fighting the BRICS currency, whilst privately along with his Black Rock buddies promoting it?

Did you know that the U.S. Postal Service, has been photographing the exterior of every piece of paper mail for the past 20 years, they are also spying on Americans' texts, emails and social media posts?

The great questions are A: who requested this B: who allowed this C: when where the people informed of such actions and D: why were the people not consulted as to whether they wanted this service?

Next year we should have a major focus upon surveillance and spying, as with this AI, bots and various other methods, the surveillance of the people is going to increase to the levels shown in the series Continuum.

Oil to Israel, where is it going and where is it not going?

Erdogan and Turkey has allegedly stopped oil to Israel, that has been going through Turkey from Azerbaijan to Israel.

US stolen oil from Syria to Israel is allegedly stopped by Syria.

Has the US started to supply Israel from elsewhere?

Seems the whole region with the potential exception of UAE, Qatar and Saudi Arabia have had enough of Israel.

A week last Sunday the right in your face Talmudic hierarchical law system unfolded, right here in America.

Here is a recap of what Joe Biden said in pardoning his son.

In issuing the full and unconditional pardon for his son, Joe Biden said Hunter was selectively and unfairly prosecuted.

No reasonable person who looks at the facts of Hunter's cases, can reach any other conclusion than Hunter was singled out only because he is my son and that is wrong.

There has been an effort to break Hunter, who has been five and a half years sober, even in the face of unrelenting attacks and selective prosecution.

In trying to break Hunter, they've tried to break me and there's no reason to believe it will stop here.

Enough is enough, Joe Biden said, in a statement from the White House.

The pardon covers any potential federal crimes Hunter Biden may have committed from January 2014 through December 2024.

This period covers Hunter Biden's tenure as a board member of Burisma, a Ukrainian company that has been accused of bribery.

No doubt now Trump will get pardons for his own crimes as well, now that he is the President of USA Inc.

These people are taunting those who voted for them, saying look we can do whatever we like after you all voted for us.

Hunter admitted his crimes, and the only reason to do that, is to stop the investigation widening out.

Because then you find a whole heap of crimes apart from gun crime and tax evasion.

Potential evidence of sex with underage children has been documented and reported.

Clear evidence of him, his father and some within the Government, Military and Agencies syphoning many billions of dollars out of America and into shell corporations located in Ukraine.

Yet again proving these elites do whatever they want and cannot be charged.

This totally undermines the justice system, the DOJ, FBI and State Departments.

But the greatest damage is done to the people, as the people are getting fined and jailed for menial things, yet a fake President's son can get off Scott free for more serious crimes.

The Biden family is all very Clintonesque, another crime family that got away with murder, literally and figuratively.

They will go on taking the piss out of the American public, until the people state and act by saying enough is enough.

Then demand criminal charges to be reinstated and for Hunter to receive the punishment on the same level as everyone else.

Message to people who have to go into court, when asked to state your name say Hunter Biden.

Because the full list of crimes Hunter got away with is 191 sex crimes, 128 drug crimes and 140 business crimes, a total of 459 crimes.

All very Talmudic is it not? Maybe it is because Hunter has a Jewish girlfriend?

Here is another example of laws for us, but none for the criminal elites.

Provisions for immunity from prosecution at the International Criminal Court apply to Israeli Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu, the French foreign ministry said Wednesday.

Of course the French were going to support Israel, their country was hijacked 1500 or so years ago by Jews and even named the country after one Jewish family, the Franks.

It said the Israeli leader was covered by immunity rules that apply to states which are not a party to the ICC.

Israel is not an ICC member.

A state cannot be held to act in a way that is incompatible with its obligations in terms of international law with regards to immunities granted to states which are not party to the ICC, the French statement said.

Nobody asked as to why Israel is not party to the ICC like everyone else.

Could it be they are above the law?

Such immunities apply to Prime Minister Netanyahu and other ministers in question, and must be taken into consideration should the ICC ask us to arrest them and hand them over, it said.

Earlier Wednesday, Foreign Minister Jean-Noel Barrot had already said that France considered that some leaders could enjoy immunity from ICC prosecution.

Asked if France would arrest Netanyahu if he stepped on French territory, Jean-Noel Barrot did not give a specific answer in an interview with Franceinfo radio.

He said France is very committed to international justice and will apply international law based on its obligations to cooperate with the ICC.

Unless of course that involves the Jewish and Israel.

Genocide is genocide in everyone's world except when it comes to Jews and Israel.

That is what they are telling us.

It has been revealed by a Lebanon's parliamentary speaker, Nabih Berri, said to be a Hezbollah ally who represented his country in truce talks, said at least 54 ceasefire breaches by Israel had been recorded.

He said these included air strikes, demolishing homes near the border and violating Lebanese airspace.

He urged the monitoring commission to urgently ensure that Israel adhere to the deal.

Israel says its strikes are a response to Hezbollah violations allowed under the terms of the agreement.

Its foreign minister, Gideon Saar, has accused Hezbollah of taking the prohibited step of moving weapons south of the Litani River.

Much now depends on the international committee which is meant to verify claims of ceasefire breaches and facilitate communication between the parties.

The Israelis will never change their arrogant and destructive ways; it is in their nature and perhaps DNA.

They just lie through their teeth whilst presenting an image of lily white and the victims of everything.

How do you know when people are covering up a lie, crime or an agenda, denial of process.

The classic Egyptian river that blocks all truth, de-nile.

Crime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu on Monday submitted to the High Court his response to petitions, demanding that the government be ordered to establish a state commission of inquiry into the failures of October 7 and the subsequent war in Gaza.

Claiming that the court has no authority to make such a ruling.

Confirming they do not want the truth out surrounding what really unfolded that day.

The Israelis allowed and probably participated in the October 7th raid, otherwise why would they cover it up?

As I have always said, the truth never fears investigation.

Those wishing to stifle investigations or debate things always are operating in lies.

As of writing on December 4th a decision will be made in Germany by the Bundestag on December 16th on whether to attack Russia or not.

With Russia forced to fire a missile last week at a German helicopter, suggests Germany maybe about to get involved.

Given France is in dire financial straits, I would suggest the banks will push them to go to war also.

That then will generate war bonds, which are debt notes to temporarily prop up the financial sector.

A sign of things to come as the world starts to reject the control system imposed by the US Military and the CIA.

Keep an eye on Tbilisi Georgia as things are hotting up there.

The top end of Georgia is ran by the CIA.

Trouble also in S. Korea as the US Military and the CIA are trying to goad N. Korea into conflict.

The S. Korean president issued a martial law on the country, but their government over ruled it 193-0.

Seems the S. Koreans are tired of their country being used as a patsy for US Military and the CIA.

If Americans think all wars only happen in far off countries, which was a deliberate policy against the psyche of war, you best start to think again.

As a just released Politico article Blue States unite to resist Federal pressure under Trump, points to the United States preparing to go to war against itself and civil war fears joined by the news.

The U.S. Department of Energy said Friday that 200 million barrels of oil have been bought and delivered for the strategic oil reserve.

With the FEMA mysteriously staging 350 semi-trailers at the decommissioned Wurtsmith Air Force Base in the socialist Democrat Party controlled State of Michigan, it was just revealed: FEMA staging trucks across north central Michigan, including at the former Wurtsmith Air Force Base, sparking speculation and fears about the agency's doings and prompting elected representatives to seek clarification from FEMA officials.

N. Carolina it seemed was the opening gambit, unless Trump who is aware of the scam of FEMA, takes immediate actions to halt all FEMA activities.

As war is ramping up, not slowing down in the Middle East, Israel is continuing to expand just as THI warned.

Here is a summing up of events.

Israel is hunting down and killing doctors in Lebanon and also doing the same in Gaza.
The Israeli military has warned Lebanese citizens not to return to 60 villages in the south of the country, three days into a ceasefire after more than a year of fighting with the Shia armed group Hezbollah.
More than a million Lebanese have been displaced by the fighting, mostly from the south.
Under the terms of the agreement, which was brokered by the US and France, Israeli forces will withdraw from south Lebanon as the Lebanese army deploys there simultaneously with no other armed groups allowed to operate in the area.
This is meant to happen within 60 days from the start of the ceasefire.
Ceasefire with landgrab that is.
The US is carpet bombing in Yemen, I suspect Oman will be next.
Turkey's Erdogan went behind the backs of those in BRICS, to go with the CIA, Pentagon, British, French and Israel into Syria.
Also the jihadists all funded and trained by the US are attacking Syria.

Russia and Iraq are supporting Syria along with Hezbollah to fight the jihadists.
President Assad is alleged to have resigned, but footage emerged his plane with which he was fleeing in, was forced down just before he resigned.
Syria has the most refugees from foreign countries, including more than 5 million refugees living in neighboring countries.
Which suggests they are all being corralled there, to then wipe them all out.
An estimated 16.7 million people need humanitarian assistance.
Israel has bombed the border between Syria and Iraq to cut off supply from Iran to Hezbollah.
Far from withdrawing in Gaza, the Israelis are building more walls, nearly 6 miles of it, by creating a new military dividing line in Gaza, separating off the far north of the strip.
Troops are in control of, and are clearing, an area across the width of north Gaza.
Satellite images and videos show that hundreds of buildings have been demolished between the Mediterranean Sea and the Israel border, mostly through controlled explosions.
More than 100,000 people have already been displaced from the far north of Gaza.
Images also show Israeli troops and vehicles have been stationed across the new divide.
Analysts said the images suggest Gaza is being split into zones to make it easier to control.
Easier to control? I thought they were supposed to be leaving?

The Syrian military doesn't exist, Russia offered to build up the Syrian military 4 years ago, Assad refused.
Iran also offered support to Assad a few months ago as they warned of an imminent assault, Assad refused that as well.
Assad said he would prefer to connect with the Arab states again, rather than the Aryan support structure.
I am wondering whether Assad was a puppet all along?
It has been reported that the sanctions against Syria has starved the people.
Syrian soldiers are paid just $7 a month and Generals $70 a month.
Now Netanyahu has got gas from Turkey, which they were short of, he is now launching a much bigger war for the Greater Israel project.
I am not sure whether there is two factions coming out of Turkey, as further reports state that Turkish fighters are targeting the US backed Kurds.
It is rumored the Kurds have a load of ISIS prisoners and may let them loose on the battlefield.

As THI suggested, the Lebanon ceasefire was all fake to allow the Israelis to regroup, resupply and attack on a greater scale.
I warned Syria would be next, following that it will be Southern parts of Turkey.
With Georgia now in unrest, Azerbaijan will follow.
Other reports of unrest in Romania, which is the next country West of Ukraine, expect Bulgaria to follow.
It may also spill into Iraq and Afghanistan again.
With Israel formulating ties with UAE the circle is being formed for the greater attack, Iran.
Go and look on a map for greater clarity, it is obvious what is unfolding.
I hope you don't have American sons and daughters over there, be prepared for most of them to not return home, unless in a body bag.
Be prepared for something major unfolding, as eventually Iran will have to strike back against this NATO like creep of the Israelis closer to their border.
When that unfolds, it will not be pretty.
With CIA clowns to the left and Turkish and Syria jokers to the right, everyone is stuck in the middle with evil.

MEDICAL SECTION:

Here is some good news and sanity prevailing and perhaps another reversal of a ridiculous agenda driven policy towards transgenderism.
This ties into last week's show The future world surrounding the transhumanist program.
Children will be banned from receiving puberty blockers on prescription under NHS rules that come into effect immediately.

Under-18s will now only be able to take the controversial drugs as part of a clinical trial set to start at the end of this year. Ministers said the landmark decision was in children's best interests, and would help to ensure youngsters who feel their gender is not the same as their sex are being treated using medical evidence. The proposals to stop the practice were first accepted by NHS England in July 2022 following recommendations made by a review led by Dr Hilary Cass, the former president of the Royal College of Pediatrics and Child Health. She warned that the drugs may permanently disrupt the brain maturation of adolescents, potentially rewiring neural circuits in a way that cannot be reversed, and said there was a lack of long-term evidence and data collection on their safety and effectiveness. Rewiring brain circuits that cannot be reversed, is all very transhumanist is it not? The blockers pause the physical changes of puberty such as breast development or facial hair. Experts have said the affirmative approach by the controversial Tavistock clinic, and subsequent referrals for the prescribing of blockers, was sending children on an irreversible path without exploring mental health conditions. What needs to be followed up is, a public inquiry and a detailed look into what Tavistock is exactly up to. I would go further and charge Tavistock with reckless endangerment of children. Maya Forstater, executive director of women's rights group Sex Matters, said the significance of NHS England's statement that there is not enough evidence to support the safety or clinical effectiveness of puberty blockers cannot be overstated. The Tavistock's Gender and Identity Development Service (Gids) is no longer accepting patients after being shut down by the NHS, with new regional hubs set to open next month, following a year of delays.

The announcement comes following the culmination of a public consultation on the policy, which was published on Tuesday confirming the decision. In 2021-22, there were more than 5,000 referrals to the Tavistock's Gids compared with just under 250 a decade earlier. Following Tavistock's closure, two new NHS services will open in early April, situated in London's Great Ormond Street Hospital and Alder Hey Children's Hospital in Liverpool. Centers in other regions will be set up at a later date. The NHS has said children attending these clinics will be supported by clinical experts in neurodiversity, pediatrics and mental health, resulting in a holistic approach to care. Around 250 patients are expected to be transferred to the new clinics from Gids when they open. Some 5,000 more children and young people are on the waiting list for referral to the new clinics. The NHS said: We have concluded that there is not enough evidence to support the safety or clinical effectiveness of puberty-suppressing hormones to make the treatment routinely available at this time. Liz Truss, the former prime minister, said the ban should be extended to private practices as well and called on MPs to back her amendment to the Health and Equality Acts Bill to make their prescription to children illegal.

I welcome NHS England's decision to end the routine prescription of puberty blockers to children for gender dysphoria, she said. I urge the Government to back my Bill which will reinforce this in law and also prevent these drugs being supplied privately. Dysphoria? What does that mean? Well you know sometimes words have two meanings. A: Dysphoria or dysphoric mood is a mental state in which a person has a profound sense of unease or dissatisfaction. While not a mental health diagnosis on its own, dysphoria is a symptom associated with a variety of mental illnesses, some of which include stress, anxiety, depression and substance use disorders. B: the original meaning, impatience under affliction, hard to bear or anguish. Neither are good to describe transgender changes, a mental condition and an anguish that is hard to bear. Yet Tavistock and other clinical people went along with this mental condition with children? One wonders who really has the mental condition? The children or the medical people?

This also plays into The Future world show. This is very revealing on a massive scale, in many ways it is explosive. Emotionally, it is easy to dismiss the work of Doctor Ana Maria Mihalcea for it is very disturbing. But her work is shown through scientific testing and backed up by government and NGO documentation. The evidence shows that humanity has already been infected with cutting edge surveillance nanotechnology. This is a follow up to my last report on Doctor Mihalcea's Hydrogel research. New research shows that those who received the Covid shots emit a fluorescent orange glow in their faces, that is visible under a UV light of 365 nano-meters. Orange glow? I guess Donald Trump has been having multiple injections for over a decade then! Those who have been exposed to shedding emit this glow around their nose. After his wife was coerced into getting the Covid shot, PhD Justin Coy began his own research. He found that the more shots a person received, the more they glowed under UV light. The glow can be seen initially around the nose, and over time spreads throughout the entire face and into the neck.

After a hot shower, filaments are expelled through the skin of the vaxxed, and these filaments also emit a glow under UV light. These filaments not only glow, but they have been shown to move on their own, in spastic movements and they are also attracted to people. In videos they can be seen trying to latch on to a finger. Almost operating like a djinn. When a person who has received the shot has dry skin, these expelled filaments will become airborne. This could explain how shedding occurs from the vaxxed to the unvaxxed. The Pfizer trial documents stated that an unvaxxed individual in close proximity to someone who's been vaxxed, can be infected by inhalation and skin contact.

In 2008 a biological nanotechnology pesticide designed to kill the Brown Moth in the state of California was deployed, and appears to have included the same sort of fluorescent invisible micro dye that we see in the scientific research. So, the vaccine contained pesticide and no one said anything? FDA and USDA complicit in crimes against humanity again. Doctor Hildegarde Staninger tested individuals exposed to this nano-tech pesticide and found that a glow could be detected in their eyes under UV light. Doctor Staninger called this the Eye of Horus effect due to its similar appearance. Now isn't that significant? The same Isis, Horus and Osiris shit these fake Egyptian worshipping clowns support. It was claimed it was due to the use of fluorescent thiocyanate in the pesticide. Which according to the literature, would have been used to track the effectiveness of the dispersal. This idea has been around for decades. The Institute for National Security Studies, Nonlethal Weapons: Terms and References, published in 1997, discusses an invisible infrared dye which is visible under UV light so that rioters can be later identified. Justin Coy points out how the genetic code for Luciferase, a bio-luminescent enzyme found in nature, is included in the Pfizer and Moderna vaccines along with SV40, which could theoretically allow the Luciferase to be written into the genetics of the recipient. Coy proposes that this could be what is causing the vaxxed to glow under UV light.

The TRACE act, H.R.6666 – Covid 19 Testing, Reaching, And Contacting Everyone Act, was introduced in May of 2020. The bill authorizes the Centers for Disease Control to contact trace and monitor the population. Wow and Mr. Trump along with the Trustee was in on that act. Again the same month I was removed by the Trustee, I guess she knew I would never go along with that evil. She has much to answer for and yet gets a free reign by her followers, plus the agents she sent to THI. In late 2020 and early 2021, people all over the world started noticing purple streetlights, which is the color of UV light. The quantum dot tattoo research funded by the Bill and Melinda Gates Foundation, provided a way of detecting whether or not a person was vaccinated, by including fluorescent medical information in the vaccines. Invisible near infrared tattoos that would imprint beneath the skin to later be read by customized smartphones. In the scientific literature on quantum dot research, these fluorescent medical information tattoos have a similar appearance to the faces of those infected by the vaxx under UV light. You may or may not believe in biblical prophecy, but it seems clear that the ones running this diabolical program are using it as their playbook.

From Revelation 13:
And the second beast required all people small and great, rich and poor, free and slave, to receive a mark on their right hand or on their forehead, so that no one could buy or sell unless he had the mark.
All of which reveals the bible is their playbook to administer harm and death on all people they deem not worthy.
But never forget we still have free will.

The cognitive decline could reach up to nine points in some cases, scientists have claimed. The long-term consequences of Covid-19 could include decreased cognitive abilities and memory deficiency, a new large-scale study has found. According to research published in the New England Journal of Medicine on Thursday, patients who had recovered from coronavirus symptoms had a cognitive deficit equivalent to three IQ points, compared with those who had never been diagnosed with it. The Covid impact was even more pronounced when it came to those who were admitted to the intensive care unit, with the IQ loss reaching nine points compared to the control group. All of which destroys the notion of transhumanism bringing enhancements to humans. Why would they ever bring enhancements now? when they have a consistent track record of reducing, debilitating, harming and harvesting all of our lives.

Meanwhile, study participants with unresolved persistent symptoms had an IQ decline of six points. At the same time, the scientists observed a small cognitive advantage among participants who had received multiple vaccinations, the research claims.

The study said that there are multiple underlying factors that contribute to post-Covid cognitive decline.

Our results confirmed associations of cognitive deficits with mood swings and fatigue but also with a variety of other symptoms, researchers said.

The Journal's editorial dedicated to the study called its results concerning, given the scope of the Covid-19 pandemic, noting that the broader implications require evaluation.

At the same time, the results indicated that those who suffered cognitive decline due to persistent Covid symptoms, could later regain part of their ability, reaching the level of those who managed to recover quickly.

A total of 800,000 people were invited to take part in the study in England, with around 113,000 completing it.

The participants were asked to do a number of online tests to evaluate their cognitive abilities.

One of the major caveats of the research, however, was the lack of data on participants' IQ level before they contracted Covid, which meant that their cognition was measured against those who did not have the disease rather than their own abilities.

They will not expose the lack of IQ, because then people will see it is a deliberate program of reducing the world to retard level.

Retard of course is now given as an offensive word, why? to cover up so many being at a retard level on the original IQ tests.

Retard was not the worst, moron and idiot where below the level of retard.

So according to the political correctness and woke brigade, retard is no longer acceptable.

Yet personally I find those who reject it as retards themselves, as their brain levels have been retarded enough to ban words, just like we do with children.

All of which is ironic, as far too many people act like infants.

Anything the system bans needs deeper thinking and introspection as to what they are actually doing.

According to World Health Organization data, there have been a total of 774 million recorded Covid cases globally, with seven million reported deaths.

Apart from an apparent cognitive decline, the long-term effects of Covid could include chronic pain, brain fog, shortness of breath, chest pain and fatigue.

7 million deaths is not a pandemic in the strict sense of the word, all of which makes their predictions speculative at best and fraud at worst.

An extraordinary report in extraordinary times, do not let this piece be overlooked by the rest of the show.

The grasping and understanding of it has to stick, to then go about counteracting it.

SOCIETY SECTION:

An interesting group called Camover that started in Berlin has now popped up in Britain.

Their purpose? To smash as many CCTV cameras as possible, whilst filming it.

Gang members operate on a points system based upon how many cameras they can smash.

Of course the authorities will not like this very much and consider it criminal.

Yet did they consider it was criminal spying on their people every day of the week, without asking their permission?

I am not going to condone vandalism, but these authorities go way too far without consulting the public.

Another successful lawsuit that goes against the people who promote woke policies, now it has cost them big money.

Colorado officials have agreed to pay over $1.5 million to cover attorney fees for graphic designer Lorie Smith, who successfully challenged the state's antidiscrimination law at the Supreme Court.

The settlement, announced Tuesday, comes months after the high court ruled in 303 Creative LLC v. Elenis that Colorado violated Smith's First Amendment rights, by attempting to compel her to create wedding websites for same-sex couples against her religious beliefs.

Earlier this year, a federal district court issued a final judgment requiring state officials to cease efforts to compel Smith's speech, a resolution that brought an end to years of legal and personal hardship.

Maybe when it hits them in the pocket, maybe then they will start to use their brains more?

Whilst many American's are struggling those with excessive salaries continue to proffer, although some hard hitting stringent measures are beginning to apply in the struggling media section.

MSNBC anchor Rachel Maddow will reportedly take a $5 million pay cut as the cable television network's ratings continue to nosedive.

This follows Comcast, NBC's parent company, announcing it would split MSNBC and CNBC from NBC News, in a bid to create a new spin-off company with several other Comcast-owned cable channels.

Maddow, 51, currently earns an impressive $30 million a year at the network, but according to The Ankler, after renegotiations, her new contract will be for $25 million a year over the next five years.

This is what is wrong with society, there is no correlation or balance as to what people should earn.

How is an average talk show host getting $30M a year for flapping her gums and spitting out division and pro pagan da? yet nurses, care workers and many other professions that actually contribute some value to society are expected to exist as a family for less than $40K a year?

These people are parasites, no one needs to earn money than $150K a year or even $200K max, the rest is just pure greed. The values are all wrong and people do not understand the balance of how money works. For every salary over $200K means many go drastically short, most into poverty. That is how it works and more need to understand that as an established fact. Those demanding higher salaries are harvesting those at the bottom of the pay scale, and perpetuating the keeping up with the Jones' program so damaging to so many. Maddow of course now will be seen as some sort of sugar coated charity status, isn't it honorable she chose to work for $5M a year less, no it is not. For those who earn $40K per year, that will take 125 years to earn the $5M she had taken off of her salary. $25M a year she earns now, that is 625 years to make that earning on $40K a year. Now do you understand the math? It is parasitic in the extreme and Maddow is an example of that. She has no talent whatsoever, just a scripted controversial mouthpiece brought forward by the diversity program and the fact she is from Jewish stock.

EXPOSE:

[Text by Thomas Williams is in bold]

A different type of expose this week, as it is important to highlight how many more are having the courage to speak out now. This was an address at the Oxford Union, which is connected to the infamous Oxford University that has spawned many dark programs against the people.

In a profoundly moving and meticulously crafted address, Palestinian author and human rights activist Susan Abulhawa captivated the Oxford Union during a debate Nov. 28, 2024, on the motion: This House believes Israel is an apartheid state responsible for genocide. The motion passed with overwhelming support, 278 votes to 59, but it was Abulhawa's speech that resonated deeply, leaving the audience in stunned silence.

She said:

I will not take questions until I'm finished speaking; so please refrain from interrupting me. Addressing the challenge of what to do about the indigenous inhabitants of the land, Chaim Weizman, a Russian Jew, said to the World Zionist Congress in 1921, that Palestinians were akin to the rocks of Judea, obstacles that had to be cleared on a difficult path. David Gruen, a Polish Jew, who changed his name to David Ben Gurion to sound relevant to the region, said: We must expel Arabs and take their places.

Note the amount of Jews coming out of Russia, Poland, Ukraine, Hungary and other countries in the East block of Europe, to then go on and dominate other countries.

America is filled with them.

After the Zionist takeover of Russia they then spread about the world to continue their global hegemony plot, just as we covered in the FHSTOS book.

There are thousands of such conversations among the early Zionists who plotted and implemented the violent colonization of Palestine and the annihilation of her native people.

But they were only partially successful, murdering or ethnically cleansing 80% of Palestinians, which meant that 20% of us remained.

An enduring obstacle to their colonial fantasies, which became the subject of their obsessions in the decades that followed, especially after conquering what remained of Palestine in 1967.

Zionists lamented our presence and they debated publicly in all circles, political, academic, social, cultural circles regarding what do with us; what to do about the Palestinian birthrate, about our babies, which they dub a demographic threat.

Benny Morris, who was originally meant to be here, once expressed regret that Ben Gurion did not finish the job of getting rid of us all, which would have obviated what they refer to as, the Arab problem.

Benjamin Netanyahu, a Polish Jew whose real name is Benjamin Mileikowsky, once bemoaned a missed opportunity during the 1989 Tiananmen Square uprising, to expel large swaths of the Palestinian population while world attention was focused on China.

Now you know what the Ukraine event is for, Israeli distraction.

Some of their articulated solutions to the nuisance of our existence include a break their bones policy in the '80s and '90s, ordered by Yitzhak Rubitzov, a Ukrainian Jew who changed his name to Yitzhak Rabin for the same reasons.

Glad she pointed out what we have said all along about their propensity to change their names, all to hide themselves.

That horrific policy that crippled generations of Palestinians did not succeed in making us leave.

And frustrated by Palestinian resilience, a new discourse arose, especially after a massive natural gas field was discovered off the coast of Northern Gaza worth trillions of dollars.

Yes we reported on that and gave a warning about it, all about the shekels again you see.
It doesn't matter who they kill in the process, as the shekels is all that matters to them.

This new discourse is echoed in the words of Colonel Efraim Eitan, who said in 2004, we have to kill them all.
Aaron Sofer, an Israeli so-called intellectual and political advisor, insisted in 2018 that: we have to kill and kill and kill.
All day, every day.

These people or beings are violent murderers of the highest order, all they preach is anti-human, violence, death and destruction and using a carefully placed smokescreen to cover all the atrocities up.
That smokescreen is Jesus, Christianity, the Holy land, Jerusalem and the bible, those 5 things holds the whole world in a vice like grip.
The equivalent of the 5 hooks against soul development.
Just listen to the pure evil these people get up to, this is beyond despicable.

When I was in Gaza, I saw a little boy no more than 9 years whose hands and part of his face had been blown off from a booby trapped can of food, that soldiers had left behind for Gaza's starving children.

I later learned that they had also left poisoned food for people in Shujaiyya, and in the 1980s and '90s, Israeli soldiers had left booby trapped toys in southern Lebanon that exploded when excited children picked them up.

The harm they do is diabolical, and yet, they expect you to believe they are the victims.

You just can't get any lower than that type of warfare and the world needs to know and understand this, these people or beings are beyond evil.

They are genocidal, barbaric, satanic monsters that must be stopped by all means necessary.

Invoking Europe's holocaust and screaming antisemitism, they expect you to suspend fundamental human reason to believe that the daily sniping of children with so called kill shots and the bombing of entire neighborhoods that bury families alive and wipe out whole bloodlines is self-defense.

They want you to believe that a man who had not eaten a thing in over 72 hours, who kept fighting even when all he had was one functioning arm, that this man was motivated by some innate savagery and irrational hatred or jealousy of Jews, rather than the indomitable yearning to see his people free in their own homeland.

If people read and understood FHSTOS then this debate as powerful as it is would not go on.

Jews would become pariahs of this planet and a trust of them would be eliminated, and with it the end of the problem.

Is it all Jews? No, but they themselves have to do far more to rectify this planetary wide problem, before the inevitable global backlash against ALL Jews.

This next section is horrific and leaves no stone unturned as to the true depth of the problem and the evil the Jews do daily.

It's clear to me that we're not here to debate whether Israel is an apartheid or genocidal state.

This debate is ultimately about the worth of Palestinian lives; about the worth of our schools, research centers, books, art and dreams; about the worth of the homes we worked all our lives to build and which contain the memories of generations; about the worth of our humanity and our agency; the worth of bodies and ambitions.

Because if the roles were reversed, if Palestinians had spent the last eight decades stealing Jewish homes, expelling, oppressing, imprisoning, poisoning, torturing, raping and killing them; if Palestinians had killed an estimated 300,000 Jews in one year, targeted their journalists, their thinkers, their healthcare workers, their athletes, their artists, bombed every Israeli hospital, university, library, museum, cultural center, synagogue, and simultaneously set up an observation platform where people came to watch their slaughter as if a tourist attraction;

If Palestinians had corralled them by the hundreds of thousands into flimsy tents, bombed them in so called safe zones, burned them alive, cut off their food, water and medicine;

If Palestinians made Jewish children wander barefoot with empty pots; made them gather the flesh of their parents into plastic bags; made them bury their siblings, cousins and friends; made them sneak out from their tents in the middle of the night to sleep on their parents' graves; made them pray for death just to join their families and not be alone in this terrible world anymore, and terrorized them so utterly that their children lose their hair, lose their memory, lose their minds, and made those as young as 4 and 5 year old die of heart attacks;

If we mercilessly forced their NICU babies to die, alone in hospital beds, crying until they could cry no more, died and decomposed in the same spot;

If Palestinians used wheat flour aid trucks to lure starving Jews, then opened fire on them when they gathered to collect a day's bread; if Palestinians finally allowed a food delivery into a shelter with hungry Jews, then set fire to the entire shelter and aid truck before anyone could taste the food;

If a Palestinian sniper bragged about blowing out 42 Jewish kneecaps in one day, as one Israeli soldier did in 2019; if a Palestinian admitted to CNN that he ran over hundreds of Jews with his tank, their squished flesh lingering in the tank treads;

If Palestinians were systematically raping Jewish doctors, patients and other captives with hot metal rods, jagged and electrified sticks, fire extinguishers and sometimes raping to death, as happened with Dr. Adnan alBursh and others; If Jewish women were forced to give birth in filth, get C-sections or leg amputations without anesthesia; if we destroyed their children then decorated our tanks with their toys; if we killed or displaced their women then posed with their lingerie. If the world were watching the livestreamed systematic annihilation of Jews in real time, there would be no debating whether that constituted terrorism or genocide.

Just listen to that shit and weep for humanity, just pure evil and yet people are frightened to speak up about it?

Susan said shame on you, where is your humanity? Why do we tolerate this on our planet?

That is a good question that everyone should ask themselves, why do we tolerate violence, wars, death and destruction on our planet?

Why do we tolerate the slaughter and abuse of children? Why do we not pay too much attention to those bombed out of their homes?

Why do we tolerate our taxes being used to facilitate this suffering, without raising concerns?

This planet belongs to everyone and everyone has free use.

It does not and never did belong to those that go by the name of Jews, with their fake AI sky god, unproven chosen ones statement and even more unproven, that god gave them the land.

They are a parasite race who harvesting everything on this planet, based upon a fake book.

And yet two Palestinians, myself and Mohammad el-Kurd showed up here to do just that, enduring the indignity of debating those who think our only life choices should be to leave our homeland, submit to their supremacy, or die politely and quietly.

But you would be wrong to think that I came to convince you of anything.

The house resolution, though well-meaning and appreciated, is of little consequence in the midst of this holocaust of our time.

I came in the spirit of Malcolm X and Jimmy Baldwin, both of whom stood here and in Cambridge before I was born, facing finely dressed well-spoken monsters who harbored the same supremacist ideologies as Zionism, these notions of entitlement and privilege, of being divinely favored, blessed or chosen.

I'm here for the sake of history.

To speak to generations not yet born and for the chronicles of this extraordinary time, where the carpet bombing of defenseless indigenous societies is legitimized.

I'm here for my grandmothers, both of whom died as penniless refugees while foreign Jews lived in their stolen homes.

I also came to speak directly to Zionists here and everywhere.

We let you into our homes when your own countries tried to murder you and everyone else turned you away.

We fed and clothed you, gave you shelter, and we shared the bounty of our land with you, and when the time was ripe, you kicked us out of our own homes and homeland, then you killed and robbed and burned and looted our lives.

So much for charity, morals, principles and gratitude, these people known as Jews appear to have none of those traits.

A heinous darkened vacuum devoid of humanity and honor.

There was a reason they were thrown out of 106 countries in 2000 years, and no it was not because people were antisemitic, that word only came into being in the later 1800's.

They were thrown out because no one liked them, because they would not mix and refused to build communities, in general they were not nice people or beings.

You carved out our hearts, because it is clear you do not know how to live in the world without dominating others.

You have crossed all lines and nurtured the most vile of human impulses, but the world is finally glimpsing the terror we have endured at your hands for so long, they are seeing the reality of who you are, who you've always been.

Hear, hear.

They watch in utter astonishment the sadism, the glee, the joy and pleasure, with which you conduct, watch and cheer the daily details of breaking our bodies, our minds, our future, our past.

But no matter what happens from here, no matter what fairy tales you tell yourself and tell the world, you will never truly belong to that land. You will never understand the sacredness of the olive trees, which you've been cutting down and burning for decades just to spite us and to break our hearts a little more.

No one native to that land would dare do such a thing to the olives.

No one who belongs to that region would ever bomb or destroy such ancient heritage as Baalbak or Bittir, or destroy ancient cemeteries as you destroy ours, like the Anglican cemetery in Jerusalem or the resting place of ancient Muslim scholars and warriors in Maamanillah.

Those who come from that land do not desecrate the dead; that's why my family for centuries were the caretakers of the Jewish cemetery in the Mount of Olives, as labors of faith and care for what we know is part of our ancestry and story.

Your ancestors will always be buried in your actual homelands of Poland, Ukraine, and elsewhere around the world from whence you came.

The myths and folklore of the land will always be alien to you.

That echoes our FHSTOS book, that is the march West by Genghis Khan, the Turks and the Bulgars, as we referenced in the book and series.

The Palestinians and indeed the whole of the Middle East knows, the Jews and Israel does not and never belonged there. A nomadic tribe of ill repute who went about taking over lands for their own gain. They are not legitimate, they were legitimized by the Rothschilds and the Balfour declaration, based upon fabricating a book filled with plans for their takeover of this planet. That book is the bible and anyone who reads it with common sense critical thinking, not pure fantasy, will see right through it. That book has got more people killed than all the worst dictators combined, yet people defend it?

You will never be literate in the sartorial language of the robes we wear, that sprang from the land through our foremothers over centuries, every motif, design and pattern speaking to the secrets of local lore, flora, birds, rivers and wildlife. What your real estate agents call in their high-priced listings “old Arab home” will always hold in their stones the stories and memories of our ancestors who built them.

The ancient photos and paintings of the land will never contain you.

You will never know how it feels to be loved and supported by those who have nothing to gain from you, and in fact, everything to lose.

You will never know the feeling of masses all over the world pouring into the streets and stadiums to chant and sing for your freedom; and it is not because you are Jewish, as you try to make the world believe, but because you are depraved violent colonizers who think your Jewishness entitles you to the home my grandfather and his brothers built with their own hands, on lands that had been in our family for centuries.

That line is worth repeating: it is not because you are Jewish, as you try to make the world believe, but because you are depraved violent colonizers, who think your Jewishness entitles you to the home my grandfather and his brothers built with their own hands, on lands that had been in our family for centuries.

It is an important point to make to counter their nonsense of, everyone hates Jews and so nobody will agree with us.

It is child level rhetoric in the extreme.

The point is, too many people have been harmed and killed by this Jewish junta for centuries, why would anyone like or support that? 106 countries who threw them out, can't all be wrong or have hate for one race.

It is because Zionism is a blight onto Judaism and indeed onto humanity.

You can change your names to sound more relevant to the region and you can pretend falafel and hummus and zaatar are your ancient cuisines, but in the recesses of your being, you will always feel the sting of this epic forgery and theft.

That's why even the drawings of our children hung on walls at the UN or in a hospital ward send your leaders and lawyers into hysteric meltdowns.

You will not erase us, no matter how many of us you kill and kill and kill, all day every day.

We are not the rocks Chaim Weizmann thought you could clear from the land.

We are its very soil.

We are her rivers, her trees and her stories, because all of that was nurtured by our bodies and our lives over millennia of continuous, uninterrupted habitation of that patch of earth between the Jordan and Mediterranean waters, from our Canaanite, our Hebrew, our Philistine and our Phoenician ancestors.

To every conqueror or pilgrim who came and went, who married or raped, loved, enslaved, converted between religions, settled or prayed in our land, leaving pieces of themselves in our bodies and our heritage.

The fabled, tumultuous stories of that land are quite literally in our DNA.

You cannot kill or propagandize that away, no matter what death technology you use or what Hollywood and corporate media arsenals you deploy.

Someday, your impunity and arrogance will end.

Palestine will be free; she will be restored to her multi-religious, multi-ethnic pluralistic glory; we will restore and expand the trains that run from Cairo to Gaza to Jerusalem, Haifa, Tripoli, Beirut, Damascus, Amman, Kuwait, Sanaa, and so on; we will put an end to the Zionist American war machine of domination, expansion, extraction, pollution and looting.

..and you will either leave, or you will finally learn to live with others as equals.

An absolutely fantastic speech, full of truth, passion and a love of life and people.

One hopes such a brilliant piece echoes through the ears to everyone on this planet and brings an end to this monstrosity.

This is what people have to understand, it is Zionism, which is Fascism, Socialism and Communism all rolled into one package.

These Zionist don't even care for their so-called fellow Jews, running caste systems that came out of India, just like they did.

Please do not tar every Jew with the same brush, for they have been duped by this program as well.

The Jewish people not mired in Zionism, chosen ones and their book of not religion, but law called the Torah and the insidious racist book the Talmud, must stand with the other races to fight this blight upon us all.

The clock and in particular your clock is ticking rapidly towards your own destruction, stand up with us to end this menace once and for all.

This song is dedicated to Susan Abulhawa.

SCIENCE SECTION:

This again plays into the future world shows and has more than a few THI sentences and memes contained within it, one word in particular will be familiar to a discussion in the village last year.

Losing your mind looking at memes?

Are you spending hours scrolling mindlessly on Instagram reels and TikTok?

If so, you might be suffering from brain rot, which Oxford University Press has named its phrase or word of the year.

Oxford University saying that? Have they looked within? The creator of Tavistock all designed to reduce us and now they fill their time reminding us of what they did?

Remember Oxford University was heavily involved in the Covid scam as well.

Plus they along with their counterparts Cambridge, Analytics or otherwise, have played a key role for the elites, think tanks and dark ones.

It is a term that captures concerns about the impact of consuming excessive amounts of low-quality online content, especially on social media.

The usage saw an increase of 230% in its frequency from 2023 to 2024.

That is because they keep banning all of the relevant stuff.

Psychologist and Oxford University Professor Andrew Przybylski says the popularity of the word is a symptom of the time we're living in.

Brain rot beat five other phrases or words on the dictionary publisher's shortlist.

What is brain rot?

Brain rot is defined as the supposed deterioration of a person's mental or intellectual state, especially viewed as the result of overconsumption of material considered to be trivial or unchallenging.

Sounds more like school and the education system to me.

But you can also blame the social media giants in part for that, as they provided the platform.

But ultimately it is down to the people to discern better, act better and learn material of value, instead we saw a plethora of egotistical, seductress', party tricks, staged videos of accidents and the most tedious levels of interaction based upon look at me.

Tavistock and others may have created the environment for brain rot, but the people themselves adopted and ran with it.

With not an ounce of thought of, how does this really make me look?

Women often complain and in some cases rightly so, of men treating them as sex objects.

But one scroll through social media platforms and it is riddled with women and showing off their bodies.

But worse is, the amount of young and clearly underage girls titillating men the world over, all for likes and in many cases to collect money.

Never thinking for one second, that is prostitution.

It is completely contradictory.

The first recorded use of brain rot dates much before the creation of the internet, it was written down in 1854 by Henry David Thoreau in his book Walden.

He criticizes society's tendency to devalue complex ideas and how this is part of a general decline in mental and intellectual effort.

It leads him to ask: While England endeavors to cure the potato rot, will not any endeavor to cure the brain-rot, which prevails so much more widely and fatally?

One wonders what he would make of the present day, as clearly in the past people had a much higher vocabulary and were more expressive in their words and sentences.

Nowadays it is hashtags, acronyms and slang.

What other words made the shortlist?

This next word that made the list will raise the eyebrows of those in the village, after I lamented of the lack of it these days.

Demure (adj.): Of a person: reserved or restrained in appearance or behavior.

Of clothing: not showy, ostentatious, or overly revealing.

Being demure was part of women training and upbringing.

Dynamic pricing (n.): The practice of varying the price for a product or service to reflect changing market conditions; in particular, the charging of a higher price at a time of greater demand.

That is not dynamic pricing, that is outright theft.

Lore (n.): A body of (supposed) facts, background information, and anecdotes relating to someone or something, regarded as knowledge required for full understanding or informed discussion of the subject in question.

Romantasy (n.): A genre of fiction combining elements of romantic fiction and fantasy, typically featuring themes of magic, the supernatural, or adventure alongside a central romantic storyline.

The problem is, life has become a romantic fiction, due to a lack of love, and fantasy is the way people operate, because too few operate in reality.

Slop (n.): Art, writing, or other content generated using artificial intelligence, shared and distributed online in an indiscriminate or intrusive way, and characterized as being of low quality, inauthentic or inaccurate.

Slop or just shit, words made inorganic by a bot.

Oxford University Press, the publishers of the Oxford English Dictionary is not the only one to have a word of the year. Last month Cambridge Dictionary announced that manifest was its winner. How interesting, what are you going to create and what are you going to manifest springs to mind. The traditional definition of manifest included the adjective easily noticed or obvious, and the noun to show something clearly through signs or actions. It now includes to manifest in the sense of to imagine achieving something you want, in the belief doing so will make it more likely to happen. No shit sherlock, but word of caution, manifest must be used in a service to others not the self. And also you must have plenty of a certain P word – patience.

Collins English Dictionary also announced in November that its word of the year was brat, a word that has been everywhere over the last couple of months thanks to Charli XCX's viral album. Who???

Brat is defined as someone with a confident, independent and hedonistic attitude. Actually brat meant a child that was spoiled and demanded everything to be to their liking or wish. Funny how words change within a generation, all very Jewish if you ask me.

[Text by Thomas Williams is in bold]

Here is an interesting article from the science community, that still faces the problems of understanding what, how, when and where, because of the rigid models given to them, that clearly at this point do not make sense.

The headlines stated: Earth probably shouldn't exist. That's because the orbits of the inner solar system planets, Mercury, Venus, Earth and Mars are chaotic, and models have suggested that these inner planets should have crashed into each other by now. And yet, that hasn't happened. A proper scientist should pause here. And with proper scientist, I mean someone employing critical thinking and the scientific method. If the predictions of your model are demonstrably wrong, then your model is wrong, too. Review the data, and come up with another, better model - a.k.a. hypothesis.

New research published May 3 in the journal Physical Review X may finally explain why. Through a deep plunge into the models for planetary motion, the researchers discovered that the motions of the inner planets are constrained by certain parameters that act as a tether that inhibits the system's chaos. Besides providing a mathematical explanation for the apparent harmony in our solar system, the new study's insights may help scientists understand the trajectories of exoplanets surrounding other stars. How about an observation explanation instead of a mathematical one? What if your whole model is wrong and the planets don't orbit, but spiral? How can math make the original model work? It can't, so then why do they pursue it?

Unpredictable planets: Planet's constantly exert a mutual gravitational pull on each other and these little tugs constantly make minor adjustments to the planets' orbits. The outer planets, which are much larger, are more resistant to little tugs and so maintain comparatively stable orbits. The problem of inner planet trajectories, however, is still too complicated to solve exactly. In the late 19th century, mathematician Henri Poincaré proved that it is mathematically impossible to solve the equations governing the motion for three or more interacting objects, often known as the three body problem. That was 200+ years ago though, are they saying we haven't looked at the models since? Or in a different way since? Yet they tell you to trust the science!

As a result, uncertainties in the details of the planets' starting positions and velocities balloon over time. In other words: It is possible to take two scenarios in which the distances between Mercury, Venus, Mars and Earth differ by the slightest amount, in one the planets smash into each other and in another they veer apart. Well clearly by now they have worked out they are not about to smash into each other, so how about looking at things in a different way?

The time it takes for two trajectories with almost identical starting conditions to diverge by a specific amount is known as the Lyapunov time of the chaotic system. But Lyapunov died in 1918, has nothing changed since then?

In 1989, Jacques Laskar, astronomer and research director at the National Center for Scientific Research and Paris Observatory and a co-author of the new study, calculated the characteristic Lyapunov time for the planetary orbits of the inner solar system was just 5 million years. It means basically that you lose one digit every 10 million years, Laskar, told Live Science.

So, for example if the initial uncertainty in the position of a planet is 15 meters, 10 million years later this uncertainty would be 150 meters; after 100 million years, a further 9 digits are lost, giving an uncertainty of 150 million kilometers, equivalent to the distance between Earth and the sun.

Basically you have no idea where the planet is, said Laskar.

But we are observing in the now, not 100 million years ago.

Is it just me or is this ass backward thinking? They wouldn't know where the planet was 100M years ago to measure the distances, so why waste time trying to work it out?

While 100 million years may seem long, the solar system itself is over 4.5 billion years old.

Actually the solar system is not 4.5B years ago to my understanding, it ranges from 14.5 up to 23B year old.

The lack of dramatic events, such as a planetary collision or a planet being ejected from all this chaotic motion, has long puzzled scientists.

Then how do they explain the misnamed asteroid belt?

Laskar then looked at the problem in a different way: by simulating the inner planet trajectories over the next 5 billion years, stepping from one moment to the next.

He found just a 1% chance of a planetary collision.

With the same approach, he calculated that it would take, on average, about 30 billion years for any of the planets to collide.

By then we are told by scientists that we are all going to be fried by the expansion and ultimate ending of our sun in 5 Billion years.

Reining in the chaos:

Delving through the math, Laskar and his colleagues then identified for the first time symmetries or conserved quantities in the gravitational interactions, that create a practical barrier in the chaotic wandering of the planets, Laskar said.

These emergent quantities remain nearly constant and inhibit certain chaotic motions, but don't prevent them altogether, much like the raised lip of a dinner plate will inhibit food falling off the plate but not prevent it completely.

We can thank these quantities for our solar system's apparent stability.

Perhaps if scientists thought of a model with an aspect of divine planning, then surely the intelligent designer of our solar system would have put in place parameters for them to avoid each other?

Renu Malhotra, Professor of Planetary Sciences at the University of Arizona who was not involved in the study, highlighted how subtle the mechanisms identified in the study are.

Malhotra told Live Science that it is interesting that our solar system's planetary orbits exhibit exceptionally weak chaos.

In other work, Laskar and colleagues are searching for clues as to whether the number of planets in the solar system ever differed from what we currently see.

Yes there was 12, but that is a whole different tale.

For all the stability evident today, whether that has always been the case over the billions of years before life evolved remains an open question.

Or a closed question, as the answer might well reveal extra-terrestrial life beyond our planet.

MYSTERY SECTION:

Here is something of interest to us at THI, could it be part of an ancient language and peoples familiar to THI members, not so much to the rest of the world.

Archaeologists have unearthed a basalt tablet with inscriptions in an unknown language near Lake Bashplemi, in the Dmanisi region of Georgia. Although the tablet's exact age is uncertain, researchers believe it was created in the Late Bronze or Early Iron Ages around the first millennium BCE, based on related artifacts such as stone mortar and pottery fragments.

Made of local vesicular basalt, it measures 24.1 x 20.1 cm and records 60 different symbols, 39 of which have no exact equivalent in other known ancient writing systems.

The symbols, created using a conical drill and smoothed with rounded tools, reflect a high degree of craftsmanship.

A conical drill from over 2000 years ago? I thought everyone was just a hunter gatherer with no particular skills.

All according to the Jewish version of life on this planet.

Lake Bashplemi is located on a volcanic plateau surrounded by hills and fed by small tributaries of the Mashavera River.

The region is known for its wealth of archaeological discoveries, especially in relation to human remains dating back as far as 1.8 million years.

But I thought the Jews and the Catholic church said life only started here 6K years ago? Another lie more of the public should have gleaned to and then asked, what else are they lying about?

Researchers discovered ceramic fragments, a mortar stone and pieces of obsidian on the surface, indicating that the area may have had substantial human activity, even though it had not been thoroughly investigated from an archaeological standpoint.

The basalt tablet contains 39 unique symbols arranged in seven horizontal lines or registers.

Some of these symbols repeat, allowing for a total of 60 characters on the stone's surface.

The arrangement and frequency of some of the characters suggest that they may have been used to denote numbers or punctuation marks. Given Georgia is Rus land, one wonders was that the ancient Rus or Aryans?

[Text by Thomas Williams is in bold]

This is an interesting piece from Charles Hugh Smith, of the website called oftwominds.com

It echoes much of what is stated in THI and even has some THI memes and words contained within it.

That seems to be catching on more and more these days.

The article states:

The hope here is that facing the reality of moral collapse, frees us of the delusion that fiddling with technocratic financial abstractions and policy tweaks can reverse moral collapse.

Ours is a technocratic culture with a short attention span, and so problems and solutions are understood to be 1) technocratic and 2) instant.

Yes in a world of no patience, quick fixes are the forte, except those quick fixes just never worked did they?

Like putting a band aid on the Hoover Dam, it might hold briefly, but eventually it will all collapse, just like society is today.

The problem is something that can be distilled down to a spreadsheet, formula, algorithm or legalistic policy, and the solution is some modification of spreadsheet, formula, algorithm or legalistic policy: all our problems will go away if we just end the Fed, switch to cryptocurrency, tweak some laws, get rid of the bankers, eliminate an agency and so on.

These solutions will offer immediate relief.

The problems will start melting away the minute we modify the spreadsheet, algorithm, financial settings or legal code.

He is right they would offer immediate relief, but it is short lived.

As to change all of the above requires most of the people to change their thinking, actions and ways, that is where it becomes difficult.

The New Blueprint for Humanity will bring exciting changes of out with the old and in with the new.

But ultimately the new will only be better than the old, if the people themselves change.

But what if the problem is the collapse of integrity and honor, interesting choice of words.

A moral rot that has consumed the foundations of our social order? If this is the root problem, then technocratic-financial solutions are the equivalent of excising a wart from the big toe and declaring that as a result of this procedure, the brain cancer has been cured.

What if the problem is that everything we're cheering as progress is actually the opposite--it's anti-progress?

What if all the technocratic "advances" that are constantly being hyped as wondrous, are actually harming our physical and mental health?

Like I have said previously, we have had little to no advances in the past 100 years outside of IT advancements.

Which in overview are not advancements as they have always existed and are "introduced" here, when they can weaponize it.

Due to the energy monopoly, we have had no advances in all transport, apart from computerized parts.

So a product labeled as a veggie snack that's nothing more than fat-soaked, sugary potato starch is lauded because it's immensely profitable, a virtue gained by deceiving parents into thinking a veggie snack is a healthy snack.

That, this is a culture in moral collapse is obvious, but we dare not admit it.

That integrity and honor have decayed to the point of parody is equally obvious, but that too doesn't register in a culture attuned to novelty, profit, gadgets, legalese, techno-fantasies and technocratic "solutions" to problems that aren't even visible to technocrats.

Integrity and honor have, along with everything else, been commoditized into something we sell as a "product" or "enhancement."

Indeed, everything is commercialized, bought and sold these days, even body parts.

Operating too much in the material world, leaves less room for the spiritual world and soul developments.

Virtue-signaling has replaced actual integrity, and as the host of my latest podcast observed, the job of corporate CEOs is not to make quality products; their job is to elevate the corporation's stock price by whatever means are available, including hollowing out quality, reliability and durability.

The podcast is called Seeking a Culture of Honor and Integrity with Emerson Fersch and Amy LeNoble (59 min)

I agree on the virtual signaling, people will talk and pontificate all day, but will not take actions or provide solutions to fix the mess.

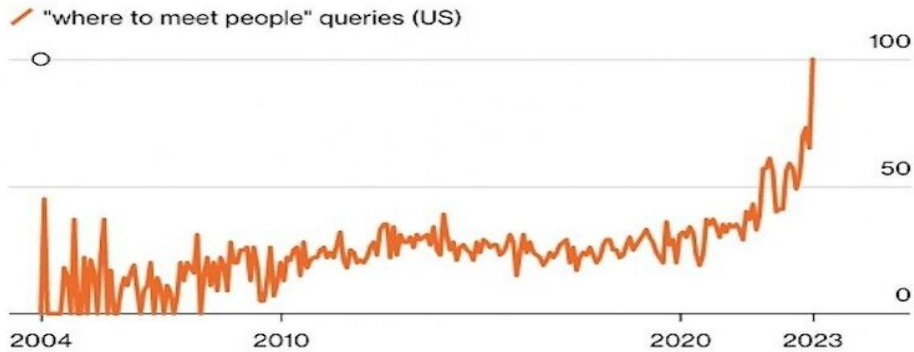

In this state of moral collapse, we look to centralized authorities to solve all our problems.

But the collapse of integrity and honor does not have a legal, financial or technocratic solution.

We have to reverse that collapse ourselves, rather than rely on centralized diktats from on high to fix what's broken. Before we get to the hope, let's first review reality. Here is loneliness--soaring.

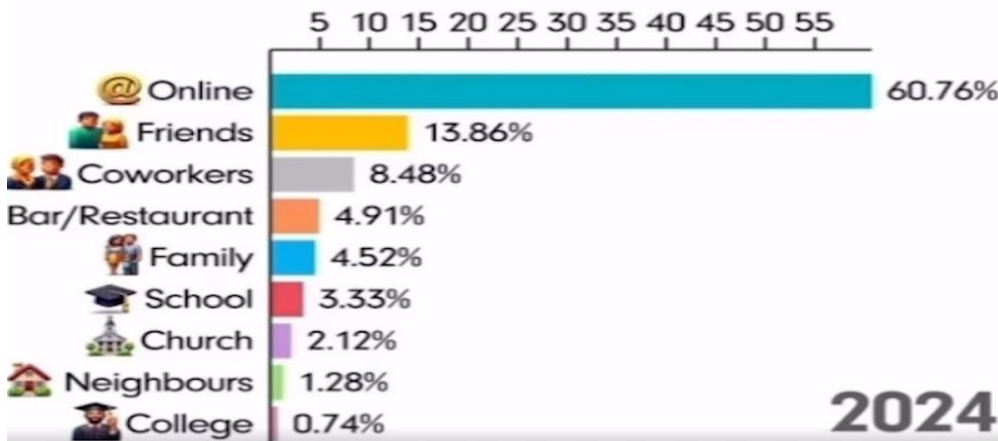

The Loneliness Epidemic in a Search Term

Google Trends show that interest in finding connection is at record highs.

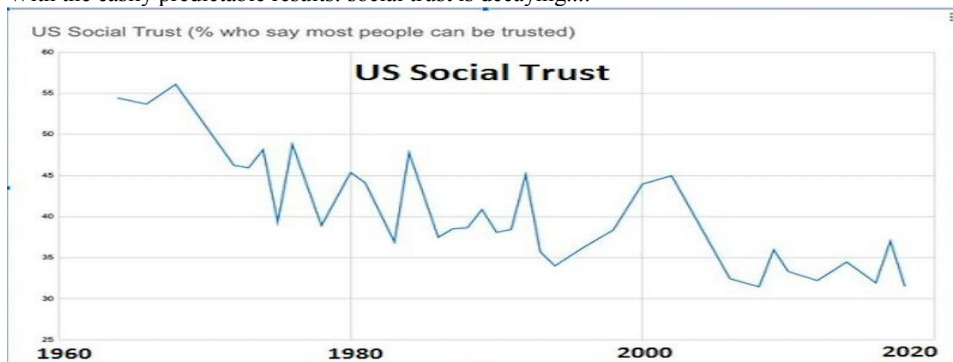

Here's a snapshot of our social contacts: now mostly online:

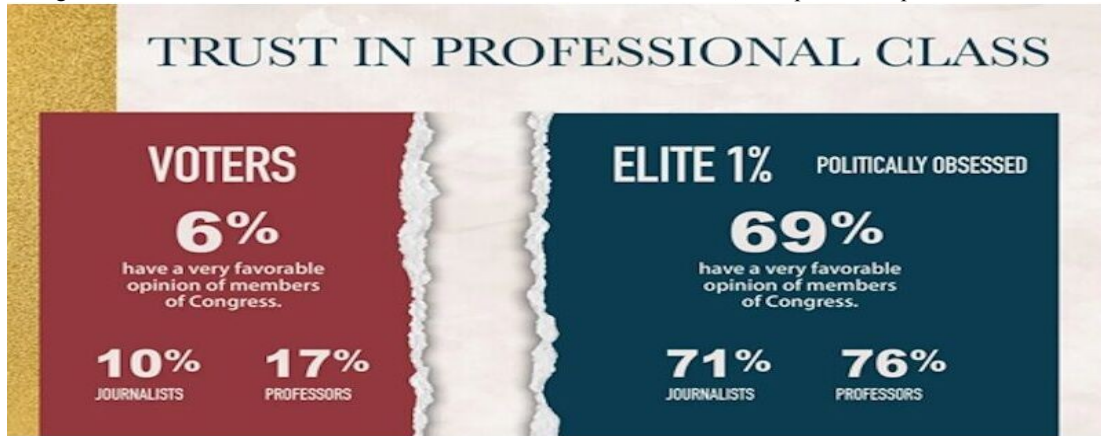

Sources of Social Contacts

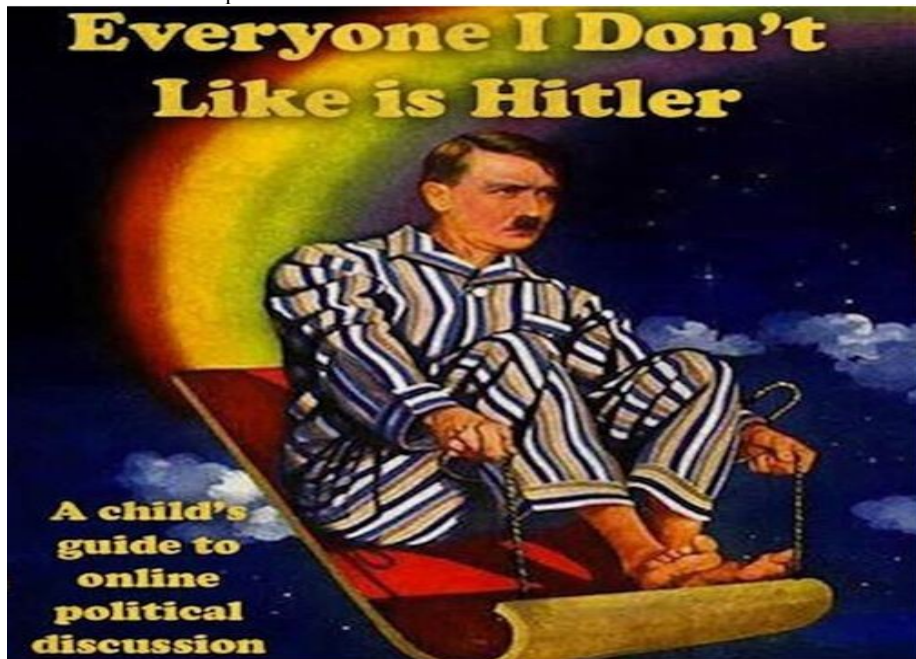

With the easily predictable results: social trust is decaying....

Along with the bottom 90%'s trust in institutions and centralized authorities, both public and private.

And we all know how positive online interactions are for our collective mental health:

Every one of these graphics depicts a social order in collapse, yet this truth is greeted with silence or delusional misdirection's and self-referential parodies being passed off as solutions.

Let's say we want a lifestyle stripped of denial, moral rot, techno-fantasies and technocratic delusions, a lifestyle of responsibility, accountability, integrity and honor.

Oops, sorry, that lifestyle is out of stock and we don't anticipate any reordering.

The hope here is that facing the reality of moral collapse frees us of the delusion, that fiddling with technocratic financial abstractions and policy tweaks can reverse moral collapse and Anti-Progress.

We are then free to see the problem is spiritual and cultural, realms that we change in our own lives, not by waiting around for central authorities, the state, Big Tech, etc. to fix for us.

We need a new way of living, not more gadgets and financial innovations.

A restoration of basic integrity and honor cannot be achieved by technocratic solutions, policies, crypto, apps, algos or AI, for the belief that these are solutions has blinded us to the decay and collapse of the foundations of the social order.

Yes, it's understandable that we all want a solution to the collapse of integrity and honor to be done for us by some new app or a new law, but that's like thinking the wart on the big toe is the source of the brain cancer.

Real social change comes from the ground up, not the top down.

A very interesting piece filled THI words, thoughts and actions, that from my perspective is enlightening that others are thinking different now and demanding that level of change.

The Assignment team have begun the process of contacting Charles to see if we can engage together and possibly have a podcast. Because I think we may provide him with the hope he is looking for, with The Blueprint.

This is an interesting report about frequencies, which THI has covered extensively particularly since 2020.

Is this indicative of what was said in past shows and presentations?

New research reports the most powerful cosmic rays ever detected.

Because the rays lose energy as they travel through space, their detection at high energies means they are likely coming from sources relatively close to Earth.

Scientists have detected the most energetic cosmic rays ever discovered, and they're being produced by mysterious sources relatively close to Earth.

The rays, which consist of electrons and their antimatter counterparts, positrons, were observed at energies all the way up to 40 teraelectronvolts (TeV), or 40,000 times the energy of visible light.

Spotted by the High Energy Stereoscopic System (HESS) observatory in Namibia, the rays lose energy as they travel through space due to their interactions with light and magnetic fields.

Quite why you would call your observatory Hess is beyond me, but then the Vatican telescope is called Lucifer.

This means that for rays of this energy to be detected, their sources must be relatively nearby.

Yet what, exactly, is producing them remains unknown.

The researchers published their findings Nov. 25 in the journal Physical Review Letters.

This is an important result, as we can conclude that the measured cosmic ray electrons most likely originate from very few sources in the vicinity of our own solar system, up to a maximum of a few 1000 light years away.

Which is a very small distance compared to the size of our Galaxy, corresponding author Kathrin Eggerts, head of experimental Astro particle physics at the University of Potsdam in Germany.

For comparison, the Milky Way is about 100,000 light-years across.

Cosmic rays are high-energy particles produced by the sun; stellar explosions called supernovas; rapidly spinning neutron stars called pulsars; and other, unknown sources.

Other unknown sources is all very open ended, one wonders if they do know and are frightened to reveal it.

When the rays smash into Earth's upper atmosphere, they break into showers of particles that are detectable on Earth's surface.

But reconstructing the rays that produced these particle showers is a painstaking and uncertain task.

So what are these rays or frequencies coming to Earth? Is it changing things? Is it interacting with things here on this planet?

Is there a connection to previous shows or words that is comparable?

What if you applied as above so below, will that bring you to your conclusion?

Perhaps there was a clue in BP episode 29?

Operation solar wind continues to bring in the frequency changes required on a global level, learn to embrace and integrate them.

ENDING PIECE:

Reminder of the shows coming up, with this being the last full THI normal show.

23rd December a tiny show of deep significance.

26th December will be end of the year Review Part 2

27th December possible mini THI update show.

2nd January there will be no show

9th January THI show.

16th January will be BP 36.

Last Sunday morning I was interviewed again by the Maverick Artist Victor Hugo.

We covered a vast range of topics, spat out brutal truth and laid a path forward for humanity.

Thanks to Victor for having me on his show.

The show done in two parts and will be posted on our website THI-show.com.

Victor is about to get a slot on Revolution Radio soon and has requested for me to be on that platform in the new year.

So, more extra shows are in the pipeline for the New Year.

Victor ended his show last Sunday with the words flow, we will do likewise.

Some will say nothing is sacred anymore, not on the external it isn't, but what is sacred is, you.

How are you going to help, prepare and develop you, and protect that what is sacred, is the key.

It is an arduous process we face and faced, it's a challenge, maybe the biggest challenge you will ever face, but with attitudes of I'm possible instead of impossible, it is not insurmountable, as shown in the giant strides of progress we have already made.

It requires fluidity, which is flexibility, and the fluidity is recognized by what is inside of you, water.

We are 70-80% water, and we can make our own oceans be angry and violent, or we can calm them like the rivers.

Water is streaming again inside you, those illusions you absorbed were for the purpose of creating dams inside of you, dams restrict the flow of water.

Water is source of life they say, and we are the only planet that has living water, subsequently you are the living embodiment of living water and the source spark within you.

The fluid movement water that is within you is, a river stream of thought, love and consciousness, love they say it is a river; I say let it flow.
